This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

Ls 57.290
B

HARVARD COLLEGE LIBRARY

C. SALLVSTI CRISPI

BELLVM CATVLINAE.

C. SALLVSTI CRISPI

BELLVM CATVLINAE

SALLUST'S

CATILINARIAN CONSPIRACY

EDITED BY

A. M. COOK, M.A.,

ASSISTANT MASTER AT ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL.

London:

MACMILLAN AND CO.

1884

[The Right of Translation is reserved.]

La 5.390
B
HARVARD COLLEGE LIBRARY
BY EXCHANGE
Feb 18, 1942

Cambridge:
PRINTED BY C. J. CLAY, M.A. & SON,
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

4352
53.10
.4

PREFACE.

THE text here adopted is that given by Professor H. Jordan, of Königsberg, in his second edition of 1876 (Berlin: Weidmann),—see p. xlvi. ff.

References to the authorities whose names are quoted will be found in the second index. Here I may mention one or two books to which I am especially indebted. The editions of Kritz and Dietsch are well known; not so well known perhaps is the excellent German commentary of Fabri (1845). What fruit the study of Sallust has produced of late years has to be sought chiefly in magazines and reviews. But my obligations are perhaps greatest to Jacobs and Wirz' school edition, and, of smaller school editions, to the pithy little commentary of Schmalz in the Bibliotheca Gothana. The compilation of Constans de Sermone Sallustiano (Paris, 1880) is of much service, especially as it gives an account of some papers on points of Sallustian grammar that are not accessible in London.

The references to the Jugurtha and the speeches from the Histories are to Jordan's edition; the references to the fragments, which Jordan does not give, are to Dietsch's edition of 1859—an edition, by the way, useful for its full, if not entirely complete and accurate, index.

I have followed, and even gone farther than, Merivale in making omissions in a few places.

Lastly, I have to thank Prof. Jordan for giving me information as to the readings of the manuscripts in one or two places where I had reason to suspect misprints in his edition; and Prof. Wölfflin for his courtesy in sending me a proof of his note on Catilinarius, which is to appear in the Archiv for the Thesaurus.

CONTENTS.

PAGE

1. Introduction: Sallust's Life, public and private—On his own antecedents—his moralizing—his view of historical writing—his reason for choosing the Conspiracy as a subject—his authorities—his mistake in antedating the rise of the Conspiracy—the true date of the Comitia in 691 (63) ix

2. Chronological summary of the Conspiracy . . xxiv

3. Scheme of Sallust's history of the Conspiracy . . xxviii

4. Remarks on Sallust's style: archaisms—colloquialisms—differences in the style of the Catiline and Jugurtha—list of archaisms and colloquialisms in the Jugurtha and historical books—brevity (ellipse)—monotony and variety—metaphor—alliteration—the historical infinitive xxxi

5. Notes on the manuscripts and text xlvi

6. Text 1

7. Notes 63

INTRODUCTION.

C. SALLUSTIUS CRISPUS was born in the year 668 (86) at the Sabine town Amiternum[1], of a plebeian family. Of his early life we hear hardly anything; but he no doubt went through the regular course of instruction of the time, and apparently with success, for he was inclined (so he tells us) as a young man to devote himself to literature. The attractions of political life proved however irresistible. After holding the quaestorship, he became tribune of the people in 702, and at once set himself in opposition to Milo and to the Pompeian party in general. In the year 704 he was expelled by the censors from the Senate on the pretext that he was leading a scandalous life. He then betook himself to Caesar's camp, and served in the unsuccessful expeditions against the Pompeian forces in Illyria. In 707 he was restored to the Senate by means of Caesar's influence, by whom he was sent to treat with the mutinous legions in Campania, where he narrowly escaped assassination. He afterwards followed Caesar to Africa, and apparently did good service there, for he was left in 708 in the new province as proconsul. Sallust returned from Africa in the next year, a very rich man, and built himself the house and laid out the celebrated gardens, where in after years emperors resided. After the murder of Caesar, Sallust, now 42 years of age, determined to abandon politics altogether and to return to the dream of his youth—literature. His first work was the Catiline (published in 712?)[2]; the Jugurtha followed. His last work was the Five Books of Roman History, of which only fragments survive[3]. He died in 719 or in the following year.

[1] A movement is now on foot, I believe, at Aquila, near the site of the ancient Amiternum, to erect a statue there, and to establish a library of MSS. inscriptions etc. having to do with Sallust's works.

Of Sallust's public career we have only an outline: of particulars of a kind with regard to his private life there is no lack[4]. According to all accounts his

[2] It was certainly written after Caesar's death (in 710), see c. 53. 6 ff.

[3] Most of these fragments are short and incomplete, and often no doubt loosely quoted. The only complete extant fragments are four speeches and two letters:—1. A speech of M. Aemilius Lepidus (father of the triumvir) 'ad populum Romanum' in 676 (78). It is directed against Sulla. 2. A speech of L. Marcus Philippus ad senatum in 677, against the above Lepidus. 3. A speech of C. Aurelius Cotta ad populum in 679—to quiet the people. 4. A speech of C. Licinius Macer tr. pl. ad plebem in 681. 5. A letter of Pompeius ad senatum in 679 from Spain. 6. A letter of king Mithridates to king Arsaces in 685.

[4] The best authenticated story against Sallust seems to connect his political hostility to Milo with a private scandal. Gellius (17. 18) M. Varro in literis atque vita fide homo multa et gravis, in libro, quem scripsit 'Pius aut de pace,' C. Sallustium scriptorem seriae illius et severae orationis, in cuius private life was bad. No doubt there is much exaggeration: allowance must be made for party spite, and for the satisfaction which rhetoricians have found in reckless defamation[5]. The truth perhaps may be that Sallust's life was not exceptional for excess in those disturbed times, and that we should not have heard so much about it, if it had not been for the marked contrast between the excuses he makes for himself[6] and his unsparing condemnation of others, historia notiones censorias fieri atque exerceri videmus, in adulterio ab Annio Milone loris bene caesum dicit, et, cum dedisset pecuniam, dimissum. The story is also mentioned by Servius on Verg. A. 6. 612, and by a scholiast on Hor. Sat. 1. 2. 41, who takes it from Asconius' life of Sallust, which is unfortunately lost.

[5] Lenaeus, a freedman of Pompeius, and after his patron's death a schoolmaster, revenged himself on Sallust, for describing P. as oris probi animo inverecundo, with great vigour. (Suet. de Gramm. 15.) What reckless defamation can do is shown by the writer of the invective of Cicero against Sallust, which appears in many editions of Sallust's works.

[6] In what he says of himself however in the prefaces to the Catiline and Jugurtha, Sallust is thinking perhaps rather of literary ornamentation than of autobiographical details, for he is only translating Plato's Seventh Letter. Cp. Νέος ἐγώ ποτε ἄν πολλοῖς δὴ ταὐτὸν ἔπαθον· ᾠήθην εἰ θᾶττον ἐμαυτοῦ γενοίμην κύριος ἐπὶ τὰ κοινὰ τῆς πόλεως εὐθὺς λέναι, καί μοι τύχαι τινὲς τῶν τῆς πόλεως πραγμάτων τοιαίδε παρέπεσον...εἶλκε...με...ἡ περὶ τὸ πράττειν τὰ κοινὰ καὶ πολιτικὰ ἐπιθυμία and ἐγὼ θαυμαστὸν οὐδὲν ἔπαθον ὑπὸ νεότητος, and again φερόμενα ὁρῶντα πάντη πάντως with C. 3. 3. The imitation is more striking in the Jugurtha, where S. borrows from the same letter further on. The curious sentence—3. 2 Vi quidem regere patriam aut parentes (it must mean 'parents' and not 'subjects'), quamquam et possis et delicta corrigas, tamen inportunum est, cum praesertim omnes between the looseness of his own practice and the severely moral tone of his writings. What right has he, contemporaries may be excused for asking, now that he has taken refuge in his luxurious palace, built on the oppression of the provincials, to scourge the private and public vices of the times?

Something of a consciousness that he was inviting such a retort, of a feeling that he could not say of himself what he puts into the mouth of Cato—qui mihi atque animo meo nullius umquam delicti gratiam fecissem, haud facile alterius lubidini malefacta condonabam—seems at times to show itself in the hard, sarcastic tone of his writing, a tone rather of violent irritability and disappointment than of genuine moral indignation.

The large infusion of moral reflections and judgments, however, from another and juster point of view, is a very important element in Sallust's work. Such moral reflections were necessary material to a rerum mutationes caedem fugam aliaque hostilia portendant—clearly comes from πατέρα—ἢ μητέρα οὐχ ὅσιον ἡγοῦμαι προσβιάζεσθαι and βίαν...πατρίδι πολιτείας μεταβολῆς μὴ προσφέρειν, ὅταν ἄνευ φυγῶν καὶ σφαγῆς ἀνδρῶν μὴ δυνατὸν ᾖ γίγνεσθαι, κ.τ.λ. Cp. Plato Crit. 51 c. and Cic. Ep. 1. 9. Jordan observes, that we can no more draw any exact conclusions as to Sallust's antecedents from under the veil which he thus throws over them, than we can infer from Horace's relicta non bene parmula anything but that he shared the rout of a defeated army. The two cases are not however quite parallel: the point of Horace's phrase lies in its being a reminiscence of Alcaeus; that S. would have borrowed from this letter unless it had fitted his own case exactly is doubtful. It must be noticed that the § 5 of the 3rd chapter is original in Sallust.

Roman writer who aimed at making historical writing a branch of literature, and this was the aim that Sallust was the first to set before himself and achieve.

The low state of Roman historical writing is often noticed by Cicero[7]. All history, he says, takes its rise in annals, but in Rome it had hardly got beyond its initial stage. Some writers in the past, it is true, had recognized the difference which separates history from annals,—Sempronius Asellio[8], for instance, but he is as tedious and inexperienced as the rest. Take the last and best of the class, Sisenna; his style is an improvement, but it leaves much to desire, and as for his history—it is puerile. In fact abest historia litteris nostris, and a Roman cannot read an Herodotus or Thucydides without shame. Sallust did not judge his predecessors so severely. He was not repelled by their bald brevity, nor did he regret, with Cicero, their want of tractus orationis lenis et aequabilis. He indeed admired the brevity of Cato, and had some sympathy with the archaic affectation of Sisenna, of whose diligence also he speaks with respect (J. 95. 2). But it is evident (from C. 8) that he too felt that nothing had yet been done by any Roman writer which would stand beside Thucydides. It was his ambition to supply the want.

[7] De Legg. c. 2, de Orat. 2. 12. 51 ff. Brutus 64. 228.

[8] In Gellius 5. 18 Annales libri tantummodo quod factum quoque anno gestum sit, ea demonstrabant...Nobis non modo satis esse video, quod factum esset, id pronuntiare, sed etiam, quo consilio quaque ratione gesta essent, demonstrare...Nam neque alacriores ad rempublicam defendundam, neque segniores ad rem perperam faciundam annales libri commovere quicquam possunt. He was born about 595 (159).

That could only be done by offering as complete a contrast to the tedious annalist as possible, and Sallust neglected no means of giving variety to his work. From Thucydides he probably borrowed the idea of his introductions, the imaginary speeches[9], and the character portraits[10]; from Cato the picturesque descriptions of the scenes of historical events, and the ethnographical digressions. And not only with the help of such exterior decorations does Sallust seek to excite interest, but in the handling of the facts of history he is at pains to bring out the general tendencies to which they point, to deduce from the past the causes which have led to the incidents he describes, to pourtray the moral condition of the times, to assign the motives which guided the actors in the drama.

With this abundant superstructure, it is not unnatural that we have often to complain that historical truth and accuracy tend to fall too much in the background, and that Sallust is more of a rhetorician than an historian. That, however, was not an objection

[9] The speeches, which in the Catiline take up almost a quarter of the whole book, in the Jugurtha occupy not more than a sixth. In the Histories, from which we have probably all the speeches, the amount must have been still further reduced.

[10] The portraiture of character is perhaps Sallust's strongest point. The contrasted portraits of Cato and Caesar in the Catiline have seemed to many writers, and not without reason, to form what was intended to be the kernel of the work.

which his contemporaries would have been inclined to urge[11].

Why did Sallust choose the conspiracy of Catiline for a subject? Mainly perhaps for two reasons: 1st, he would not be put to the trouble of consulting authorities, for he had himself as a young man been a spectator of the events (he was 23 at the time of Cicero's consulship), and he could rely to a great extent on his memory, and on what he could learn from the mouths of others. And, 2nd, the subject had been worked up and magnified with such exaggeration by the eloquence of Cicero as to make it just the theme that he wanted[12]. For Sallust's rhetoric delights in strong colours without light and shade, in thick deep strokes. But that Sallust's object was only to clear the memory of Caesar from any connexion with the conspiracy, as Mommsen declares, though there is much to be said for that view[13], is perhaps nevertheless [11] Quintilian 2. 18. 5 historiis quod ipsum opus in parte oratoria merito ponimus. Granius Licinianus, however, an historian in the second century, says Sallustium non ut historicum puto sed ut oratorem legendum. Nam et tempora reprehendit sua et delicta carpit et contiones inserit et dat in censum loca montes flumina et hoc genus amoena et culte comparat disserendo.

[12] To the first reason should be added perhaps—the example of Thucydides. The latter reason Sallust gives himself in C. 4. 4, nam id facinus in primis ego memorabile existumo sceleris atque periculi novitate.

[13] The theory that the work was intended to serve as an apology for Caesar would be much strengthened if it could be shown that Cicero's ἀνέκδοτα (ad Att. 2. 6. 2), or Private Memoirs, was published before Sallust wrote, immediately after not the truth. One is not inclined to think so ill of him, on the one hand, as to believe that he would willingly have falsified history to that extent, nor so well of him, on the other, as to think, although he had without question a sincere feeling of admiration for Caesar, that his critical and censorious nature would have allowed him to give way to such generous partizanship. Nor is there any reason to suppose that Sallust was in any way behind the scenes, or that he was aware of the occult connexion which, as it is now supposed, Caesar had with the earlier at least of these transactions. He had heard of course the suspicions and charges that were rife, but he, with his prepossessions, is not likely to have credited what was said by Caesar's enemies.

On what sources besides his memory did Sallust rely? From himself we hear nothing except that he had one remark from Crassus' own lips. No doubt Sallust must have read the writings of Cicero that bore on the subject, but it is very doubtful whether he had them before him as he wrote. It is true that one or two phrases remind one of something very like them in Cicero, but these may well be only echoes easily explained by the literary celebrity of Cicero's speeches. Some errors in Sallust's account at any rate can hardly have been made if he had had the invectives against Catiline and the speech for Murena before him[14].

Caesar's death, for Plutarch (Crass. 13) says ὁ Κικέρων ἔν τινι λόγῳ φανερὸς ἦν Κράσσῳ καὶ Καίσαρι τὴν αἰτίαν προστριβομενος, ἀλλ' οὗτος ὁ λόγος ἐξεδόθη μετὰ τὴν ἀμφοῖν τελευτήν. (P. is speaking of the second conspiracy, and is referring to the Memoirs.)

The most obvious mistake is the antedating of the meeting at the house of Laeca. Sallust seems to have fitted it in where it would be useful to himself, without examining the facts of the case[15]. But it is only one instance of the great historical perversion that runs through the whole monograph. Sallust makes no attempt to trace the development of Catiline's schemes. He introduces the conspirator breathing fire and slaughter from the first. Even from the time of Sulla, according to Sallust, Catiline had determined to make himself tyrant. This view, which no doubt the efforts of Cicero had been successful in making the popular view, suited Sallust's taste entirely. But he has not been skilful enough, nor was he unscrupulous enough, to clear away the improbabilities of a treatment which spreads the drama of a few months over a series of years. One cannot in reading Sallust's pages help asking oneself once and again, why, if Catiline's determination was from the first a headlong anarchical plot, he lays such stress on [14] According to the not improbable statement of Suetonius (de Gramm. 10) a certain Ateius Philologus furnished the facts for Sallust to work up. He provided him breviario rerum omnium Romanarum ex quibus quas vellet eligeret. On these probable reminiscences from the Catilinarian invectives see notes on 15. 2; 20. 9; 51. 9; 52. 35.

[15] Sallust felt perhaps that the story was getting improbable—so much vague preparation and so little definite action. It is to explain that that S. makes Catiline complain of his followers' ignavia, though it is not clear what they had failed to do.

attaining the consulship, and why there was such delay?

The truth seems to be, that when Catiline came back from Africa to sue for the consulship, his object was merely to pass a few democratic measures, for the relief of debtors for instance, as consul, and then to enrich himself and his friends in the provinces. But as matters went, he was for long the tool in the hands of men of more ability and influence than himself. And it was only at last, under the pressure of repeated disappointment, that the Conspiracy, with its violence, its military preparations, and incendiarism, was formed.

It is not necessary here to recount the whole story of the Conspiracy as we have received it, nor is it desired to discuss the many disputed details, or to attempt to decide between the conflicting views of the character of the movement. But one error of long standing as to the date of the consular Comitia of 691 (63) has been so satisfactorily set right[16] and the correction removes so many improbabilities in the history of the Conspiracy when it reached its acute stage, that a few lines may be usefully devoted to that question.

The orthodox view is that the 21st Oct. was the day originally fixed for the Comitia, and the 28th the day on which they were actually held. This view rests on a comparison of passages in the Murena and the Catilinarian invectives[17].

[16] By Dr C. John: Die Entstehungsgeschichte der Catilinarischen Verschwörung: ein Beitrag zur Kritik des Sallustius 1876 (reprinted from Jahrbücher f. klass. Philologie), whom I follow here and elsewhere. His views have received general support in Germany. Halm, for instance, in his last (8th) edition of Cic. in Cat. modifies his views in accordance with Dr John's criticism.

In the Murena (25, 50) Cicero relates how he laid before the Senate some of the utterances of Catiline in the election speech. The Senate resolved in consequence that instead of holding the Comitia on the following day, as had been arranged, a further discussion should be held as to these disclosures. At this second meeting of the Senate, then, Cicero challenged Catiline to give explanations. But Catiline made no defence, but said only that the State had two bodies, the one weak with a feeble head, the other strong but without a head—the strong body should not want for a head as long as he lived. The Senate was shocked, neque tamen (says Cicero) satis severe pro rei indignitate decrevit, and Catiline bounded out of the Senate-house in high glee. Cicero then goes on to speak of the day of the Comitia and of his famous shining cuirass.

From the first invective against Catiline we gather that, at a meeting of the Senate on 21st Oct., Cicero foretold that Manlius would be in arms on the 27th, and that the 28th was fixed for a general slaughter of the optimates. On that same 21st the Senate gave the consuls full power—a senatus consultum vehemens et grave.

It is supposed that the second meeting of the Senate spoken of in the Murena is the meeting of the [17] And not on other evidence. Sallust 26. 5 & 29. 2; Plutarch Cic. 14 & 15; Dio 37. 30 & 31, at any rate, all put the Stus. consultum ultimum after the election.

21st, and that the slaughter of the nobles which Catiline had fixed for the 28th is the same as the attempt on the day of election.

But these assumptions are surely incredible. The disclosures which Cicero made on the day originally fixed for the Comitia were clearly only about what Catiline had said at the election meeting. Can the senatus consultum which Cicero calls non satis severe be the same as the s. c. vehemens et grave of the invective? And can the caedes optimatium be the same as the attempt to murder Cicero and the other candidates? Is it possible that, after Cicero had foretold that the 28th was fixed for a wholesale slaughter, just that day should have been fixed upon for holding the Comitia? These among other considerations render it fairly certain that in the passages quoted four distinct occasions are referred to, (1) a meeting of the Senate on the day before that originally fixed for the Comitia; (2) a meeting on the day originally fixed for the Comitia; (3) the day on which the postponed Comitia were held; (4) a meeting of the Senate on the 21st Oct.

The difficulty of the combination has often been felt, and other dates have been given for the Comitia. Lange[18], for instance, suggests 23rd Sept. for the day [18] Römische Alterthümer 3. 241 (1871), relying on Suet. Aug. 94, quo natus est (Augustus) die, cum de Catilinae coniuratione ageretur in curia e. q. s., and Augustus' birthday is fixed (Aug. 5), M. Tullio Cicerone et Antonio coss. IX. Kal. Oct. But these passages are of little value for this question, as it is uncertain, 1. to what sitting allusion is made, 2. whether the date is given by the old or reformed calendar, and 3. if by the originally fixed, and some early day in October as the day on which, after a postponement, they were actually held.

But such a dating would be far from clearing away all difficulties. The proper time for holding the consular Comitia at this period was July[19]. How is it then that we hear nothing of this double postponement, a long one, from July to 21st October or other day about that time, and a shorter one, from that day to 28th October, unless it be that in fact the Comitia was after a short adjournment held in the usual month of July[20]?

Against that theory there is nothing but the consideration to which the orthodox view is presumably due,—the consideration namely that, if Catiline's preparations for open revolution had been latter to what date of the old calendar the date given would correspond. Mommsen has suggested a variety of dates in his different writings, from 20 Oct. to 4 Nov.

[19] Mommsen, R. S. 1^2. 565, note 3. John, 749 n. The consular Comitia can be shown to have been held before the end of July in the years 684, 693, 694, 696, 700, 703, 704.

[20] Putting the Comitia in July clears up many a little difficulty. For instance Mur. § 52, his tum rebus commotus, et quod homines iam tum coniuratos cum gladiis in campum deduci a Catilina sciebam descendi in campum cum firmissimo praesidio, etc. Can Cicero pride himself on knowing already on the 28th Oct. that there was a conspiracy? Clearly not, and the passage therefore has greatly troubled the commentators. But if the election took place in July there is no difficulty. How, again, can Cicero have argued that there was nothing very compromising in Caelius and others having supported the candidature if the election took place in the midst of military preparations for violence?

going on for a whole year and more, it is inexplicable why there was so much delay after the election. But that these preparations had been begun before the election, that the consulship was of so little importance in Catiline's plans, is quite a mistake of Sallust's. It would not perhaps be over-rash to take something of the following kind as being the truth.

Catiline had tried whether the support of the democratic leaders could get him the consulship in 690 (64). He found that it could not, that perhaps, on the other hand, it was an obstacle. When he comes forward therefore in the following year, he appears to have thrown off all his previous connexion with the democratic and anti-Pompeian party. It was in allusion perhaps to Caesar and Crassus that, in his election speech, he denied miserorum fidelem defensorem inveniri posse nisi eum qui ipse miser esset: integrorum et fortunatorum promissis saucios et miseros credere non oportere (Mur. 25, 50). He now came forward no longer as a representative of a political party and as the tool of others, but as the independent leader of a social following—the bankrupt and ruined[21]. He had not been remiss in his canvass,

[21] I follow Dr John here, not certainly without some misgiving, in suggesting that Caesar was not an accomplice in the conspiracy in the latter half of the year 691 (63). Mommsen's arguments to the contrary are not very strong in any case, but they lose much of what force they have, if it be true as here contended that Catiline's plans were completely changed in July and afterwards. That Caesar supported Catiline in 690 there can be little doubt (see the Fragments of the Oratio in toga candida and Asconius' comments), but it does not he had done everything, but he failed once more. His patience was now exhausted. To get the consulship, to achieve his aims in a regular way, was proved to be impossible. He determined on terror and anarchy. The rise of the Catilinarian conspiracy dates from the failure to secure the consulship for 692 (62).

follow that that support was continued, when Catiline rushed into senseless violence. (See however Cic. ad Att. 10. 8. 8, Plut. Crass. 13, Suet. Jul. 17.)

CHRONOLOGICAL SUMMARY OF THE CATILINARIAN CONSPIRACY.

A.U.C.	B.C.	MONTH OR DAY.
646	108		Birth of Catiline (if he was praetor 'suo anno').
			Many enormities are attributed to him during the reign of terror under Sulla—is quaestor and legate.
681	73		Accused of incest with the vestal virgin Fabia, sister of Cicero's wife Terentia.
686	68		Praetor.
687	67		Propraetor in Africa.
688	66	July	Returns to Rome to stand for consulship.
689	65	1 Jan.	Plot to murder the new consuls.
		5 Feb.	Second unsuccessful attempt.
			Piso is sent to Spain, and is murdered in the middle of next year.
		Nov.	Trial for misgovernment in Africa ends in acquittal.
690	64	July	Shortly before the election, Cic. delivers the Oratio in tog. cand.
			Cicero and Antonius elected consuls. C. unsuccessful.
			Some months after Comitia (possibly in next year) Lucceius accuses C. 'de vi' before Caesar. He is acquitted.
691	63		The year of Cicero's consulship.
		July	C. makes his election speech — the 'contio domestica'. Cic. calls the attention of the Senate to this speech on the day before the Comitia. It

A. U. C.	B. C.	MONTH OR DAY.
691	63	July	is resolved not to hold the Comitia on the morrow, but to discuss the state of affairs. At this second meeting C. makes the remark about the State having two heads. The Senate passes no severe resolutions, and determines to hold the Comitia in a day or two.
			The Comitia is held, and C. is again unsuccessful.
			During the next three months C. is busy with his military and other preparations — not unobserved by Cicero.
		20 Oct.	Crassus brings a warning letter to Cicero.
		21 Oct.	Meeting of the Senate. The preparations and designs of C. are unfolded and evidence produced. The consuls are given full powers. Generals despatched. Rewards offered.
		27 Oct.	Manlius raises the standard at Faesulae.
		28 Oct.	Intended 'caedes optimatium'.
			On one of the last days of Oct. the Senate hears of Manlius' doings.
		6–7 Nov.	Meeting of conspirators at Laeca's house.
		7 Nov.	Attempted assassination of Cicero.
		8 Nov.[1]	Meeting of Senate in temple of Juppiter Stator. Cicero delivers the First Invective against C., who leaves Rome that night.

[1] With regard to the date of the delivery of the First Invective, we know from that speech that the meeting at Laeca's was held the night next but one before the delivery of the speech. Cicero gives the date of this meeting in p. Sulla, 28. 52 quid tandem de illa nocte dicit, cum inter falcarios ad M. Laecam, nocte ea, quae consecuta est posterum diem nonarum Novembrium, me consule Catilinae denuntiatione convenit? where the expression p. d. non. Nov. must

A.U.C.	B.C.	MONTH OR DAY.
691	63	9 Nov.	Cic. delivers the Second Invective before the people.
			Some days afterwards news arrives that C. has joined Manlius; when the Senate declares them both enemies of the State. Antonius is to lead an army against them.
		2–3 Dec.	The Allobroges' deputation leave Rome at night, and are arrested.
		3 Dec.	Meeting of the Senate in the temple of Concordia. The conspirators are arrested. Afterwards the Third Invective is delivered before the people.
		4 Dec.	Rumour of intended rescue of the conspirators.
		5 Dec.	Meeting of Senate in the temple of Concordia. The Fourth Invective. Lentulus, etc., executed.
692	62	Jan.	Battle of Pistoria.

be surely a precise periphrasis for 'a. d. VIII. id. Nov.'—6 Nov. —the day after the nones. The speech then will have been delivered 8 Nov. The date also of the passing of the 'Senatus ultimum' will be 21 Oct., for Asconius (in Pis. p. 5), remarking on the expression vigesimum diem (in Cat. 1. 2. 4), says that this is round numbers for 18th, and his method in computation is not to count in the terminus a quo. It can hardly be doubted that the attempt to murder Cicero was made not many hours after the meeting at Laeca, and not postponed as Mommsen supposes. Why then did Cicero not call the Senate together on the 7th? Perhaps because he wished to leave the rumours of the murderous morning call, the nocturnum praesidium Palatii, and the urbis vigiliae to work awhile on the mind of the too-often incredulous Senate, and on the mind of the people. (In the Second Invective, 3. 6 superioris noctis means apparently only the former of the two nights, which after the speech in the Senate was familiar to everybody under that designation, and hesterno die in 6. 12 must be taken, not with interfectus sum but with detuli only).

AUTHORITIES. — The only contemporary authorities are Cicero and Sallust. The other, and secondary, accounts seem to come from one or other of these sources. Many writers have supposed that Plutarch and Dio copied from Livy; in that case Livy must have borrowed from Cicero. It is more probable that their authority was Cicero's περὶ ὑπατείας, which both mention: there, no doubt, they would find the incidents of Crassus bringing the consul letters on 20 Oct. and the 'shining cuirass,' which both record, etc. The accounts of Appian and Florus, on the other hand, come in the main from Sallust, without doubt. It does not appear, however, that any of these authorities relied entirely on one source. Plutarch, for instance, mentions the incident of the equites threatening Caesar as he left the Senate on 5 Dec., and how Curio and Cicero protected him, and adds, τοῦτο μὲν οὖν οὐκ οἶδα ὅπως ὁ Κικέρων, εἴπερ ἦν ἀληθές, ἐν τῷ περὶ τῆς ὑπατείας οὐκ ἔγραψεν (Caes. 8), that he did not take it from Sall. C. 49. 2 is clear, indeed there is no reason to suppose that he consulted Sallust at all. Suetonius, Jul. 9, has some interesting particulars about the first conspiracy, for which he mentions his (four) authorities.

SCHEME OF SALLUST'S HISTORY OF THE CONSPIRACY.

CHAP.

1—4 Preface.

5 The character of Catiline.

6—13 Digression on past Roman history, to show how such a character was possible. The decline set in after the fall of Carthage. Security bred avarice and ambition.

14—16 Catiline's followers: how they are trained to be as criminal as their leader.

---

17 Catiline summons his followers of all classes to an opening meeting.

18, 19 A previous conspiracy, in which Piso plays a leading part.

20 Catiline's speech to the conspirators.

21 He tells them what is to be gained by the movement.

22 They take an oath of fidelity.

23 Their designs are betrayed by Fulvia to Cicero,

24 who becomes consul. Preparations are begun for risings in Italy. Some women of bad character join the conspiracy:

25 among them a remarkable woman—Sempronia. Her character.

CHAP.

26 Catiline stands for the consulship in 63 B.C. other schemes of his are frustrated by Cicero. determines on immediate war.

27 Manlius and others are despatched to different part Italy. Catiline tries to arouse his followers to great activity at the Laeca-meeting.

28 Attempted murder of Cicero. Manlius raises recruits in Etruria.

29 The Senate pass the Sctum. ultimum, and 30 despatch commanders to Etruria and other parts.

31 Alarm in Rome. Cicero delivers his First Invective.

32 Catiline leaves Rome to join Manlius.

33—36 Catiline and Manlius try to deceive people as to their plans by letters. But the Senate, hearing the truth, declare the two public enemies.

37—39 Owing to the miserable condition of society, the effect of party strife, all the common people sympathize with the conspirators.

---

40 Lentulus tries to win over the ambassadors of the Allobroges to the conspiracy, 41 who however decide to give information to the government.

42 Premature outbreak of the conspirators in some parts of Italy.

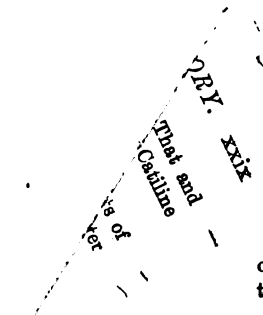
43 Plans of incendiarism and massacre formed by the conspirators in Rome.

44, 45 The ambassadors arrested as they leave Rome.

46, 47 The Allobroges and Volturcius reveal the plot to the Senate.

48 Altered feelings of the people. L. Tarquinius inculpates Crassus.

49 Attempt to get Caesar also accused of complicity.



he arrested conspirators frustrated.
decide on their fate.
t death.
h. (His proposal carried.)
uch men as these two speakers Rome owes its greatness. Their characters contrasted.
The principal conspirators in Rome are executed.

---

56 Catiline's military arrangements.
57 He attempts to escape, but is hemmed in between Metellus Celer and Antonius.
58 He addresses his soldiers.
59 Disposition of the forces of the two armies.
60 The Battle. Defeat and death of Catiline.
61 It was a bloody victory.

REMARKS ON SALLUST'S STYLE.

In ancient criticisms of the style of Sallust, it is, besides his brevity, his affection for Archaisms, taken from Cato, which, whether for praise or blame, is mostly insisted on[1]. These archaisms, however, as far as can now be ascertained, are hardly as numerous as one would be led to expect. It must also be observed that it is rather in the use of old words and forms, than in syntax, that Sallust affects antiquity, and more, as is natural and proper, in the speeches, direct or indirect, than elsewhere. Jordan, however, is going too far when he says, that the archaisms are confined to the speeches, and that while he chose to decorate his speeches with the tinsel of antiquated forms and expressions, when speaking in his own person, Sallust uses the language of an unaffected man of the world[2].

[1] Asinius Pollio: Sallustii scripta reprehendit ut nimia priscorum verborum affectatione oblita. Pollio also said that a certain Ateius Philologus antiqua verba et figuras solitum esse colligere Sallustio—a calumny surely. (Suet. de Gramm. 10). Augustus spoke of the words, quae Crispus S. excerpsit ex Originibus Catonis. Fronto, a warm admirer of the historian, calls him frequentem sectatorem Catonis. Quintilian quotes 'a well-known epigram': Et verba antiqui multum furate Catonis | Crispe Iugurthinae conditor historiae. Lenaeus (see p. ix n. 5) inveighed against Sallust as priscorum Catonisque verborum ineruditissimum furem.

The ancients, then, were struck mainly by the archaisms; in the present day, however, it is contended that Sallust's partiality for CONVERSATIONAL EXPRESSIONS is quite as marked. No ancient critic, I believe, notices this point, but that perhaps need not excite surprise or incredulity. Many words and expressions, of course, tend to drop out of literature but continue in the spoken language, so that the archaic and conversational often coincide. But nevertheless not only does Sallust use not a few words and expressions, archaic from the point of view of literature, which happened to be also part of the every-day speech of the time, but many words and turns, which have come direct from conversational language[3]. So much may be taken as fairly established. But when Wölfflin describes Sallust's style shortly as 'vulgar democrat's Latin'—that gives an exaggerated idea of the prevalence of colloquialisms in Sallust. Jordan once more strongly denies the justice of this description.

[2] The reader may be reminded of: -ere for -erunt, supplicia=supplicationes, perditum ire, hostem ferire from the C. not in speeches, but see the notes passim. Jordan gives no evidence except that according to him the forms—colos, odos, labos—were employed only in speeches, and that actutum, his conjecture in J. 102. 14, occurs in an indirect report of a speech. Jordan's language, which I quote, gives on the other hand a rather exaggerated idea of the archaic tone of the speeches.

[3] As samples may be taken: pergnarus, which occurs only in S. and Apuleius, portatio in S. and Vitruvius. Populares (=socii) must come rather from the sermo plebeius than the s. cotidianus.

No one, he says, could be farther removed from any tinge of vulgarity than this man of the world, who, though he had suffered shipwreck in political life, had found a very comfortable haven, and who spent his elegant ease in scourging the vices of the times. A contemporary writer, Jordan adds, could easily offer a great contrast to Cicero without drawing on colloquial sources, for the public speaking of the time, instead of corrupting the language (as the political speaking and the newspapers do now) with stereotyped and unmeaning phrases, served to maintain the language in dignity and elevation.

Certainly it is not necessary to suppose, because Sallust has many constructions which are not to be found in the writings of Cicero and Caesar, his contemporaries, that these constructions are taken from colloquial language. The rhetorical copiousness of Cicero was as little to Sallust's taste as his politics; his admiration of Caesar did not extend to the style of the Commentaries. But these writers had not a monopoly of cultivated language, and the style of history requires a vocabulary and phraseology of its own. Many words and constructions of Sallust's which are not to be found in Cicero and Caesar appear again in the polished prose of Livy. Many expressions also of a poetical colour are employed to give the required picturesque tone to the narrative.

There are archaisms and conversationalisms in Sallust's language; in its total impression, however, Sallust's style is neither affectedly archaic nor carelessly colloquial, but in the main—the man himself. His taste was, no doubt, formed on the writings of Cato, and he wrote with effort and elaboration; but his style is still the expression of the writer's character, direct, incisive, emphatic and outspoken, averse from qualifying refinements or intricacy of any kind[4].

Whether it be true, as is often maintained, that the peculiarities of his style grew upon Sallust, that in his Histories he indulged more often in archaisms and in bold and unusual constructions, is far from certain. Indeed the opposite is sometimes asserted. The fact is that we are hardly able to judge. The only complete remains of this work are the speeches, and we cannot, for the reason already mentioned, take these as representative of the whole book. The detached fragments are preserved mainly by grammarians, and are quoted not always with accuracy for some singularity of grammar. The style, however, of the Catiline and Jugurtha offers a few contrasts:—

Some words and constructions employed in the [4] Some writers (especially Poppo) have maintained that Sallust's style is largely affected by imitation of Greek constructions, taken principally from Thucydides. There has however been much exaggeration in the matter. The following nevertheless may be reasonably regarded as of Greek origin: J. 84. 3 neque plebi militia volenti putabatur, J. 100. 4 uti militibus exaequatus cum imperatore labor volentibus esset. The construction does not appear to occur in Latin before Sallust. Livy has it once 21. 50. 10, and Tacitus thrice.—J. 73. 5 in maius celebrare seems to come from Thuc. 1. 21. 1 ἐπὶ τὸ μεῖζον κοσμοῦντες.—Quintilian (9. 3. 17) quotes vulgus amat fieri as one of Sallust's imitations of Greek phrases, probably an inexact quotation of J. 34. 1.—In J. 84. 1, multus atque ferox instare, cp. Thuc. 4. 22 πολὺς ἐνέκειτο, though this adverbial use of multus is not rare in early Latin.

Catiline are dropped afterwards. Populares (= socii), for instance, is used only in the Catiline; tametsi—tamen occurs for the last time in J. 38. 9, and others. More words and constructions however are peculiar to the Jugurtha—e.g. loci (for loca), duum for duorum, quis for quibus (? C. 18. 1), quamquam very often, que—et, the phrase cum animo habere (reputare), the word ostentare; ceterum is far more common in the Jugurtha, so is uti before vowels; equidem gradually assimilates to the Ciceronian use (see p. 144).

Before passing from the question of archaisms and conversationalisms, I give a full, but not complete, list of such as occur in the Jugurtha; those that occur in the Catiline are mentioned in the notes. Actutum, a conjecture, but a certain conjecture, of Jordan's in 102. 14 (for ac tum), where it will occur (as in Liv. 29. 14) in reported speech. The word is common in Plautus, but soon got antiquated, though it occurs occasionally in poetry and in official terminology. Apud illum (= in illo) 106. 6 fuere qui dicerent manu vindicandum neque apud illum tantum scelus inultum relinquendum, a conversational phrase employed to imitate the soldiers' language. Conspicor 49, 4 passive. Cum = quod 102. 5 Rex Bocche, magna laetitia nobis est, cum te talem virum di monuere uti e.q.s. cp. Cic. Ep. 9. 14. 3 O mi Cicero, inquit, gratulor tibi, cum tantum vales apud Dolabellam. Dextumus 100. 2, an antiquated superlative. Diu in the phrase diu noctuque 38. 3, 44. 5. Dolet with the dative, 84. 1 dictitare...alia praeterea magnifica pro se et illis dolentia. Fide, dative 16. 3 (and in the Hist. requie, acie). Illim, Dietsch's generally accepted conjecture in 114. 2, is archaic for illinc. Loci often in the literal sense for the more classical loca. Ludificare 36. 2, 50. 4. The word is common in Plautus as an active verb, and afterwards, especially in this form, fell out of literary use. Cicero in his first speech p. Quint. § 54 writes si latitare ac diutius ludificare videatur, obviously for the sake of concinnity. It appears to occur only once again in Cicero and then p. Rosc. A. § 55 as a deponent. Malum =poena, 100. 5 Marius...pudore magis quam malo exercitum coercebat: cp. the well-known verse, Dabunt malum Metelli Naevio poetae. Plautus has verum tu malum magnum habebis, si hic suum officium facit. The phrase malum habebis occurs often, e.g. in Seneca. Modo in the phrase inpensius modo 47. 3, 75. 1, and in the Hist. avidior modo properandi facinus 'only more eager.' Nullo dative, 97. 3 rati noctem... et victis sibi munimento fore et, si vicissent, nullo impedimento—it may however be the ablative. Nave, 77. 3, an old form of naviter, used also by Plautus. Nequitur, 31. 8 quidquid sine sanguine civium ulcisci nequitur iure factum sit (speech of Memmius). Passives of queo and nequeo (cp. too potestur) occur in Pacuvius, Plautus, Cato, Terence, Lucretius. Observe too in the quotation ulcisci as a passive, as in Ennius and Liv. 5. 49. 3 omnia quae defendi repetique et ulcisci fas sit. Nisi has the sense of an adversative particle in 24. 5, 67. 3, 100. 5. Ocissume 25. 5, also in Terence. Partiverant (=partiti erant) in 43. 1. (So Sisenna used adsentio=adsentior). Pergere governs a case in 79. 5 iter pergere. Prosapia 85. 10 (Marius' speech) hominem veteris prosapiae. Cato has the same phrase. Cicero, Timaeus 11 et eorum, ut utamur veteri verbo, prosapiam. Quintil. 1. 6. 40 censures its use. In later literature the word is not infrequent, but always with vetus. Verbum 11. 7 = 'a remark,' as in Plautus and Terence.

Besides these words one or two constructions may be mentioned. The indicative in an indirect question 85. 3 neque me fallit, quantum...negoti sustineo—that is the reading of P. though Jordan reads sustineam, but perhaps the sustineo is not objectionable in Marius' mouth.—In the accusative with the infinitive, the future infinitive is indeclinable, esse being omitted. 100. 4 non tam diffidentia futurum quae imperavissent. Gellius 1. 7 quotes from Cato illi polliciti sese facturum omnia (see Kühner, Lat. Gram. 2. 39).—The gerund has a passive sense, perhaps, in 62. 8 cum ipse ad imperandum Tisidium vocaretur, the meaning being 'to receive orders.' Cic. Ep. 9. 25. 2 nunc ades ad imperandum vel ad parendum potius, sic enim antiqui loquebantur.—Scilicet with acc. and inf., 102. 9, 113. 3 are rather doubtful, but Or. Phil. 5 At scilicet eos...gratiam ab eo peperisse (Kühner 2. 515). The following phrases among others are regarded by Schmalz as colloquial: falsum me habuit 10. 1 (Micipsa loq.) = me fefellit: nihil ad vos 24. 6 (Adherbal's letter): ludibrio habitus 34. 2: pugnam facit 56. 4, a periphrasis for pugnare: caveret petere 64. 2: quod contra est 85. 22 (Marius' speech): haud secus difficilem 92. 4, a conversational litotes: sic habere 114. 2 Romani sic habuere ('held this view'). Cato has Maiores nostri sic habuere, and the phrase is common in Cicero's letters.

To these may be added a few from the Histories. Auxisse, Or. Phil. 6 intransitive. Gellius quotes Cato, eo res eorum auxit. Forus = forum (illum forum), and vadus = vadum (facilem vadum). Obsequela—per obsequelam orationis. Caesar B. G. 7. 29. 4 uses obsequentia instead. Other colloquial words of this termination are custodela, cautela, fugela, suadela, turbela. Percupidus, also in Cicero's letters. Potior with accusative (cuncta potiundi), so vescor (insolita vescentibus). Privus = without, privos militiae—the word occurs besides only in Apuleius in this sense, p. veras rationis. Quaeso: Classical prose uses only the forms 'quaeso', 'quaesumus', and these parenthetically. Sallust, however, besides the passages quoted in the note, p. 142, has in the fragments—Curionem quaesit ut concederet, and Ep. Mith. 1 quod quaesitur, satisne pium sit. The word, however, is rather solemn and formal than archaic or colloquial, according to Jordan. Senectus, an adjective, senecto corpore and senecta iam aetate, as in Plautus and Lucretius. Soluerat = solitus erat. Vis = vires acc.—so Lucretius.

The ancients were much impressed with Sallust's BREVITY[5]. Scaliger on the other hand professed himself unable to understand what was meant by it,—unless it were that Sallust proceeded in his narrative by a series of jumpy, jerky sentences, instead of by an even and periodic style; but the distance to be traversed, he continues, is not thereby reduced, nor the speed increased. And certainly an author who begins the history of this short-lived conspiracy with a comparison of the bodily and spiritual powers of man, and who is continually on the look-out for the chance of a digression, takes an unnecessarily long start, and is in no great hurry. But it is of course just to this abrupt unperiodic style of writing that Sallust owes his reputation for brevity. Rugged and disjointed Sallust sometimes is, but his abruptness is seldom careless or accidental, and is more often than not highly effective. Every page would supply an example; but such a pair of sentences as the following may have been in Quintilian's mind when he spoke of Sallust's immortalis velocitas. Jugurtha sends some soldiers to murder Hiempsal—qui postquam in aedis inrupere, divorsi regem quaerere, dormientes alios alios occursantis interficere, scrutari loca abdita, clausa effringere, strepitu et tumultu omnia miscere, cum interim Hiempsal reperitur occultans se tugurio mulieris ancillae, quo initio pavidus et ignarus loci perfugerat. Numidae caput eius, uti iussi erant, ad Iugurtham referunt (J. 12. 5)—'perfugerat, a pause, and then the bloody corpse of the Greek stage'. The other sentence is:—tum spectaculum horribile in campis patentibus: sequi fugere occidi capi, equi atque viri adflicti, ac multi volneribus acceptis neque fugere posse neque quietem pati, niti modo ac statim concidere...(J. 101. 11). The description is imitated in all probability from Thucydides[6], and indeed the influence of Thucydides is very noticeable in Sallust's writings, alike in matter and in form. His countrymen ventured to pronounce Sallust equal if not superior to his Greek model, both as a writer and as an historian. To such a position Sallust has no claim, but to have been in his turn a model for Tacitus is no slight merit[7].

[5] Favorinus (in Gell. 3. 1) calls him subtilissimum brevitatis artificem. Quintilian speaks of immortalem illam Sallustii velocitatem. Seneca, the elder, thinks he surpassed Thucydides himself in brevity. Seneca, the younger, says Sallustio vigente amputatae sententiae et verba ante expectatum cadentia et obscura brevitas fuere pro cultu.

[6] That the sentence is borrowed from Thuc. 7. 75. 3 is ren-

Under this head I give a few examples of ELLIPSE. In the omission of the parts of sum, Sallust is bolder than any writer except Tacitus. Est, sunt, erat, erant are often omitted, whether used as copula or absolutely, both in dependent and principal sentences, especially in descriptions of places, battles, and characters. There are instances also of omission of sum, sumus, sit, fuerit, esset, fore. Esse is always omitted after putare, pati, videre and often after reri. When esse dered probable by the close resemblance of J. 60. 1—4 with Thuc. 7. 71, 2—4.

[7] Tacitus' familiarity with Sallust's writings is shown by his imitation of several phrases (Dräger, S. u. S. des Tacitus, p. 125). He calls Sallust 'the most brilliant of Roman historians.' I may add here a word as to Livy's opinion of him, as it has to do with imitation. Seneca Contr. 9. 1, 14 says, 'Titus autem Livius tam iniquus Sallustio fuit,' that he criticized his phrase 'res secundae mire sunt vitiis optentui (Or. Lep. 24) as an imitation, and a bad imitation, of Thucydides' (though by the way it is not Thucydides, but an inexact quotation from Demosthenes) δειναὶ γὰρ αἱ εὐπραξίαι συγκρύψαι καὶ συσκιάσαι τὰ ἐκάστων ἁμαρτήματα. Seneca puts Livy's low opinion of Sallust down to jealousy. If he could show, says Seneca, that Thucydides was superior to Sallust, Livy thought that it would be an easy thing to establish his own superiority to Thucydides. If it be true, however, that Livy was not among Sallust's admirers, the difference of temperament of the two writers would sufficiently explain the fact.

is to be taken absolutely it is seldom left out, but Or. Lep. 24 cum...praemia penes paucos intellegerent. A pronoun subject to an infinitive is wanting in Ep. Mith. 22, teque illa fama sequetur, auxilio profectum... latrones gentium obpressisse. Se is rarely omitted in a single acc. with inf.; in the C. only in 22. 2, 56. 5 (?). A verb dicendi has to be supplied from, queri C. 43. 3; mittunt litteras J. 25. 5; polliceri C. 21. 2; (cp. J. 17. 3 in divisione orbis terrae plerique in parte tertia Africam posuere, pauci tantum Asiam et Europam esse). A verb has to be supplied in a different tense: C. 47. 2 Cinnam atque Sullam ante (fuisse), se tertium esse; J. 81. 1 tum sese, paulo ante Carthaginiensis, item regem Persen, post uti quisque opulentissumus videatur, ita Romanis hostem fore; Or. Macr. 7 itaque concessere illuc omnes, at mox...ad vos plerique (concedent); C. 52. 20 quippe maior copia nobis quam illis (i.e. maioribus) est (=nobis est quam illis erat). Some examples of zeugma are given in the note to C. 51. 7.

Sallust's style offers great contrasts of MONOTONY and VARIETY. Not a few words recur with tiresome frequency, sed, ita, itaque, igitur, ad hoc, praeterea, agere, agitare, praeceps, bonae, (malae) artes, per with abstract nouns; and others. An unusual word too and phrase that occurs to the writer is often reproduced shortly afterwards. Quo minus, for instance, occurs only thrice altogether, but twice in C. 51. 37 and 41. The phrase C. 32. 1 insidiae consuli procedebant is repeated in the next section, so naturam vincere J. 75. 2, 76. 1 (Kühnast makes the same remark about Livy, p. 88 n., and indeed it is not unnatural). Occasionally a bold construction is due to fondness for concinnity, e. g. J. 69. 3 civitas magna et opulens cuncta poenae aut praedae fuit—poenae esse does not occur elsewhere; J. 33. 4 Romae Numidaeque facinora eius memorat; J. 48. 4 ea (loca) consita arbustis pecore atque cultoribus frequentabantur.

But far more noticeable than his affection for certain words is Sallust's striving after variety (Quintilian 10. 3. 8 manifestus est etiam ex opere ipso labor). He may be regarded as the leader in the revolt against Ciceronian concinnity, the correspondence and balance of phrase and construction—a movement which Livy and Tacitus developed still further. This variety is remarked on in the notes, but a few instances are here put together for convenience—(1) The use of different forms: plebs and plebes, inermus and inermis, vulgus both masculine and neuter, quibus and quis. (2) Combination of singular and plural: J. 48. 3 collis...vestitus oleastro ac murtetis; J. 57. 4 glande aut lapidibus pugnare. (3) Alteration of a stereotyped phrase: J. 104. 5, 111. 1, senatus et populus Romanus; C. 53. 2 domi militiaeque, mari atque terra (terra marique). (4) The coupling of per ambitionem (or other abstract noun) with adverbs and modal ablatives. (5) Varied constructions: C. 33. 1 plerique patriae sed omnes fama atque fortuna expertes sumus. J. 74. 3 Romani signorum et armorum aliquanto numero, hostium paucorum potiti. J. 97. 3 rati noctem ...et victis sibi munimento fore et, si vicissent, nullo impedimento (? abl.). J. 103. 7 quae aut utilia aut benivolentiae esse credebant. Or. Lep. 2 homines maxumi nominis optumis maiorum exemplis. H. 1. 75 (Pompeius) oris probi animo inverecundo. J. 7. 4 ut nostris vehementer carus, Numantinis maxumo terrori esset. J. 98. 7 ea cuncta Romanis...facilia visu magnoque hortamento erant. J. 5. 4 cuius in Africa magnum atque late imperium valuit. J. 100. 2 Sulla cum equitatu apud dextumos, in sinistra parte A. Manlius cum funditoribus et sagittariis, praeterea cohortis Ligurum curabat. J. 32. 3 fuere, qui auro conrupti elephantos Iugurthae traderent, alii perfugas vendere, pars ex pacatis praedas agebant. Good instances in the Catiline will be found in 5. 9, 17. 6.

Ateius Philologus warned Asinius Pollio against Sallust's boldness in METAPHOR (audaciam in translationibus). The caution was hardly necessary. The commonest metaphor is the word praeceps with ire (abire, agi, dari). Of others a few examples follow: C. 10. 6 post ubi contagio quasi pestilentia invasit (cp. C. 36. 5 etc.). J. 72. 2 formidine quasi vecordia agitari (repeated J. 99. 3). Or. Phil. 9 neu patiamini licentiam scelerum quasi rabiem ad integros contactu procedere—metaphors from disease are very common. Or. Phil. 12 videmini tanta mala quasi fulmen optare se quisque ne attingat, sed prohibere ne conari quidem. C. 52. 35 Catilina cum exercitu faucibus urget; id. 24 dux hostium cum exercitu supra caput est. Or. Macr. 21 differunt vos in adventum Cn. Pompei, quem ipsum ubi pertimuere, sublatum in cervices suas ('quasi servi lecticarii dominum'), mox dempto metu lacerant; id. 6 (pauci) aerarium exercitus regna provincias occupavere et arcem habent ex spoliis vostris.

ALLITERATION plays a great part in Sallust's style, and serves perhaps to give a slight archaic tinge. In the best prose its use is more and more narrowed to a few stereotyped formulae, and even for employing these Cicero often apologises with an ut aiunt. The following occur in the Catiline, some of them more than once. Clades atque calamitas: convicti confessique: fama atque fortuna: fides—fortuna: flagitium—facinus: fluxus atque fragilis: foeda atque formidulosa: fortis fidosque: irati infensique: laetitia atque lascivia: lubido—luxuria: magna atque magnifica: mansuetudo atque misericordia: maria montesque: modus —modestia: multus et magnus: mutari ac misceri: portenta atque prodigia: pudorem—pudicitiam: tutae tranquillaeque: vas aut vestimentum: vultu — voce: 21. 1 quieta movere magna merces videbatur: 20. 10 viget aetas, animus valet: 3. 2 quae sibi quisque facilia factu putat aequo animo accipit, supra ea veluti ficta pro falsis ducit: 11. 5...quo sibi fidum faceret contra morem maiorem luxuriose nimisque liberaliter habuerat. A sort of pun seems intended in J. 43. 1 Post Auli foedus exercitusque nostri foedam fugam.

The HISTORICAL INFINITIVE is found in Plautus, Terence, Cicero, Caesar (in the Bell. Gall. but not in the Bell. Civ., if Dräger is right), but Sallust first makes an extensive use of it. Afterwards it is common in Livy and Tacitus and other writers, but by no writer is it so often, and perhaps so successfully, applied, as by Sallust. It is calculated that one in every sixteen verbs is in the historical infinitive. The following points then with regard to Sallust's use of it may be worthy of note. (1) Its function is to give a sort of kaleidoscopic picture, to describe a busy and quickly shifting scene; and accordingly it was far more common than not for a succession of infinitives to be used (in J. 66. 1, eleven). Single historical infinitives however occur—often to give variety of construction. (2) When, as generally the case, more than one infinitive is employed, a summing-up sentence is generally added, the verb of which is (a) sometimes another historical infinitive, e.g. C. 14. 6, where the sentence is introduced by postremo (in other cases prorsus ita denique are found); (b) sometimes an imperfect indicative, e.g. C. 25. 5 prorsus, C. 60. 4 without any introductory adverb. [In J. 65. 5 an historical infinitive sums up after finite verbs.] (3) The verbs—more often than not intransitive verbs or transitive verbs used absolutely—express generally some external action, or, if they denote a feeling, it is generally manifestations of feeling. Posse however is found in C. 25. 5, J. 67. 2, 69. 2 and the copula is sometimes found C. 20. 7, fieri 38. 1. (4) The subject is naturally never in any writer the second person. The first person is however sometimes found Ter. Eun. 411 ego non flocci pendere, illi inuidere; Cic. Verr. 2. 77. 188 clamare omnes...ego instare. Att. 2. 12. 2 ego negare. In Sallust it is always third person, and (a) rarely, no subject is expressed: C. 12. 2, J. 101. 11; (b) a single subject is generally used, though it is sometimes broken up into pars—alii, etc. (5) In J. 98. 2 Sallust uses the hist. inf. after cum tamen, and cp. J. 70. 5, 100. 4. Livy has it after cum interim in 3. 37. 6. Tacitus does not scruple to use it freely in subordinate clauses. (6) It is rare for the hist. inf. to be introduced by the pluperfect; C. 13. 3; J. 64. 5. (7) The inf. is sometimes, but not often, passive: C. 10. 6 vindicari, 27. 2 fatigari.

NOTES ON THE MANUSCRIPTS AND THE TEXT.

Owing probably to the favour with which the Fathers (especially St Augustine) regarded Sallust's writings, we have an exceptionally large number of manuscripts, about fifty, I believe. A start was first made in determining in a methodical way the relative value of this mass of manuscripts by C. L. Roth in 1854. Some of the MSS. have a gap of several chapters towards the end of the Jugurtha. Taking this, and some other slighter omissions, for his criteria, Roth divided the MSS. into three classes, thus:—I. Those which omit J. 103. 2 after necessariorum to J. 112. 3, where they resume with pacem vellet. II. Those which have this matter. III. Those which, besides the filling in of this large lacuna, have certain other sentences, omitted by both the preceding classes. These are J. 44. 5 sed neque muniebantur ea... (though the words vary much), J. 21. 4 de controversiis suis iure potius quam bello disceptare, and C. 6. 2 ita...erat (or est).

The MSS. of the first, and of course oldest class, belong to the 10th century; those of the second to the 11th; while those of the third belong to the 14th, and are therefore of not much account[8].

[8] Nothing has suffered so much in the constant copying as the order of words. In an Ashburnham MS. which I have

That the MSS. of the two first classes come (as has been shown for other authors) more or less directly from one and the same manuscript is almost certain. The following is a neat indication of this. In J. 103. 2, a line or two before the big lacuna, the mass of the manuscripts have a senseless feliciter (which is altered in some to a hardly more satisfactory flectitur). According to Kortte's certain conjecture, it is a gloss, put by the writer or reader of the original manuscript, who thus expressed his satisfaction at the turn things were then taking for the Romans, or, more probably, thus solemnly noted the conclusion under the circumstances of the work. (Cp. the title of the Oratio 'ad Caesarem...de republica incip. felicit.')

From what source the missing chapters were supplied in the MSS. of the second class it is impossible to decide. The loss of them cannot have happened at a very early time, for a grammarian of the 5th century quotes from them: they appear again in MSS. of the 11th century. The MSS. which contain them hand them down to us in so peculiarly corrupt a state, and with so many variants, that, if they were supplied by the recovery of the lost sheets of the original MS., these particular sheets must have been written in some very illegible way or have been much injured. It is more likely that another, a very ill-written and corrupt but complete MS. came to light in the 11th century, and that the writers of the inter-looked at I found, for instance, the following version of C. 35. 1 exemplum earum litterarum est scriptum infra Lucius Catilina mittit salutem Quinto Catulo egregia tua fides cognita mihi grata re tribuit fiduciam meae commendationi in meis magnis periculis.

polated MSS. filled in the lacuna from it. Both these things may of course have occurred.

In the critical edition of Dietsch, which appeared in 1859, the classification of the MSS. proposed by Roth was accepted, and the oldest MSS. were given something of the authority they deserved. But, unfortunately, it was found by Jordan and Wirz that the collation of the two or three of the oldest MSS. was far from correct. At the present time, not all the MSS. of the first class have been collated; but Jordan has done a great service in determining which of the oldest MSS., as far as they are known, are of the most importance. The chief result at which he has arrived is, that the oldest MS. we have is also the best, that it is the main foundation on which the text must be built[9]. The accuracy of the recension of this MS., which Jordan gave out in 1866, has, in all material points, been abundantly established by Wirz, who had previously collated it, and by others.

This leading MS., which belongs to the tenth, or perhaps to the ninth century, is preserved at Paris, and is generally known as 'Sorbonianus 500'[10]. Its sign is P. The merits of this MS. will, I hope, be sufficiently shown by the critical notes. But it must not be supposed that it is a carefully written or consistently correct manuscript. The writer was a somewhat illiterate person, it is clear. He gives us for instance inuentus simulachelli (for iuventus simul ac belli), quem censores senatu (that word added above the line) probri gratia amauerant, and Piso adulescens nobilissimae audaciae, and other things of the same kind. But the MS. from which he copied was no doubt a difficult one to read. As obvious mistakes have not as a rule been chronicled in the notes, a few words may be said on this not unimportant subject[11]. Many slips the writer himself corrected, and others were put right by a somewhat later hand; but many remain. Of these a large number fall under the following heads:—(a) words are sometimes wrongly divided, either in the way of running separate words together, or by splitting up one word into two: (b) words are lengthened by putting in a syllable in the middle: (c) words are shortened by omission of a syllable: (d) wrong terminations are put to words.

[9] I take the liberty of quoting a sentence from a letter with which Prof. Jordan has favoured me. "Post emissam editionem secundam contuli aliquot codices; interque eos unum quem adhuc nemo totum excusserat, Vaticanum 2904: sed tamen ut inde vix quicquam bonae frugis domum rettulerim."

[10] The MS. originally belonged to the library of Richelieu. It is now in the Bibliothèque Nationale (Fonds Latin 16024). The words ante diem in J. 113. 3, owing to mutilation, are the last decipherable words of the MS.

[11] Of these errors I give a few examples, choosing mainly such as have not been corrected at all or very unsuccessfully:—a) wrong division: exulanas (for : ex Sullanis), simulachelli (simul ac belli), nobilissimae (nobilis summae), ideo (id adeo), minoresunt (minores sunt), suam et (suamet), fugere aut (fugerant), illecon sumerat (ille censuerat), formi dolosa (formidulosa)—b) lengthening: astitutiae (astutiae), consultando (consulto), meminimus (Memmius), vectigales (vigiles), proeliarentur (proeliantur)—c) shortening: dissili (dissimili), primum (plurimum), libertate (liberalitate), ples (plebes), obsidet (obsideret)—d) wrong terminations: foret (fore), agere (ageret), rapiebat (rapiebatur), peterentur (peterent) etc., maxumas hostias copias (m. hostium c.), domos suos (d. suas), etc.

The mistakes of the MS. P^1 (to be mentioned below) are of a similar character, and they suggest perhaps certain conclusions as to the character of the MS. from which they both come. In that MS. it would seem words were not divided from one another, and abbreviations were often used for the terminations of verbs and nouns and also for middle syllables[12]. It may be added that the constant mistakes between a and u, and sometimes between f and s, show that the original was in cursive character.

Another important and peculiar MS. is preserved in the Vatican Library at Rome—Vaticanus 3864 (V). It is of about the same date as P. Of Sallust it contains the speeches and letters from the Catiline and Jugurtha, four speeches and two letters from the Histories[13], and also a speech and letter 'ad Caesarem senem de republica'—both of them undoubtedly spurious. The corrector of P agrees with V in the parts they have in common, and perhaps this second hand (p) took these corrections from V. The variations between P and V are mainly in the order of the words; and, while in the genuine speeches V gives a later spelling (optimus vulgus vult etc.), in the speech and letter to Caesar we find e. g. Illei, ignarei, [12] I gratefully acknowledge here my obligations to P. Klimscha's Sallustianische Miscellen. 1882. He is of opinion that such mistakes as magorum (maiorum), agebat (aiebat), regi (rei), gemebat (hiemabat) point to some parts at least having been dictated.

[13] Has V preserved all the speeches of the Histories? Jordan thinks so. The number seems small, but the ethnographical discussions and geographical descriptions would supply a good deal of ornamentation.

tuei, mortaleis (acc.), formeidatur. It is conjectured then that V is copied directly or not from an old school-reader, the compiler of which—in the times of the Antonines probably—altered spelling and order of words[14] and made some other alterations for school purposes, while in the spurious compositions, of which he was perhaps himself the author, he employed what he not always rightly understood to be the spelling of Sallust's time. (There seems to have been a similar collection of speeches from Livy. Suet. Dom. 10.)

The above are the only MSS. whose readings Jordan quotes separately. Of the manuscripts which fall under the head C (i. e. ceteri codices)—some or all of the MSS. of the first which have been collated—the most important is another Paris MS. of the 10th century, later, but not much later than P, with which it generally agrees. Wirz, its collator and champion, claims for it that in not a few places it gives us the right reading, for instance, in 7. 7 possum, and 51. 15 severior. I have sometimes added its readings under the title sign of P^1 on the authority of Wirz.

The best of the MSS. of the second class is a Munich MS. of the 11th century (Monacensis. lat. 14477), useful chiefly for filling in a part of the lacuna, but it comes to an end at J. 106. 1. Another is Vaticanus 3325 of the 11th or 12th century, which has the missing chapters appended at the end by a contemporary hand. A Leyden MS. of the same time has these chapters in their proper place, but it again is maimed in the middle of c. 110.

[14] E. g. C. 52. 2 P longe mihi alia, V longe alia mihi. C. 51. 35, P atque ego haec, V atque haec ego. C. 51. 24 P neglegeris, V neglexeris. J. 85. 16 P posset, V possit (to correct the grammar). J. 24. 9 P scribo, V scripsi (where the epistolary tense is quite out of place).

Besides the MSS., the earliest of which belongs perhaps to the 9th century, we have earlier help towards the determination of the text in the quotations by grammarians and scholiasts, by the Fathers and other writers; and hints may now and then be gleaned from imitators. The recognized archaic tone of his style attracted the grammarians, the profusion of moral sentiments and unfavourable estimate of his times made him a favourite with the other writers. Of the grammarians, most of them belonging to the fourth century, the most important are 'Acro' (7th cent.), Messius Arusianus, Charisius, Diomedes, Donatus, Nonius Marcellus (3rd cent.), Priscianus (6th cent.), Servius. Among the writers are Fronto, Gellius, Macrobius; Augustine and Jerome: among the imitators, Aurelius Victor, Hegesippus (the Latin paraphrase of Josephus), Septimius (Dictys Cretensis)—all three of the fourth century. I have mentioned these names in the notes, but have not thought it worth while to call them in when the reading in them too was uncertain. The help derived from this source is not very great, and it is disappointing that they do not quote the most difficult passages (22. 2, 39. 2, 51. 27, 57. 4). The grammarians, in particular, are not much to be relied on, unless they quote especially for the word or construction in question, and not always then (cp. 61. 3). Yet one is grateful to Gellius for showing us (33. 2) that the process of tampering with what Sallust wrote had begun even in his time (he was born about A. D. 130). And grammarians show us in some places (e. g. 2. 8 transiere or transegere) that the variety of reading with which our MSS. present us goes back to earlier times. To Augustine we owe a sentence 6. 2, a couple of words in 5. 9, and the right reading in 54. 6. The support of the grammarians makes the form senati certain.

The text here given is that of Jordan's second edition of 1876 without any alteration, except that misprints have been corrected. Jordan has kindly given me information as to one or two places in which I was in doubt as to whether the reading was intentional. It should, however, be understood that Jordan does not give out his text as by any means a final text. In not a few places he is of opinion that conjecture is required, but he wisely prefers, as things stand at present, to lay a sure foundation. The notes which I give at the bottom of the text are also for the most part selected from Jordan; I have, however, added occasionally the readings of the MS. P^1 from the recension of Wirz (or more accurately his correction of Dietsch's recension) as already stated, and have noted a number of conjectures, all in fact that I know of which deserve consideration. Jordan mentions only a few.

In the adoption of Jordan's text, his orthography is of course included. In this matter P is not always a safe guide, for the MS. occasionally gives us (according to Dietsch) atquae dii vult libet honeri (oneri) michi etc. But such things apart, the well-established reputation of Sallust for archaic forms seems to have made the writers of manuscripts careful in the matter of spelling, and Jordan follows P where it is reasonable. The reader will find in the text that u is written for i in such words as—aestumo existumo lubet lacrumae legitumus novissumus; o for u and e in voltus volgus vorto voster advorsus percontari etc.; and though v is written, ignavos novos in nom. sing.; e for i in neglego intellego etc.; s is always omitted after ex, e. g. exequi execrari. Imperator imperium imperare are always written with m; but the following words sometimes im-, sometimes in-,—imbellis imbecillus impedio impetus impendeo etc., though the majority are written without assimilation. In the same way communis commendo, but committere etc. Such inconsistencies as pulcherrimus and pulcherrumus, manifestus and manufestus, and exsanguis (?), which occur thus in P are retained. Dietsch adopts a more uniform system, especially in the matter of verbs compounded with prepositions, but I do not know that he has any MS. authority for this or for such forms as caussa set haut etc., or for e. g. G. Manlius.

TEXT AND NOTES.

ABBREVIATIONS.

P = the Paris MS.—Sorbonianus 500.

p = its corrector.

P^1 = Parisinus 1576.

p^1 = its corrector.

C = other MSS. of the first class, whether all or some of them.

z = MSS. of the second class.

V = Vaticanus 3864 (it contains the speeches only).

om. = is omitted by

When a name is bracketed it is meant that the person in question adopts a reading—e. g. Linker (Dietsch) means that Dietsch adopts Linker's conjecture.

C. SALLVSTI CRISPI

BELLVM CATILINAE.

OMNIS homines, qui sese student praestare 1 ceteris animalibus, summa ope niti decet ne vitam silentio transeant veluti pecora, quae natura prona atque ventri oboedientia finxit. sed nostra omnis 2 vis in animo et corpore sita est: animi imperio, corporis servitio magis utimur; alterum nobis cum dis, alterum cum beluis commune est. quo mihi 3 rectius videtur ingenii quam virium opibus gloriam quaerere et, quoniam vita ipsa qua fruimur brevis est, memoriam nostri quam maxume longam efficere.
nam divitiarum et formae gloria fluxa atque fragilis 4
est, virtus clara aeternaque habetur.

Sed diu magnum inter mortalis certamen fuit, 5 vine corporis an virtute animi res militaris magis procederet. nam et prius quam incipias consulto 6 et ubi consulueris mature facto opus est. ita 7 utrumque per se indigens alterum alterius auxilio eget. igitur initio reges—nam in terris nomen 2 imperi id primum fuit—divorsi pars ingenium, alii

C. SALLVSTII CRISPI BELLVM CATVLINARIVM INCIPIT OMNIS P

8 esse uidetur PC uidetur esse C esse is omitted by z corpus exercebant: etiam tum vita hominum sine cupiditate agitabatur, sua cuique satis placebant.

2 postea vero quam in Asia Cyrus, in Graecia Lacedaemonii et Athenienses coepere urbis atque nationes subigere, lubidinem dominandi causam belli habere, maxumam gloriam in maxumo imperio putare, tum demum periculo atque negotiis compertum est, in bello plurumum ingenium posse.
3 quodsi regum atque imperatorum animi virtus in pace ita ut in bello valeret, aequabilius atque constantius sese res humanae haberent, neque aliud alio ferri neque mutari ac misceri omnia cerneres.
4 nam imperium facile eis artibus retinetur, quibus
5 initio partum est. verum ubi pro labore desidia, pro continentia et aequitate lubido atque superbia invasere, fortuna simul cum moribus inmutatur.
6 ita imperium semper ad optumum quemque a minus bono transfertur.

7 Quae homines arant, navigant, aedificant, virtuti
8 omnia parent. sed multi mortales dediti ventri atque somno, indocti incultique, vitam sicuti peregrinantes transiere: quibus profecto contra naturam corpus voluptati, anima oneri fuit. eorum ego vitam mortemque iuxta aestumo, quoniam de utra-9 que siletur. verum enimvero is demum mihi vivere atque frui anima videtur, qui aliquo negotio inten-

8. est after compertum is omitted in Jordan's text by mistake

13 his for eis Kvičala

22 transiere C Priscianus Nonius (Dietsch) transegere PC Donatus Servius (Meusel Schmalz) transire and over the line vel transegere P^1

tus praeclari facinoris aut artis bonae famam quaerit. sed in magna copia rerum aliud alii natura iter ostendit. pulchrum est bene facere rei publicae, 3 etiam bene dicere haud absurdum est: vel pace vel bello clarum fieri licet. et qui fecere et qui facta aliorum scripsere, multi laudantur. ac mihi quidem, tametsi haud quaquam par gloria sequitur 2 scriptorem et auctorem rerum, tamen in primis arduum videtur res gestas scribere; primum quod facta dictis exaequanda sunt, dehinc quia plerique quae delicta reprehenderis, malivolentia et invidia dicta putant; ubi de magna virtute atque gloria bonorum memores, quae sibi quisque facilia factu putat, aequo animo accipit, supra ea veluti ficta pro falsis ducit.

Sed ego adulescentulus initio sicuti plerique 3 studio ad rem publicam latus sum, ibique mihi multa advorsa fuere. nam pro pudore, pro abstinentia, pro virtute audacia, largitio, avaritia vigebant. quae tametsi animus aspernabatur insolens 4 malarum artium, tamen inter tanta vitia imbecilla aetas ambitione conrupta tenebatur: ac me cum ab 5 reliquorum malis moribus dissentirem, nihilo minus honoris cupido eadem qua ceteros fama atque invidia vexabat. igitur ubi animus ex multis miseriis 4

8 auctorem PC Charisius Gellius (4. 15) actorem C (Dietsch)—auctorem et actorem Schmidt

14 ea om. Gellius l. c.

23 reliquis is altered to relicuorum P reliquorum C reliquis C(?)z

24 eadem qua C eadem quae PC eadem eademque Kortte (Dietsch) some MSS have eademque ceteros (?) atque periculis requievit et mihi reliquam aetatem a re publica procul habendam decrevi, non fuit consilium socordia atque desidia bonum otium conterere, neque vero agrum colundo aut venando 2 servilibus officiis intentum aetatem agere; sed a quo incepto studioque me ambitio mala detinuerat, eodem regressus statui res gestas populi Romani carptim, ut quaeque memoria digna videbantur, perscribere; eo magis, quod mihi a spe, metu, par- 3 tibus rei publicae animus liber erat. igitur de Catilinae coniuratione quam verissume potero pau- 4 cis absolvam: nam id facinus in primis ego memo- 5 rabile existumo sceleris atque periculi novitate. de cuius hominis moribus pauca prius explananda sunt, quam initium narrandi faciam.

5 L. Catilina, nobili genere natus, fuit magna vi et animi et corporis sed ingenio malo pravoque. 2 huic ab adulescentia bella intestina, caedes, rapinae, discordia civilis grata fuere, ibique iuventutem 3 suam exercuit. corpus patiens inediae, algoris, vi- 4 giliae supra quam cuiquam credibile est. animus audax, subdolus, varius, cuius rei lubet simulator ac dissimulator, alieni adpetens, sui profusus, ardens in cupiditatibus: satis eloquentiae, sapientiae 5 parum. vastus animus inmoderata, incredibilia, 6 nimis alta semper cupiebat. hunc post dominationem L. Sullae lubido maxuma invaserat rei publicae capiundae, neque id quibus modis adsequeretur,

22 cuius rei libet PC Nonius cuius libet rei C

24 eloquentiae PC Priscianus Fronto loquentiae Probus (in Gellius)

dum sibi regnum pararet, quicquam pensi habebat.
agitabatur magis magisque in dies animus ferox 7 inopia rei familiaris et conscientia scelerum, quae utraque eis artibus auxerat, quas supra memoravi.
incitabant praeterea conrupti civitatis mores, quos 8 pessuma ac divorsa inter se mala, luxuria atque avaritia, vexabant. res ipsa hortari videtur, quo- 9 niam de moribus civitatis tempus admonuit, supra repetere ac paucis instituta maiorum domi militiaeque, quo modo rem publicam habuerint quantam- 10 que reliquerint, ut paulatim inmutata ex pulcher-rima atque optuma pessuma ac flagitiosissuma facta sit, disserere.

Urbem Romam, sicuti ego accepi, condidere at- 6 que habuere initio Troiani, qui Aenea duce profugi sedibus incertis vagabantur, cumque eis Aborigines, genus hominum agreste, sine legibus, sine imperio, liberum atque solutum. hi postquam in una moenia 2 convenere, dispari genere dissimili lingua, alii alio more viventes, incredibile memoratu est quam facile coaluerint: ita brevi multitudo dispersa atque vaga concordia civitas facta erat. sed postquam 3 res eorum civibus, moribus, agris aucta, satis prospera satisque pollens videbatur, sicuti pleraque mor-talium habentur, invidia ex opulentia orta est.

11 ut PC et ut C | pulcherrima with an i here but in 20. 3, 52. 20 with a u P with an i twice in V

12 atque optuma z Augustine, is omitted by PC

19 alii C alius PC

21 ita...facta erat (or est) z Augustine (Ep. 138, 10 apud eos (auctores Romanos) enim ita legitur: breui... facta erat) omitted by PC (Dietsch)—see notes

23 ciuibus PC legibus z Augustine (in another place)

4 igitur reges populique finitumi bello temptare, pauci ex amicis auxilio esse: nam ceteri metu perculsi a 5 periculis aberant. at Romani domi militiaeque intenti festinare, parare, alius alium hortari, hostibus obviam ire, libertatem, patriam parentisque, armis tegere. post ubi pericula virtute propulerant, sociis atque amicis auxilia portabant, magisque dandis quam accipiundis benificiis amicitias parabant. 6 imperium legitumum, nomen imperi regium habebant. delecti, quibus corpus annis infirmum, ingenium sapientia validum erat, rei publicae consultabant: ei vel aetate vel curae similitudine patres 7 appellabantur. post ubi regium imperium, quod initio conservandae libertatis atque augendae rei publicae fuerat, in superbiam dominationemque se convortit, inmutato more annua imperia binosque imperatores sibi fecere: eo modo minume posse putabant per licentiam insolescere animum humanum.

7 Sed ea tempestate coepere se quisque magis extollere magisque ingenium in promptu habere. 2 nam regibus boni quam mali suspectiores sunt semperque eis aliena virtus formidulosa est. sed civitas incredibile memoratu est adepta libertate quantum brevi creverit: tanta cupido gloriae incesserat. 4 iam primum iuventus, simul ac belli patiens erat, in castris per laborem usum militiae discebat magisque in decoris armis et militaribus equis quam in scortis atque conviviis lubidinem habebant. igitur talibus viris non labor insolitus, non locus ullus asper aut arduus erat, non armatus hostis formidulosus: virtus omnia domuerat. sed gloriae maxumum certamen inter ipsos erat: se quisque hostem ferire, murum ascendere, conspici, dum tale facinus faceret, properabat; eas divitias, eam bonam famam magnamque nobilitatem putabant. laudis avidi, pecuniae liberales erant; gloriam ingentem, divitias honestas volebant. memorare possem quibus in locis maxumas hostium copias populus Romanus parva manu fuderit, quas urbis natura munitas pugnando ceperit, ni ea res longius nos ab incepto traheret.

15 se om. z

27 per laborem usu militiae P per laborem usu (or usum) militiam pC per laboris usum militiam z—per laborem usu militiam Dietsch Schmals simul laboris ac belli patiens erat, in castris usu militiam discebat Gründel.

Sed profecto fortuna in omni re dominatur; ea res cunctas ex lubidine magis quam ex vero celebrat obscuratque. Atheniensium res gestae, sicuti ego aestumo, satis amplae magnificaeque fuere, verum aliquanto minores tamen quam fama feruntur. sed quia provenere ibi scriptorum magna ingenia, per terrarum orbem Atheniensium facta pro maxumis celebrantur. ita eorum qui fecere

3 labor here and J. 100. 4 PC. (Servius, on Verg. A. 1 253, says: Sallustius paene ubique 'labos' posuit. Labos in Or Cott 1 or Mac 18 V)

6 se PC sic se C (Kritz). Grïndel proposes to re-write the sentence thus ac si quisque hostem ferire, murum ascendere properabat, conspici, dum tale facinus faceret, eas divitias e. q. s.

11 possum P^1 Servius

23 qui ea fecere P (the ea having been afterwards

virtus tanta habetur, quantum eam verbis potuere extollere praeclara ingenia. at populo Romano numquam ea copia fuit, quia prudentissumus quisque maxume negotiosus erat: ingenium nemo sine corpore exercebat; optumus quisque facere quam dicere, sua ab aliis benefacta laudari quam ipse 9 aliorum narrare malebat. igitur domi militiaeque boni mores colebantur, concordia maxuma, minuma avaritia erat, ius bonumque apud eos non legibus
2 magis quam natura valebat. iurgia discordias simultates cum hostibus exercebant, cives cum civibus de virtute certabant. in suppliciis deorum
3 magnifici, domi parci, in amicos fideles erant. duabus his artibus, audacia in bello, ubi pax evenerat,
4 aequitate, seque remque publicam curabant. quarum rerum ego maxuma documenta haec habeo, quod in bello saepius vindicatum est in eos, qui contra imperium in hostem pugnaverant, quique tardius revocati proelio excesserant, quam qui signa relinquere
5 aut pulsi loco cedere ausi erant; in pace vero, quod benificiis magis quam metu imperium agitabant, et accepta iniuria ignoscere quam persequi malebant.

10 Sed ubi labore atque iustitia res publica crevit, reges magni bello domiti, nationes ferae et populi ingentes vi subacti, Carthago aemula imperi Romani ab stirpe interiit, cuncta maria terraeque patebant:

added by the writer: in P¹ it is added by a later hand) C ea om. z Jerome
1 eam one of C Jerome ea PC
13 amicis z
21 magis quam C magis om. PC 25 ingentes om. PC (one) saevire fortuna ac miscere omnia coepit. qui la- 2 bores, pericula, dubias atque asperas res facile toleraverant, eis otium, divitiae, optanda alias, oneri miseriaeque fuere. igitur primo pecuniae, deinde 3 imperi cupido crevit; ea quasi materies omnium malorum fuere. namque avaritia, fidem, probitatem 4 ceterasque artis bonas subvortit; pro his superbiam, crudelitatem, deos neglegere, omnia venalia habere edocuit. ambitio multos mortalis falsos fieri subegit, 5 aliud clausum in pectore aliud in lingua promptum habere, amicitias inimicitiasque non ex re sed ex commodo aestumare magisque voltum quam in-genium bonum habere. haec primo paulatim cres- 6 cere, interdum vindicari; post ubi contagio quasi pestilentia invasit, civitas inmutata, imperium ex iustissumo atque optumo crudele intolerandumque factum.

Sed primo magis ambitio quam avaritia animos 11
hominum exercebat, quod tamen vitium propius virtutem erat. nam gloriam, honorem, imperium, 2 bonus et ignavos aeque sibi exoptant; sed ille verā viā nititur, huic quia bonae artes desunt, dolis atque fallaciis contendit. avaritia pecuniae studium habet, 3 quam nemo sapiens concupivit; ea quasi venenis malis inbuta corpus animumque virilem effeminat, semper infinita insatiabilis est, neque copiā neque

3 diuitiae PC diuitiaeque C | optanda alias P optanda alia P^1 optandae aliis p^1 C

4 primo imperi, deinde pecuniae Nipperdey (Wirz) | eae for ea Nipperdey

20 uirtutem PC Priscianus (quoting for 'prope' with acc.) Arusianus uirtuti C

4 inopiā minuitur. sed postquam L. Sulla armīs re-ceptā re publicā bonis initiis malos eventus habuit, rapere omnes, trahere, domum alius alius agros cupere, neque modum neque modestiam victores habere, foeda crudeliaque in civis facinora facere.
5 huc adcedebat quod L. Sulla exercitum, quem in Asia ductaverat, quo sibi fidum faceret, contra morem maiorum luxuriose nimisque liberaliter habuerat. loca amoena, voluptaria facile in otio 6 ferocis militum animos molliverant. ibi primum insuevit exercitus populi Romani amare, potare, signa, tabulas pictas, vasa caelata mirari, ea privatim et publice rapere, delubra spoliare, sacra profana-7 que omnia polluere. igitur ei milites, postquam victoriam adepti sunt, nihil reliqui victis fecere.
quippe secundae res sapientium animos fatigant, ne illi conruptis moribus victoriae temperarent.

12 Postquam divitiae honori esse coepere et eas gloria, imperium, potentia sequebatur, hebescere virtus, paupertas probro haberi, innocentia pro ma-2 livolentia duci coepit. igitur ex divitiis iuventutem luxuria atque avaritia cum superbiā invasere;
rapere, consumere, sua parvi pendere, aliena cupere, pudorem, pudicitiam, divina atque humana pro-

7 asia PC asiam C

12 statuas is written over the line by p, and one MS has signa statuas tabulas according to Wirz

14 posquam P acc. to Wirz, perhaps the spelling of Sallust's time

16 ne PC nedum C (a few). Priscian quotes the passage twice, once with ne, once with nedum

17 Dietsch read temperarint in 1859. He now stops fatigant: ne so Schmalz

miscua, nihil pensi neque moderati habere. operae 3 pretium est, cum domos atque villas cognoveris in urbium modum exaedificatas, visere templa deorum, quae nostri maiores, religiosissumi mortales, fecere. verum illi delubra deorum pietate, 4 domos suas gloriā decorabant, neque victis quicquam praeter iniuriae licentiam eripiebant. at hi 5 contrā, ignavissumi homines per summum scelus omnia ea sociis adimere, quae fortissumi viri victores reliquerant; proinde quasi iniuriam facere id demum esset imperio uti. nam quid ea memorem, quae 13
nisi eis qui videre nemini credibilia sunt, a privatis conpluribus subvorsos montis, maria constrata esse?
quibus mihi videntur ludibrio fuisse divitiae, quippe 2 quas honeste habere licebat, abuti per turpitudinem properabant. sed lubido ganeae ceterique cultus 3 non minor incesserat: vescendi causā terrā marique omnia exquirere, dormire prius quam somni cupido esset, non famem aut sitim neque frigus neque lassitudinem opperiri sed ea omnia luxu antecapere.
haec iuventutem, ubi familiares opes defecerant, 4 ad facinora incendebant. animus inbutus malis 5 artibus haud facile lubidinibus carebat; eo profusius omnibus modis quaestui atque sumptui deditus erat.

In tanta tamque conrupta civitate Catilina, id 14 quod factu facillumum erat, omnium flagitiorum atque facinorum circum se tamquam stipatorum

3 exaedificatas PC Priscianus aedificatas C
13 constrata PC constructa C (Klimscha) contracta z
26 flagitiosorum atque facinorosorum z (?) (Freudenberg)
27 stipationem Binsfeld

2 catervas habebat. nam quicumque inpudicus adulter ganeo bona patria laceraverat, quique alienum aes grande conflaverat, quo flagitium aut
3 facinus redimeret, praeterea omnes undique parricidae sacrilegi convicti iudiciis aut pro factis iudicium timentes, ad hoc quos manus atque lingua periurio aut sanguine civili alebat, postremo omnes quos flagitium egestas conscius animus exagitabat, 4 ei Catilinae proxumi familiaresque erant. quodsi quis etiam a culpa vacuus in amicitiam eius inciderat, cotidiano usu atque inlecebris facile par similisque ceteris efficiebatur. sed maxume adu-
5 lescentium familiaritates adpetebat; eorum animi molles et fluxi dolis haud difficulter capiebantur.
6 nam ut cuiusque studium ex aetate flagrabat, aliis scorta praebere aliis canes atque equos mercari, postremo neque sumptui neque modestiae suae parcere, dum illos obnoxios fidosque sibi faceret.

15 Iam primum adulescens Catilina multa nefanda stupra fecerat, cum virgine nobili, cum sacerdote
2 Vestae, alia huiuscemodi contra ius fasque. postremo captus amore Aureliae Orestillae, cuius praeter formam nihil umquam bonus laudavit, quod ea

2 ganeo om. P (but added in the margin by p) adulter alea (ganeo above the line) P^1 and alea appears in C. From alea Putsche conjectured aleo, and Koechly aleator (cp. Cic. in Cat. 2. 10. 23). inpudicus ganeo aleo (or aleator) Wölfflin—rightly

14 molles et fluxi is Jordan's correction, supported by one MS only molles etiam et fluxi P (W. Wagner Wirz Schmalz) molles aetate et (or et aetate) fluxi C (but the aetate clearly comes from below)

17 sumptu P sumptui p (acc. to Wirz) | molestiae Madvig

nubere illi dubitabat, timens privignum adultā aetate, pro certo creditur necato filio vacuam domum scelestīs nuptiis fecisse. quae quidem res mihi in primis videtur causa fuisse facinus maturandi. namque animus inpurus, dis hominibusque infestus, neque vigiliis neque quietibus sedari poterat: ita conscientia mentem excitam vastabat. igitur colos ei exsanguis, foedi oculi, citus modo modo tardus incessus; prorsus in facie voltuque vecordia inerat. sed iuventutem, quam, ut supra diximus, inlexerat, multis modis mala facinora edocebat. ex illis testis signatoresque falsos commodare; fidem fortunas pericula vilia habere, post ubi eorum famam atque pudorem adtriverat, maiora alia imperabat. si causa peccandi in praesens minus subpetebat, nihilo minus insontis sicuti sontis circumvenire, iugulare; scilicet, ne per ōtium torpescerent manus aut animus, gratuito potius malus atque crudelis erat. eis amicis sociisque confisus Catilina, simul quod aes alienum per omnīs terras ingens erat et quod plerique Sullani milites largius suo usi rapinarum et victoriae veteris memores civile bellum exoptabant, opprimundae rei publicae consilium

16

1 adulta PC adultum C (Schmalz)

4 facinus P maturandi is ill-written in P and corrected by p facinoris maturandi C (Dietsch Wirz)

7 color ei exsanguis P (exanguis P exsanguis p) color eius or colore exsanguis or color exsanguis C. No MS has colos, but Probus in two places says (1) color coloris; quamvis Sallustius: igitur colos exsanguis: (2) colos coloris; Sallustius; igitur colos exsanguis; sed melius 'color' dicitur

11 edocebat pC edocuit P

cepit. in Italia nullus exercitus, Cn. Pompeius in extremis terris bellum gerebat; ipsi consulatum petenti magna spes, senatus nihil sane intentus: tutae tranquillaeque res omnes, sed ea prorsus opportuna Catilinae.

17 Igitur circiter kalendas Iunias L. Caesare et C. Figulo consulibus primo singulos appellare, hortari alios alios temptare; opes suas, inparatam rem publicam, magna praemia coniurationis docere. 2 ubi satis explorata sunt quae voluit, in unum omnis convocat quibus maxuma necessitudo et plurumum 3 audaciae inerat. eo convenere senatorii ordinis P. Lentulus Sura, P. Autronius, L. Cassius Longinus, C. Cethegus, P. et Ser. Sullae Ser. filii, L. Vargunteius, Q. Annius, M. Porcius Laeca, L. 4 Bestia, Q. Curius; praeterea ex equestri ordine M. Fulvius Nobilior, L. Statilius, P. Gabinius Capito, C. Cornelius; ad hoc multi ex coloniis et 5 municipiis, domi nobiles. erant praeterea conplures paulo occultius consili huiusce participes nobiles, quos magis dominationis spes hortabatur quam in- 6 opia aut alia necessitudo. ceterum iuventus pleraque, sed maxume nobilium, Catilinae inceptis favebat, quibus in otio vel magnifice vel molliter vivere copia erat, incerta pro certis, bellum quam pacem 7 malebant. fuere item ea tempestate qui crederent M. Licinium Crassum non ignarum eius consili fuisse: quia Cn. Pompeius invisus ipsi magnum exercitum ductabat, cuiusvis opes voluisse contra illius potentiam crescere, simul confisum, si coniuratio valuisset, facile apud illos principem se fore.

8 petendi P petendi or petenti C (petenti p^1)
22 alia PC aliqua C

Sed antea item coniuravere pauci contra rem 18 publicam, in quis Catilina fuit; de qua quam ve- 2 rissume potero dicam. L. Tullo et M'. Lepido consulibus P. Autronius et P. Sulla designati consules legibus ambitûs interrogati poenas dederant. post paulo Catilina pecuniarum repetundarum reus 3 prohibitus erat consulatum petere, quod intra legitumos dies profiteri nequiverit. erat eodem tem- 4 pore Cn. Piso, adulescens nobilis summae audaciae, egens, factiosus, quem ad perturbandam rem publicam inopia atque mali mores stimulabant. cum 5 hoc Catilina et Autronius circiter nonas Decembris consilio communicato parabant in Capitolio kalendis Ianuariis L. Cottam et L. Torquatum consules interficere, ipsi fascibus correptis Pisonem cum exercitu ad optinendas duas Hispanias mittere. ea 6 re cognita rursus in nonas Februarias consilium caedis transtulerant. iam tum non consulibus modo 7 sed plerisque senatoribus perniciem machinabantur. quodni Catilina maturasset pro curia signum sociis 8 dare, eo die post conditam urbem Romam pessumum facinus patratum foret. quia nondum frequentes armati convenerant, ea res consilium

5 quis Diomedes quibus PC (see notes)

11 nequiuerit PC nequiuerat C (inferior) z (Wirz Schmalz Scheindler etc.). Dietsch brackets quod...nequiverit

16 comunicato in Jordan's text is a misprint

20 Dietsch marks a lacuna after cognita

19 diremit. postea Piso in citeriorem Hispaniam quaestor pro praetore missus est, adnitente Crasso, quod eum infestum inimicum Cn. Pompeio cognoverat. neque tamen senatus provinciam invitus dederat, quippe foedum hominem a re publica procul esse volebat; simul quia boni conplures praesidium in eo putabant et iam tum potentia Pompei formidulosa erat. sed is Piso in provincia ab equitibus Hispanis, quos in exercitu ductabat, iter faciens occisus est. sunt qui ita dicant, imperia eius iniusta, superba, crudelia barbaros nequivisse pati; alii autem equites illos Cn. Pompei veteres fidosque clientis voluntate eius Pisonem adgressos; numquam Hispanos praeterea tale facinus fecisse, sed imperia saeva multa ante perpessos. nos eam rem in medio relinquemus. de superiore coniuratione satis dictum.

20 Catilina ubi eos, quos paulo ante memoravi, convenisse videt, tametsi cum singulis multa saepe egerat, tamen in rem fore credens universos appellare et cohortari, in abditam partem aedium secessit atque ibi omnibus arbitris procul amotis orationem huiuscemodi habuit.

'Ni virtus fidesque vostra spectata mihi forent,

8 prouincia C prouinciam PC
9 quos in PC quos sine z (Dietsch)
10 dicant PC dicunt C (Kritz)
15 antea most editors. antea PP^1 (acc. to Dietsch and Wirz)
21 secessit C (Wirz) secedit PC (Dietsch Schmalz)
24 spectata CV expectata P probata p | forent PC foret pVz Servius (Meusel)

nequiquam opportuna res cecidisset; spes magna, dominatio in manibus frustra fuissent, neque ego 3 per ignaviam aut vana ingenia incerta pro certis captarem. sed quia multis et magnis tempestati- 5 bus vos cognovi fortis fidosque mihi, eo animus ausus est maxumum atque pulcherrumum facinus incipere, simul quia vobis eadem quae mihi bona malaque esse intellexi: nam idem velle atque idem 4 nolle, ea demum firma amicitia est. sed ego quae 5 10 mente agitavi omnes iam antea divorsi audistis. ceterum mihi in dies magis animus accenditur, cum 6 considero, quae condicio vitae futura sit, nisi nosmet ipsi vindicamus in libertatem. nam postquam 7 res publica in paucorum potentium ius atque dicio- 15 nem concessit, semper illis reges tetrarchae vectigales esse, populi, nationes stipendia pendere; ceteri omnes, strenui boni, nobiles atque ignobiles, volgus fuimus sine gratia, sine auctoritate, eis obnoxii, quibus, si res publica valeret, formidini 20 essemus. itaque omnis gratia, potentia, honos, divi- 8 tiae apud illos sunt aut ubi illi volunt; nobis reliquere pericula, repulsas iudicia egestatem. quae 9 quousque tandem patiemini fortissumi viri? nonne emori per virtutem praestat quam vitam miseram 25 atque inhonestam, ubi alienae superbiae ludibrio

11 magis magisque Vz

13 ipsi p in margin V ipsos PC (p^1)

17 strenui boni nobiles atque (p puts et in the margin) ignobiles PC strenui nobiles atque ignobiles (so Kuhlmann) or boni atque nobiles ignobiles C boni atque strenui nobiles et ignobiles V. Aurelius Victor, in imitation of Sallust perhaps, writes boni malique nobiles atque ignobiles (see notes)

23 o fortissimi CV o om. C. written over the line PP^1

fueris, per dedecus amittere? verum enimvero pro deum atque hominum fidem victoria in manu vobis est, viget aetas, animus valet; contra illis annis atque divitiis omnia consenuerunt. tantum modo incepto opus est, cetera res expediet. etenim quis mortalium, cui virile ingenium est, tolerare potest, illis divitias superare, quas profundant in extruendo mari et montibus coaequandis, nobis rem familiarem etiam ad necessaria deesse? illos binas aut amplius domos continuare, nobis larem familiarem nusquam ullum esse? cum tabulas signa toreumata emunt, nova diruunt, alia aedificant, postremo omnibus modis pecuniam trahunt, vexant, tamen summa lubidine divitias suas vincere nequeunt. at nobis est domi inopia, foris aes alienum, mala res, spes multo asperior; denique quid reliqui habemus praeter miseram animam? quin igitur expergiscimini? en illa illa quam saepe optastis libertas, praeterea divitiae, decus, gloria in oculis sita sunt. fortuna omnia ea victoribus praemia posuit. res tempus pericula egestas, belli spolia magnifica magis quam oratio mea vos hortantur. vel imperatore vel milite me utimini; neque animus neque corpus a vobis

1 admittere for amittere Hartel (Scheindler)

2 in manu uobis p (in margin) CV (Wirz) in manu nobis PC (Dietsch. Schmalz) nobis in manu Priscianus in manibus z

7 extruendo PCV 'Acron' extrudendo J. F. Gronovius (Dietsch)

10 familiarem om. Eussner

17 en om. V

22 hortantur P (or p? in margin) Vz hortentur PC

23 utimini PC utemini pCV (Wirz)

aberit. haec ipsa, ut spero, vobiscum una consul 17
agam, nisi forte me animus fallit et vos servire magis quam imperare parati estis'.

Postquam accepere ea homines, quibus mala 21 abunde omnia erant, sed neque res neque spes bona ulla, tametsi illis quieta movere magna merces videbatur, tamen postulavere plerique, ut propone-ret, quae condicio belli foret, quae praemia armis peterent, quid ubique opis aut spei haberent. tum 2 Catilina polliceri tabulas novas, proscriptionem locupletium, magistratus, sacerdotia, rapinas, alia omnia, quae bellum atque lubido victorum fert.
praeterea esse in Hispania citeriore Pisonem, in 3 Mauretania cum exercitu P. Sittium Nucerinum, consili sui participes; petere consulatum C. Anto-nium, quem sibi collegam fore speraret, hominem et familiarem et omnibus necessitudinibus circumventum; cum eo se consulem initium agundi facturum. ad hoc maledictis increpabat omnis bonos, 4 suorum unum quemque nominans laudare: ad-monebat alium egestatis alium cupiditatis suae, conpluris periculi aut ignominiae, multos victoriae Sullanae, quibus ea praedae fuerat. postquam om- 5 nium animos alacris videt, cohortatus, ut petitionem suam curae haberent, conventum dimisit. fuere ea 22 tempestate qui dicerent Catilinam oratione habita cum ad iusiurandum popularis sceleris sui adigeret, humani corporis sanguinem vino permixtum in pateris circumtulisse; inde cum post execrationem 2 omnes degustavissent, sicuti in sollemnibus sacris

23 praedae fuerat p praeda fuit P
30 sicuti PC sicut C sicut in Jordan's text a misprint fieri consuevit, aperuisse consilium suum atque eo dictitare fecisse, quo inter se fidi magis forent, 3 alius alii tanti facinoris conscii. non nulli ficta et haec et multa praeterea existumabant ab eis, qui Ciceronis invidiam, quae postea orta est, leniri 5 credebant atrocitate sceleris eorum, qui poenas dederant. nobis ea res pro magnitudine parum comperta est.

23 Sed in ea coniuratione fuit Q. Curius, natus haud obscuro loco, flagitiis atque facinoribus co-10 opertus, quem censores senatu probri gratia move-
2 rant. huic homini non minor vanitas inerat quam audacia: neque reticere, quae audierat, neque suamet ipse scelera occultare, prorsus neque dicere
3 neque facere quicquam pensi habebat. erat ei cum
15 Fulvia muliere nobili vetus consuetudo; cui cum minus gratus esset, quia inopia minus largiri poterat, repente glorians maria montisque polliceri coepit et minari interdum ferro, ni sibi obnoxia

1 atque eo dictitare (dicto a few Cz) fecisse PC. Some of C however omit the words or have them crossed out; other MSS have acc. to Dietsch dictam rem, dicta re, or dictas res.—om. or write idque eo fecisse Ritschl dictitare om. Selling idque eo dicitur fecisse Bergk atque eo dixisse eam rem fecisse Madvig atque eo dictitant rem fecisse W. Wagner suum; atque eo dictitarent eam rem fecisse Krämer atque eo dixisse ita se fecisse F. Uber dictitavere Scheindler

10 Most editors write copertus. P has co•optus (an h being erased) i.e. coopertus, and so C Nonius. Gellius quotes twice as coming from Sallust foenoribus copertus

19 et om. z ('perhaps rightly', says Jordan)

foret; postremo ferocius agitare quam solitus erat. at Fulvia insolentiae Curi causa cognita tale periculum rei publicae haud occultum habuit, sed sublato auctore de Catilinae coniuratione quae quoque modo audierat conpluribus narravit. ea res in primis studia hominum accendit ad consulatum mandandum M. Tullio Ciceroni. namque antea pleraque nobilitas invidia aestuabat et quasi pollui consulatum credebant, si eum quamvis egregius homo novos adeptus foret. sed ubi periculum advenit, invidia atque superbia post fuere. igitur 24 comitiis habitis consules declarantur M. Tullius et C. Antonius, quod factum primo popularis coniurationis concusserat. neque tamen Catilinae furor minuebatur, sed in dies plura agitare, arma per Italiam locis opportunis parare, pecuniam sua aut amicorum fide sumptam mutuam Faesulas ad Manlium quendam portare, qui postea princeps fuit belli faciundi. ea tempestate plurimos cuiusque generis homines adscivisse sibi dicitur, mulieres etiam aliquot inpudicas. per eas se Catilina credebat posse servitia urbana sollicitare, urbem incendere, viros earum vel adiungere sibi vel interficere. sed in eis erat Sempronia, quae multa saepe virilis 25 audaciae facinora conmiserat. haec mulier genere atque forma, praeterea viro, liberis satis fortunata

1 ferocius agitare PC (agitare ferocius in Jordan's text is a misprint)

4 quoque modo or et quomodo C quo modo PC quoquo modo z (Nipperdey)

26 Jordan attributes uiro liberis to C, but it is doubtful whether atque is omitted by any of these, though in fuit; litteris Graecis et Latinis docta, psallere saltare elegantius, quam necesse est probae, multa 3 alia, quae instrumenta luxuriae sunt. sed ei cariora semper omnia quam decus atque pudicitia fuit; pecuniae an famae minus parceret, haud facile dis-

4 cerneres. sed ea saepe antehac fidem prodiderat, creditum abiuraverat, caedis conscia fuerat, luxuria
5 atque inopia praeceps abierat. verum ingenium eius haud absurdum: posse versus facere, iocum movere, sermone uti vel modesto vel molli vel procaci; prorsus multae facetiae multusque lepos inerat.

26 His rebus conparatis Catilina nihilo minus in proxumum annum consulatum petebat, sperans, si designatus foret, facile se ex voluntate Antonio
2 usurum. neque interea quietus erat, sed omnibus modis insidias parabat Ciceroni. neque illi tamen
3 ad cavendum dolus aut astutiae deerant. namque a principio consulatus sui multa pollicendo per Fulviam effecerat, ut Q. Curius, de quo paulo ante
4 memoravi, consilia Catilinae sibi proderet. ad hoc conlegam suum Antonium pactione provinciae perpulerat, ne contra rem publicam sentiret; circum se praesidia amicorum atque clientium occulte habe-
5 bat. postquam dies comitiorum venit et Catilinae

two it is added over the line by the first hand, uiro atque liberis PC

1 psallere saltare C Macrobius psallere et saltare PC (the saltare in P is corrected from cantare which P^1 has, but with saltare in the margin) (Meusel)

11 multi sales p, over the line, acc. to Wirz, which some MSS have in the text | que om. P (Scheindler)

neque petitio neque insidiae, quas consulibus in campo fecerat, prospere cessere, constituit bellum facere et extrema omnia experiri, quoniam quae occulte temptaverat aspera foedaque evenerant. igitur C. Manlium Faesulas atque in eam partem 27 Etruriae, Septimium quendam Camertem in agrum Picenum, C. Iulium in Apuliam dimisit; praeterea alium alio, quem ubique opportunum sibi fore credebat. interea Romae multa simul moliri, con- 2 sulibus insidias tendere, parare incendia, opportuna loca armatis hominibus obsidere, ipse cum telo esse, item alios iubere, hortari uti semper intenti paratique essent, dies noctisque festinare vigilare, neque insomniis neque labore fatigari. postremo ubi 3 multa agitanti nihil procedit, rursus intempesta nocte coniurationis principes convocat per M. Porcium Laecam, ibique multa de ignavia eorum questus, docet se Manlium praemisisse ad eam multitudinem, quam ad capiunda arma paraverat, item alios in alia loca opportuna, qui initium belli facerent, seque ad exercitum proficisci cupere, si prius Ciceronem oppressisset; eum suis consiliis multum officere. igitur perterritis ac dubitantibus ceteris 28 4

1 consulibus PC consuli C (consulibus P^1 consuli p^1 with ciceroni written over the line) Dietsch brackets, and Wirz omits the word. Nipperdey would strike out quas... fecerat | in campo PC om. C (in campo P^1 om. p^1)

9 simul C sibi P | consulibus PC consuli C. Dietsch brackets, and Wirz omits the word

12 paratique PC parati C

16 per PC (in P^1 it is added by corrector) penes Palmieri (Linker Dietsch) ad Wirz (Schmalz) propere ad Rauchenstein

C. Cornelius eques Romanus operam suam pollicitus et cum eo L. Vargunteius senator constituere ea nocte paulo post cum armatis hominibus sicuti salutatum introire ad Ciceronem ac de inproviso
2 domi suae inparatum confodere. Curius ubi intellegit, quantum periculum consuli inpendeat propere per Fulviam Ciceroni dolum qui parabatur 3 enuntiat. ita illi ianua prohibiti tantum facinus frustra susceperant.

4 Interea Manlius in Etruria plebem sollicitare, egestate simul ac dolore iniuriae novarum rerum cupidam, quod Sullae dominatione agros bonaque omnia amiserat, praeterea latrones cuiusque generis, quorum in ea regione magna copia erat, non nullos ex Sullanis coloniis, quibus lubido atque luxuria ex
29 magnis rapinis nihil reliqui fecerat. ea cum Ciceroni nuntiarentur, ancipiti malo permotus, quod neque urbem ab insidiis privato consilio longius tueri poterat, neque exercitus Manli quantus aut quo consilio foret satis conpertum habebat, rem ad senatum refert, iam antea volgi rumoribus exagita-
2 tam. itaque quod plerumque in atroci negotio solet, senatus decrevit, darent operam consules ne-
3 quid res publica detrimenti caperet. ea potestas

3 after hominibus Dietsch marks a lacuna

5 domu is corrected into domi P domi C domui C (Dietsch Schmalz)

6 periculum PC periculi P^1 C (Dietsch)

14 nonnullos exillanis p nonnullas (or -is) exulanas P nonnullos ex sillanis colonis P^1

16 fecerat PP^1 C fecerant pp^1C (the majority)

21 exagitatum Kortte (and most editors) agitatam Nipperdey per senatum more Romano magistratui maxuma permittitur, exercitum parare, bellum gerere, coercere omnibus modis socios atque civis, domi militiaeque imperium atque iudicium summum habere; aliter sine populi iussu nullius earum rerum consuli ius est. post paucos dies L. Saenius senator in 30 senatu litteras recitavit, quas Faesulis adlatas sibi dicebat, in quibus scriptum erat C. Manlium arma cepisse cum magna multitudine ante diem VI kalendas Novembris. simul, id quod in tali re solet, 2 alii portenta atque prodigia nuntiabant, alii conventus fieri, arma portari, Capuae atque in Apulia servile bellum moveri. igitur senati decreto Q. 3 Marcius Rex Faesulas Q. Metellus Creticus in Apuliam circumque ea loca missi—ei utrique ad 4 urbem imperatores erant, impediti ne triumpharent calumnia paucorum, quibus omnia honesta atque inhonesta vendere mos erat—, sed praetores Q. 5 Pompeius Rufus Capuam Q. Metellus Celer in agrum Picenum, eisque permissum, uti pro tempore atque periculo exercitum compararent. ad hoc, 6 siquis indicavisset de coniuratione, quae contra rem publicam facta erat, praemium servo libertatem et sestertia centum, libero inpunitatem eius rei et sestertia ducenta, itemque decrevere, uti gladiatoriae 7

5 nullius PC nulli C

13 senati P (almost alone) Nonius (quoting for the genitive)—see 36, 5, 53, 1

23 after praemium C have decreuere | instead of et sestertia centum P has an abbreviation for ex senatus consulto

24 & s. ter ducenta milia P

familiae Capuam et in cetera municipia distribuerentur pro cuiusque opibus, Romae per totam urbem vigiliae haberentur eisque minores magistratus praeessent.

31 Quibus rebus permota civitas atque inmutata urbis facies erat. ex summa laetitia atque lascivia, quae diuturna quies pepererat, repente omnis tristitia invasit: festinare trepidare, neque loco neque homini cuiquam satis credere, neque bellum gerere neque pacem habere, suo quisque metu pericula metiri. ad hoc mulieres, quibus rei publicae magnitudine belli timor insolitus incesserat, afflictare sese, manus supplices ad caelum tendere, miserari parvos liberos, rogitare, omnia pavere, superbia atque deliciis omissis sibi patriaeque diffidere.

4 At Catilinae crudelis animus eadem illa movebat, tametsi praesidia parabantur et ipse lege
5 Plautia interrogatus erat ab L. Paulo. postremo dissimulandi causa aut sui expurgandi, sicut iurgio
6 lacessitus foret, in senatum venit. tum M. Tullius consul, sive praesentiam eius timens sive ira conmotus, orationem habuit luculentam atque utilem
7 rei publicae, quam postea scriptam edidit. sed ubi ille adsedit, Catilina, ut erat paratus ad dissimulanda omnia, demisso voltu voce supplici postulare a patribus coepit nequid de se temere crederent;

3 minores C maiores P

14 rogitare omnia, pavere Wirz rogitare omnia, omnia pavere Eussner

19 aut C ut P ut et or et ut C | sicut or sicuti C si.t (n erased) P si P^1 (with cut over the line by p^1) si cuius J. F. Gronovius (Schmalz) sicubi Linker (Dietsch) si Wirz ea familia ortum, ita se ab adulescentia vitam instituisse, ut omnia bona in spe haberet. ne existumarent sibi patricio homini, cuius ipsius atque maiorum pluruma beneficia in plebem Romanam essent, perdita re publica opus esse, cum eam servaret M. Tullius, inquilinus civis urbis Romae. ad hoc maledicta alia cum adderet, obstrepere omnes, hostem atque parricidam vocare. tum ille furibundus 'quoniam quidem circumventus' inquit 'ab inimicis praeceps agor, incendium meum ruina restinguam'. deinde se ex curia domum proripuit. 32 ibi multa ipse secum volvens, quod neque insidiae consuli procedebant et ab incendio intellegebat urbem vigiliis munitam, optumum factu credens exercitum augere ac prius quam legiones scriberentur multa antecapere, quae bello usui forent, nocte intempesta cum paucis in Manliana castra profectus est. sed Cethego atque Lentulo ceterisque, quorum cognoverat promptam audaciam, mandat quibus rebus possent opes factionis confirment, insidias consuli maturent, caedem incendia aliaque belli facinora parent: sese prope diem cum magno exercitu ad urbem accessurum.

4 plebem MSS populum Gruter (followed by most editors) in rem publicam Kortte

11 restinguam pC restingam P extinguam C (in Cic. p. Mur. 25. 51 also the MSS vary between exstincturum and restincturum)

12 Nipperdey would strike out quod...procedebant: Dietsch marks a lacuna between consuli and procedebant

16 multa antecapere PC multo praeuenire antecapere C (inferior) multa om. Kortte (Kritz Wirz)

Dum haec Romae geruntur, C. Manlius ex suo numero legatos ad Marcium Regem mittit cum 33 mandatis huiuscemodi. 'Deos hominesque testamur, imperator, nos arma neque contra patriam cepisse neque quo periculum aliis faceremus, sed uti corpora nostra ab iniuria tuta forent, qui miseri egentes violentia atque crudelitate feneratorum plerique patriae sed omnes fama atque fortunis expertes sumus. neque cuiquam nostrum licuit more maiorum lege uti neque amisso patrimonio liberum corpus habere: tanta saevitia feneratorum atque
2 praetoris fuit. saepe maiores vostrum miseriti plebis Romanae decretis suis inopiae eius opitulati sunt, ac novissume memoria nostra propter magnitudinem aeris alieni volentibus omnibus bonis
3 argentum aere solutum est. saepe ipsa plebes aut dominandi studio permota aut superbia magistra-
4 tuum armata a patribus secessit. at nos non imperium neque divitias petimus, quarum rerum causa bella atque certamina omnia inter mortalis sunt,
5 sed libertatem, quam nemo bonus nisi cum anima simul amittit. te atque senatum obtestamur, consulatis miseris civibus, legis praesidium, quod iniquitas praetoris eripuit, restituatis neve nobis eam necessitudinem inponatis, ut quaeramus, quonam modo maxume ulti sanguinem nostrum pereamus'.

8 patriae PC patria CV. For patriae sed Eussner conjectures patriae sedis, Weinhold patria sede

9 nostrum cuiquam V

12 uestri pP^1V nostri PC | Gellius is emphatic for uestrum—see notes | miseriti PCV Gellius miserti or miserati C ad haec Q. Marcius respondit, siquid ab senatu pe- 34 tere vellent, ab armis discedant, Romam supplices proficiscantur: ea mansuetudine atque misericordia senatum populi Romani semper fuisse, ut nemo umquam ab eo frustra auxilium petiverit.

At Catilina ex itinere plerisque consularibus, 2 praeterea optumo cuique litteras mittit, se falsis criminibus circumventum, quoniam factioni inimi-corum resistere nequiverit, fortunae cedere, Massi-liam in exilium proficisci, non quo sibi tanti sceleris conscius esset, sed uti res publica quieta foret neve ex sua contentione seditio oreretur. ab his 3 longe divorsas litteras Q. Catulus in senatu reci-tavit, quas sibi nomine Catilinae redditas dicebat.
earum exemplum infra scriptum est. | 'L. Catilina 35
Q. Catulo. egregia tua fides re cognita, grata mihi magnis in meis periculis, fiduciam commendationi meae tribuit. quam ob rem defensionem in novo 2 consilio non statui parare, satisfactionem ex nulla conscientia de culpa proponere decrevi, quam me-diusfidius veram licet cognoscas. iniuriis contume- 3 liisque concitatus, quod fructu laboris industriaeque meae privatus statum dignitatis non optinebam, publicam miserorum causam pro mea consuetudine

1 respondet z (Dietsch)

12 oreretur P oriretur C

15 l. catilina salutem dicit q. catulo VP (but in P salutem dicit is written over the line) salutem dicit is omitted by some C, others have suo instead

16 grata mihi om. Schenkl. gratam (omitting mihi) Kortte

17 in magnis meis V

suscepi, non quin aes alienum meis nominibus ex possessionibus solvere possem,—et alienis nominibus liberalitas Orestillae suis filiaeque copiis persolveret, —sed quod non dignos homines honore honestatos videbam meque falsa suspicione alienatum esse sen-4 tiebam. hoc nomine satis honestas pro meo casu spes reliquae dignitatis conservandae sum secutus.
5 plura cum scribere vellem, nuntiatum est vim mihi
6 parari. nunc Orestillam commendo tuaeque fidei trado. eam ab iniuria defendas per liberos tuos rogatus. haveto'.

36 Sed ipse paucos dies commoratus apud C. Flaminium in agro Arretino, dum vicinitatem antea sollicitatam armis exornat, cum fascibus atque aliis imperi insignibus in castra ad Manlium contendit.
2 haec ubi Romae comperta sunt, senatus Catilinam et Manlium hostis iudicat, ceterae multitudini diem statuit, ante quam sine fraude liceret ab armis discedere praeter rerum capitalium condemna-
3 tis. praeterea decernit uti consules dilectum ha-

1 non quin PCV non quia C (Dietsch with non before possem retained) non qui...non Schmalz

2 soluere non possem et PCV s. n. p. cum et or sed C non added by later hand P^1. Jordan has in his text the conjectural reading solvere possem, at...persolveret: (see notes) solvere non possem, et Nipperdey Wirz nam et Schmalz cum vel Linker cum scilicet Dietsch et...persolvet Eussner et persolvebat Klimscha

9 orestillam tibi commendo V

12 flaminium flammam z (one, cod. Monacensis) C (one). Dietsch brackets it in his text

13 arretino P^1 reatinio P reatino C

beant, Antonius cum exercitu Catilinam persequi maturet, Cicero urbi praesidio sit.

Ea tempestate mihi imperium populi Romani 4
multo maxume miserabile visum est. cui cum ad occasum ab ortu solis omnia domita armis parerent, domi otium atque divitiae, quae prima mortales putant, adfluerent, fuere tamen cives qui seque remque publicam opstinatis animis perditum irent. namque duobus senati decretis ex tanta 5 multitudine neque praemio inductus coniurationem patefecerat neque ex castris Catilinae quisquam omnium discesserat: tanta vis morbi ac veluti tabes plerosque civium animos invaserat. neque 37 solum illis aliena mens erat, qui conscii coniurationis fuerant, sed omnino cuncta plebes nova-rum rerum studio Catilinae incepta probabat.
id adeo more suo videbatur facere. nam semper 2 3
in civitate quibus opes nullae sunt bonis invident, malos extollunt, vetera odere, nova exoptant, odio suarum rerum mutari omnia student, turba atque seditionibus sine cura aluntur, quoniam egestas facile habetur sine damno. sed urbana plebes ea 4 vero praeceps erat de multis causis. primum om- 5 nium, qui ubique probro atque petulantia maxume praestabant, item alii qui per dedecora patrimoniis

9 senati PP^{1}C (one) Charisius (quoting for that form)

12 ac veluti Haupt atque uti PC (Nipperdey) morbi erat, quae uti tabes Bursian? (Dietsch)

15 plebes PC plebs C

25 qui PC (in P^{1} over the line) om. a few Cz (so most editors)

amissis, postremo omnes, quos flagitium aut facinus domo expulerat, ei Romam sicut in sentinam
6 confluxerant. deinde multi memores Sullanae victoriae, quod ex gregariis militibus alios senatores videbant, alios ita divites ut regio victu atque
7 cultu aetatem agerent, sibi quisque, si in armis foret, ex victoria talia sperabat. praeterea iuventus, quae in agris manuum mercede inopiam toleraverat, privatis atque publicis largitionibus excita urbanum otium ingrato labori praetulerat. eos
8 atque alios omnis malum publicum alebat. quo minus mirandum est homines egentis, malis moribus maxuma spe, rei publicae iuxta ac sibi con-
9 suluisse. praeterea quorum victoria Sullae parentes proscripti, bona erepta, ius libertatis inminutum erat, haud sane alio animo belli eventum expecta-10 bant. ad hoc quicumque aliarum atque senatus partium erant, conturbari rem publicam quam mi-
11 nus valere ipsi malebant. id adeo malum multos
38 post annos in civitatem revorterat. nam postquam Cn. Pompeio et M. Crasso consulibus tribunicia potestas restituta est, homines adulescentes summam potestatem nacti, quibus aetas animusque ferox erat, coepere senatum criminando plebem exagitare, dein largiundo atque pollicitando magis
2 incendere, ita ipsi clari potentesque fieri. contra eos summa ope nitebatur pleraque nobilitas senatus
3 specie pro sua magnitudine. namque uti paucis verum absolvam, post illa tempora quicumque rem

3 Nipperdey proposed to transpose §§ 6 and 7
29 per illa z post Sullae Dietsch

publicam agitavere honestis nominibus, alii sicuti populi iura defenderent, pars quo senatus auctoritas maxuma foret, bonum publicum simulantes pro sua quisque potentia certabant. neque illis modestia 4 neque modus contentionis erat: utrique victoriam crudeliter exercebant. sed postquam Cn. Pompeius 39 ad bellum maritumum atque Mithridaticum missus est, plebis opes inminutae, paucorum potentia crevit. ei magistratus provincias aliaque omnia te- 2 nere, ipsi innoxii florentes sine metu aetatem agere ceterosque iudiciis terrere, quo plebem in magistratu placidius tractarent. sed ubi primum dubiis 3 rebus novandi spes oblata est, vetus certamen animos eorum adrexit. quodsi primo proelio Catilina 4 superior aut aequa manu discessisset, profecto magna clades atque calamitas rem publicam obpressisset, neque illis, qui victoriam adepti forent, diutius ea uti licuisset, quin defessis et exanguibus qui plus posset imperium atque libertatem extorqueret. fuere tamen extra coniurationem com- 5 plures, qui ad Catilinam initio profecti sunt. in eis erat Fulvius senatoris filius, quem retractum ex itinere parens necari iussit.

Isdem temporibus Romae Lentulus, sicuti Cati- 6

4 illis was struck out by Gruter (Kortte) neque illis modestia neque modus his Eussner

11 ceterosque PC que om. P[1]C (so most editors) | qui Kritz ceteros, qui plebem in magistratu placidius tractarent, iudiciis terrere Ritschl

12 tractabant is corrected to tractarent in P

17 si for qui Dietsch

22 fuluius PCz fului or a. fului z. Dietsch puts A in brackets.

lina praeceperat, quoscumque moribus aut fortuna novis rebus idoneos credebat, aut per se aut per alios sollicitabat, neque solum civis, sed cuiusque modi genus hominum, quod modo bello usui foret. 40 igitur P. Umbreno cuidam negotium dat, uti legatos Allobrogum requirat eosque, si possit, inpellat ad societatem belli, existumans publice privatimque aere alieno obpressos, praeterea, quod natura gens Gallica bellicosa esset, facile eos ad tale consilium 2 adduci posse. Umbrenus, quod in Gallia negotiatus erat, plerisque principibus civitatium notus erat atque eos noverat. itaque sine mora, ubi primum legatos in foro conspexit, percontatus pauca de statu civitatis et quasi dolens eius casum, requirere coepit, quem exitum tantis malis sperarent. 3 postquam illos videt queri de avaritia magistratuum, accusare senatum quod in eo auxili nihil esset, miseriis suis remedium mortem expectare, 'at ego' inquit 'vobis, si modo viri esse voltis, rationem ostendam, qua tanta ista mala effugiatis'. 4 haec ubi dixit Allobroges in maxumam spem adducti Umbrenum orare ut sui misereretur: nihil tam asperum neque tam difficile esse, quod non cupidissume facturi essent, dum ea res civitatem 5 aere alieno liberaret. ille eos in domum D. Bruti perducit, quod foro propinqua erat neque aliena consili propter Sempronium. nam tum Brutus ab 6 Roma aberat. praeterea Gabinium arcessit, quo

2 ipsé for per se Dietsch
11 ciuitatium PC ciuitatum C 27 ab roma C Priscianus ('inueniuntur tamen et cum praepositionibus nomina ciuitatum saepe prolata et maior auctoritas sermoni inesset. eo praesente coniurationem aperit, nominat socios, praeterea multos cuiusque generis, innoxios, quo legatis animus amplior esset. deinde eos pollicitos operam suam domum dimittit. sed Allobroges diu in incerto habuere quidnam consili caperent. in altera parte erat aes alienum studium belli magna merces in spe victoriae, at in altera maiores opes tuta consilia pro incerta spe certa praemia. haec illis volventibus tandem vicit fortuna rei publicae. itaque Q. Fabio Sangae, cuius patrocinio civitas plurumum utebatur, rem omnem uti cognoverant aperiunt. Cicero per Sangam consilio cognito legatis praecepit ut studium coniurationis vehementer simulent, ceteros adeant, bene polliceantur, dentque operam uti eos quam maxume manifestos habeant. 41 1 2 3 4 5

Isdem fere temporibus in Gallia citeriore atque ulteriore, item in agro Piceno Bruttio Apulia motus erat. namque illi, quos ante Catilina dimiserat, inconsulte ac veluti per dementiam cuncta simul agebant. nocturnis consiliis, armorum atque telorum portationibus, festinando agitando omnia plus timoris quam periculi effecerant. ex eo numero conpluris Q. Metellus Celer praetor ex senatus consulto causa cognita in vincula coniecerat, item in citeriore Gallia C. Murena, qui ei provinciae legatus praeerat. 42 1 2 3 maxime apud historicos', and he gives this passage—so other grammarians) romae P roma P^1 (with ab written over the line)

13 praecipit Linker (Dietsch)
16 manifestos P but in 52. 36 manufestos PV
17 citeriore PC ulteriore Kortte (Dietsch)

43 At Romae Lentulus cum ceteris, qui principes coniurationis erant, paratis ut videbantur magnis copiis, constituerant uti, cum Catilina in agrum Faesulanum cum exercitu venisset, L. Bestia tribunus plebis contione habita quereretur de actionibus Ciceronis bellique gravissumi invidiam optumo consuli inponeret. eo signo proxuma nocte cetera multitudo coniurationis sum quisque negotium
2 exequeretur. sed ea divisa hoc modo dicebantur: Statilius et Gabinius uti cum magna manu duodecim simul opportuna loca urbis incenderent, quo tumultu facilior aditus ad consulem ceterosque quibus insidiae parabantur fieret; Cethegus Ciceronis ianuam obsideret eumque vi aggrederetur, alius autem alium, sed filii familiarum, quorum ex nobilitate maxuma pars erat, parentis interficerent, simul caede et incendio perculsis omnibus ad
3 Catilinam erumperent. inter haec parata atque decreta Cethegus semper querebatur de ignavia sociorum: illos dubitando et dies prolatando magnas opportunitates conrumpere, facto non consulto in tali periculo opus esse seque, si pauci adiuvarent, languentibus aliis impetum in curiam facturum.
4 natura ferox vehemens manu promptus erat, maxumum bonum in celeritate putabat.

2 uidebantur C (one) z uidebatur PC
3 constituerant PC constituerat C
4 Aesulanum (Aefulanum?) Rauchenstein Carsulanum or Trossulanam Dietsch suburbanum Wirz (but both D. and Wirz in their texts merely dagger Faesulanum)
8 quisque Cz quaeque PC
20 in dies prolatando Eussner
21 consulto C consultando PC

Sed Allobroges ex praecepto Ciceronis per Ga- 44
binium ceteros conveniunt. ab Lentulo Cethego Statilio item Cassio postulant ius iurandum, quod signatum ad civis perferant: aliter haud facile eos ad tantum negotium inpelli posse. ceteri nihil 2 suspicantes dant, Cassius semet eo brevi venturum pollicetur ac paulo ante legatos ex urbe proficisci-tur. Lentulus cum eis T. Volturcium quendam 3 Crotoniensem mittit, ut Allobroges prius quam domum pergerent, cum Catilina data atque accepta fide societatem confirmarent. ipse Volturcio litte- 4 ras ad Catilinam dat, quarum exemplum infra scriptum est. 'Quis sim ex eo quem ad te misi 5 cognosces. fac cogites in quanta calamitate sis, et memineris te virum esse. consideres quid tuae rationes postulent. auxilium petas ab omnibus, etiam ab infimis'. ad hoc mandata verbis dat: 6 cum ab senatu hostis iudicatus sit, quo consilio servitia repudiet? in urbe parata esse quae iusserit.
ne cunctetur ipse propius adcedere. his rebus ita 45
actis, constituta nocte qua proficiscerentur, Cicero per legatos cuncta edoctus L. Valerio Flacco et C. Pomptino praetoribus imperat ut in ponte Mulvio per insidias Allobrogum comitatus depre-hendant. rem omnem aperit, cuius gratia mitte-bantur, cetera, uti facto opus sit, ita agant permittit. illi, homines militares, sine tumultu 2 praesidiis conlocatis, sicuti praeceptum erat, occulte pontem obsidunt. postquam ad id loci legati 3

13 quis C qui PCV (Meusel Schmals Scheindler)
27 illi with s erased P illi P^1 illis C

cum Volturcio venerunt et simul utrimque clamor exortus est, Galli cito cognito consilio sine mora praetoribus se tradunt, Volturcius primo cohortatus ceteros gladio se a multitudine defendit, deinde ubi a legatis desertus est, multa prius de salute sua Pomptinum obtestatus, quod ei notus erat, postremo timidus ac vitae diffidens velut hostibus sese praetoribus dedit.

46 Quibus rebus confectis omnia propere per nuntios consuli declarantur. at illum ingens cura atque laetitia simul occupavere. nam laetabatur intellegens coniuratione patefacta civitatem periculis ereptam esse, porro autem anxius erat, dubitans in maxumo scelere tantis civibus deprehensis quid facto opus esset: poenam illorum sibi oneri, impunitatem perdundae rei publicae fore credebat. igitur confirmato animo vocari ad sese iubet Lentulum Cethegum Statilium Gabinium itemque Caeparium Terracinensem, qui in Apuliam ad concitanda servitia proficisci parabat. ceteri sine mora veniunt, Caeparius paulo ante domo egressus cognito indicio ex urbe profugerat. consul Lentulum, quod praetor erat, ipse manu tenens [in senatum] perducit, reliquos cum custodibus in aedem Concordiae venire iubet. eo senatum advocat magnaque frequentia eius ordinis Volturcium cum legatis introducit, Flaccum praetorem scrinium cum litteris,

15 esset C sit C (inferior) erat P

18 quendam before in P^1 (Dietsch), or after caeparium C om. PC

19 terracinensem PC tarracinensem C (so most editors)

23 in senatum om. Kortte (Dietsch Wirz Schmalz).

quas a legatis acceperat, eodem adferre iubet. Vol- 47 turcius interrogatus de itinere, de litteris, postremo quid aut qua de causa consili habuisset, primo fingere alia, dissimulare de coniuratione; post ubi fide publica dicere iussus est, omnia uti gesta erant aperit docetque se paucis ante diebus a Gabinio et Caepario socium adscitum nihil amplius scire quam legatos, tantum modo audire solitum ex Gabinio
P. Autronium Ser. Sullam L. Vargunteium, multos praeterea in ea coniuratione esse. eadem Galli 2 fatentur ac Lentulum dissimulantem coarguunt praeter litteras sermonibus, quos ille habere solitus erat, ex libris Sibyllinis regnum Romae tribus Corneliis portendi; Cinnam atque Sullam antea, se tertium esse, cui fatum foret urbis potiri. praeterea ab incenso Capitolio illum esse vigesumum annum, quem saepe ex prodigiis haruspices respondissent bello civili cruentum fore. igitur perlectis litteris, 3 cum prius omnes signa sua cognovissent, senatus decernit uti abdicato magistratu Lentulus itemque ceteri in liberis custodiis habeantur. itaque Len- 4 tulus P. Lentulo Spintheri, qui tum aedilis erat, Cethegus Q. Cornificio Statilius C. Caesari Gabinius
M. Crasso Caeparius—nam is paulo ante ex fuga retractus erat—Cn. Terentio senatori traduntur.

Interea plebs coniuratione patefacta, quae primo 48
cupida rerum novarum nimis bello favebat, mutata mente Catilinae consilia execrari, Ciceronem ad caelum tollere: veluti ex servitute erepta gaudium atque laetitiam agitabat. namque alia belli faci- 2

7 Kvičala would strike out nihil:..legatos

nora praedae magis quam detrimento fore, incendium vero crudele inmoderatum ac sibi maxume calamitosum putabat, quippe cui omnes copiae in usu cotidiano et cultu corporis erant.

3 Post eum diem quidam L. Tarquinius ad senatum adductus erat, quem ad Catilinam proficiscentem ex itinere retractum aiebant. is cum se diceret indicaturum de coniuratione, si fides publica data esset, iussus a consule quae sciret edicere, eadem fere quae Volturcius de paratis incendiis de caede bonorum de itinere hostium senatum docet; praeterea se missum a M. Crasso, qui Catilinae nuntiaret ne eum Lentulus et Cethegus aliique ex coniuratione deprehensi terrerent, eoque magis properaret ad urbem adcedere, quo et ceterorum animos reficeret et illi facilius e periculo eriperentur. sed ubi Tarquinius Crassum nominavit, hominem nobilem, maxumis divitiis summa potentia, alii rem incredibilem rati, pars tametsi verum existumabant, tamen quia in tali tempore tanta vis hominis magis leniunda quam exagitanda videbatur, plerique Crasso ex negotiis privatis obnoxii conclamant indicem falsum esse deque ea re postulant uti referatur. itaque consulente Cicerone frequens senatus decernit, Tarquini indicium falsum videri eumque in vinculis retinendum neque amplius potestatem faciundam, nisi de eo indicaret, cuius consilio tantam rem esset mentitus. erant eo tempore qui existumarent indicium illud a P. Autronio machinatum, quo facilius appellato Crasso per societatem periculi reliquos illius potentia tegeret. alii Tarquinium a Cicerone inmissum aiebant, ne Crassus more suo suscepto malorum patrocinio rem publicam conturbaret. ipsum Crassum ego postea praedicantem audivi, 9 tantam illam contumeliam sibi ab Cicerone inpositam.

Sed isdem temporibus Q. Catulus et C. Piso 49 neque pretio neque gratia Ciceronem inpellere potuere, uti per Allobroges aut alium indicem C. Caesar falso nominaretur. nam uterque cum 2 illo gravis inimicitias exercebant: Piso oppugnatus in iudicio pecuniarum repetundarum propter cuiusdam transpadani supplicium iniustum, Catulus ex petitione pontificatus odio incensus, quod extrema aetate, maxumis honoribus usus, ab adulescentulo Caesare victus discesserat. res autem opportuna 3 videbatur, quod is privatim egregia liberalitate, publice maxumis muneribus grandem pecuniam debebat. sed ubi consulem ad tantum facinus in- 4 pellere nequeunt, ipsi singillatim circumeundo atque ementiundo quae se ex Volturcio aut Allobrogibus audisse dicerent, magnam illi invidiam conflaverant, usque eo ut non nulli equites Romani, qui praesidi causa cum telis erant circum aedem Concordiae, seu periculi magnitudine seu animi

7 neque pretio neque gratia Priscianus Septimius (see notes) neque precibus neque gratia neque pretio PC (Kortte Kritz Kvicala Scheindler) neque gratia neque precibus neque pretio z

8 potuere P impelli quiuit Priscian inlici quiuit Septimius—impellere quivere Putsche (Dietsch Wirz)

10 exercebant PC exercebat pC

19 singillatim P singulatim P (so in J. 42. 5)

22 eo PC adeo C

mobilitate inpulsi, quo studium suum in rem publicam clarius esset, egredienti ex senatu Caesari gladio minitarentur.

50 Dum haec in sènatu aguntur et dum legatis Allobrogum et T. Volturcio, conprobato eorum indicio, praemia decernuntur, liberti et pauci ex clientibus Lentuli divorsis itineribus opifices atque servitia in vicis ad eum eripiundum sollicitabant, partim exquirebant duces multitudinum, qui pretio 2 rem publicam vexare soliti erant. Cethegus autem per nuntios familiam atque libertos suos lectos et exercitatos orabat [in audaciam] ut grege facto cum 3 telis ad sese inrumperent. consul ubi ea parari cognovit, dispositis praesidiis, ut res atque tempus monebat, convocato senatu refert quid de eis fieri placeat, qui in custodiam traditi erant. sed eos paulo ante frequens senatus iudicaverat contra rem 4 publicam fecisse. tum D. Iunius Silanus primus sententiam rogatus, quod eo tempore consul designatus erat, de eis qui in custodiis tenebantur et praeterea de L. Cassio P. Furio P. Umbreno Q. Annio, si deprehensi forent, supplicium sumundum decreverat isque postea permotus oratione C. Caesaris pedibus in sententiam Ti. Neronis iturum se dixerat, quod de ea re praesidiis additis referundum

12 orabat in audaciam PC in audaciam orabat z in audaciam om. z (one)—orabat in auxilium W. Wagner vocabat in audaciam Scheindler

20 et om. Wirz (cp. 25. 2)

25 quod de PC qui de P^1C (Wirz Dietsch) one MS has quid | abditis PP^1 (over remotis)—acc. to Dietsch and Wirz, and additis appears only in one C, where acc. to censuerat. sed Caesar, ubi ad eum ventum est, 5 rogatus sententiam a consule huiuscemodi verba locutus est.

'Omnis homines, patres conscripti, qui de rebus 51
dubiis consultant, ab odio amicitia ira atque misericordia vacuos esse decet. haud facile animus verum 2 providet, ubi illa officiunt, neque quisquam omnium lubidini simul et usui paruit. ubi intenderis inge- 3 nium, valet: si lubido possidet, ea dominatur, animus nihil valet. magna mihi copia est memorandi, patres 4 conscripti, qui reges atque populi ira aut misericordia inpulsi male consuluerint. sed ea malo dicere, quae maiores nostri contra lubidinem animi sui recte atque ordine fecere. bello Macedonico, 5 quod cum rege Perse gessimus, Rhodiorum civitas magna atque magnifica, quae populi Romani opibus creverat, infida atque advorsa nobis fuit. sed postquam bello confecto de Rhodiis consultum est, maiores nostri, nequis divitiarum magis quam iniuriae causa bellum inceptum diceret, inpunitos eos dimisere. item bellis Punicis omnibus, cum saepe 6 Carthaginienses et in pace et per indutias multa nefaria facinora fecissent, numquam ipsi per occasionem talia fecere: magis quid se dignum foret

Dietsch it is written over the line—additis Dietsch abductis Wirz (Schmalz)

7 Jordan has providet:—a misprint?

11 qui PC quae p in margin P^1CV Arusianus: consulo illam rem...et Sal. cat. quae...consuluerunt v. l. -int (Dietsch Wirz)

12 consuluerint PC consulerunt V

17 atque PC et p (in margin) CV (Dietsch Schmalz) quam quid in illos iure fieri posset quaerebant.

7 hoc item vobis providendum est, patres conscripti, ne plus apud vos valeat P. Lentuli et ceterorum scelus quam vostra dignitas, neu magis irae vostrae 8 quam famae consulatis. nam si digna poena pro factis eorum reperitur, novom consilium adprobo:
sin magnitudo sceleris omnium ingenia exsuperat, eis utendum censeo quae legibus comparata sunt.
9 plerique eorum, qui ante me sententias dixerunt, composite atque magnifice casum rei publicae mise-rati sunt. quae belli saevitia esset, quae victis acciderent, enumeravere; rapi virgines, divelli liberos a parentum complexu, matres familiarum pati quae victoribus conlubuisset, fana atque domos spoliari, caedem incendia fieri, postremo armis cada-10 veribus cruore atque luctu omnia compleri. sed, per deos inmortalis, quo illa oratio pertinuit? an uti vos infestos coniurationi faceret? scilicet quem res tanta et tam atrox non permovit, eum oratio ac-11 cendet. non ita est, neque cuiquam mortalium iniuriae suae parvae videntur: multi eas gravius 12 aequo habuere. sed alia aliis licentia est, patres conscripti. qui demissi in obscuro vitam habent, siquid iracundia deliquere, pauci sciunt, fama atque

4 neu PC neue CV
8 his utendum CV his om. P
9 sententiam V
14 conlibuisset z (Wirz) conlibuissent PCV (Dietsch Schmalz)
15 ruinis for armis Wecklein
19 permouit PC permouet p (in margin) V | accendet PC accendit p (in margin) CV
23 habent PC agunt p (in margin) GV

fortuna eorum pares sunt: qui magno imperio praediti in excelso aetatem agunt, eorum facta cuncti mortales novere. ita in maxuma fortuna minuma licentia est. neque studēre neque odisse, sed minume irasci decet. quae apud alios iracundia dicitur, ea in imperio superbia atque crudelitas appellatur. equidem ego sic existumo, patres conscripti, omnis cruciatus minores quam facinora illorum esse. sed plerique mortales postrema meminere, et in hominibus inpiis sceleris eorum obliti de poena disserunt, si ea paulo saevior fuit. D. Silanum virum fortem atque strenuum certo scio quae dixerit studio rei publicae dixisse neque illum in tanta re gratiam aut inimicitias exercere: eos mores eamque modestiam viri cognovi. verum sententia eius mihi non crudelis—quid enim in talis homines crudele fieri potest?—sed aliena a re publica nostra videtur. nam profecto aut metus aut iniuria te subegit, Silane, consulem designatum genus poenae novom decernere. de timore supervacuaneum est disserere, cum praesertim diligentiā clarissumi viri consulis tanta praesidia sint in armis. de poena possum equidem dicere id quod res habet, in luctu atque miseriis mortem aerumnarum requiem non cruciatum esse, eam cuncta mortalium mala dissolvere, ultra neque curae neque gaudio locum esse. sed, per deos inmortalis, quam ob rem in sententiam

1 eorum om. Kortte
11 seuior PC seuerior *P*¹*CV*—so most editors
20 superuscuaneum PCV superuscaneum p (in margin)
22 in armis sint V
27 sententiam PC sententia *P*¹*CV*

non addidisti, uti prius verberibus in eos animad-22 verteretur? | an quia lex Porcia vetat? at aliae leges item condemnatis civibus non animam eripi sed 23 exilium permitti iubent. an quia gravius est verbe-rari quam necari? quid autem acerbum aut nimis 24 grave est in homines tanti facinoris convictos? sin quia levius est, qui convenit in minore negotio 25 legem timere, cum eam in maiore neglegeris? at enim quis reprehendet, quod in parricidas rei publicae decretum erit? tempus dies fortuna, cuius lu-bido gentibus moderatur. illis merito accidet quid-26 quid evenerit. ceterum vos, patres conscripti, quid 27 in alios statuatis considerate. omnia mala exempla ex rebus bonis orta sunt. sed ubi imperium ad ignaros [eius] aut minus bonos pervenit, novom illud exemplum ab dignis et idoneis ad indignos 28 et non idoneos transfertur. Lacedaemonii devictis Atheniensibus triginta viros inposuere, qui rem 29 publicam eorum tractarent. ei primo coepere pes-sumum quemque et omnibus invisum indemnatum necare. ea populus laetari et merito dicere fieri.
30 post ubi paulatim licentia crevit, iuxta bonos et malos lubidinose interficere, ceteros metu terrere:
31 ita civitas servitute obpressa stultae laetitiae gravis

1 in eos uerberibus V

3 item de condemnatis V

8 neglegeris PC (only one perhaps) neglexeris CV

14 bonis PCV domesticis C (inferior: a conjecture suggested by § 37?) ex bonis Schöll (Wirz Schmalz) ex re bonis Klimscha

15 ignaros eius CV the eius has been erased in P and in some C ignauos C (one) ciues C (one) | bonum for novom Gründel

poenas dedit. nostra memoria victor Sulla cum 32 Damasippum et alios eiusmodi, qui malo rei publicae creverant, iugulari iussit, quis non factum eius laudabat? homines scelestos et factiosos, qui seditionibus rem publicam exagitaverant, merito necatos aiebant. sed ea res magnae initium cladis fuit. 33 nam uti quisque domum aut villam, postremo vas aut vestimentum alicuius concupiverat, dabat operam ut is in proscriptorum numero esset. ita illi, quibus 34 Damasippi mors laetitiae fuerat, paulo post ipsi trahebantur, neque prius finis iugulandi fuit quam Sulla omnis suos divitiis explevit. atque ego haec 35 non in M. Tullio neque his temporibus vereor, sed in magna civitate multa et varia ingenia sunt.
potest alio tempore alio consule, cui item exercitus 36 in manu sit, falsum aliquid pro vero credi: ubi hoc exemplo per senatus decretum consul gladium eduxerit, quis illi finem statuet aut quis moderabitur? maiores nostri, patres conscripti, neque 37 consili neque audaciae umquam eguere, neque illis superbia obstabat quo minus aliena instituta, si modo proba erant, imitarentur. arma atque tela 38 militaria ab Samnitibus, insignia magistratuum ab Tuscis pleraque sumpserunt. postremo quod ubique apud socios aut hostis idoneum videbatur, cum summo studio domi exequebantur, imitari quam invidere bonis malebant. sed eodem illo tempore 39

6 initium magnae cladis V
10 fuit V
12 atque haec ego V
22 arma tela atque militaria C (two)

Graeciae morem imitati verberibus animadvortebant in civis, de condemnatis summum supplicium sume-40 bant. postquam res publica adolevit et multitudine civium factiones valuere, circumveniri innocentes, alia huiuscemodi fieri coepere, tum lex Porcia aliaeque leges paratae sunt, quibus legibus 41 exilium damnatis permissum est. hanc ego causam, patres conscripti, quo minus novom consilium capia-
42 mus in primis magnam puto. profecto virtus atque sapientia maior illis fuit, qui ex parvis opibus tantum imperium fecere quam in nobis, qui ea bene
43 parta vix retinemus. placet igitur eos dimitti et augeri exercitum Catilinae? minume. sed ita censeo, publicandas eorum pecunias, ipsos in vinculis habendos per municipia, quae maxume opibus valent, neu quis de eis postea ad senatum referat neve cum populo agat: qui aliter fecerit, senatum existumare eum contra rem publicam et salutem omnium facturum'.

52 Postquam Caesar dicundi finem fecit, ceteri verbo alius alii varie adsentiebantur. at M. Porcius Cato rogatus sententiam huiuscemodi orationem habuit.

2 'Longe mihi alia mens est, patres conscripti, cum res atque pericula nostra considero et cum sententias non nullorum ipse mecum reputo. illi mihi

1 Graeciae morem imitati Döderlein would place after coepere tum § 40 Dietsch brackets the words
4 circumueniri V circumuenire PC
10 illis PCV in illis P^1 (Wirz Dietsch)
16 neu quis PC ne quis pCV
24 mihi alia PC alia mihi V

disseruisse videntur de poena eorum, qui patriae parentibus aris atque focis suis bellum paravere. res autem monet cavere ab illis magis quam quid in illos statuamus consultare. nam cetera malificia 4 tum persequare, ubi facta sunt, hoc nisi provideris ne accidat, ubi evenit, frustra iudicia inplores: capta urbe nihil fit reliqui victis. sed, per deos 5 inmortalis, vos ego appello, qui semper domos villas signa tabulas vostras pluris quam rem publicam fecistis: si ista cuiuscumque modi sunt quae amplexamini retinere, si voluptatibus vostris otium praebere voltis, expergiscimini aliquando et capessite rem publicam. non agitur de vectigalibus neque de sociorum iniuriis: libertas et anima nostra 6 in dubio est. saepe numero, patres conscripti, 7 multa verba in hoc ordine feci, saepe de luxuria atque avaritia nostrorum civium questus sum, multosque mortalis ea causa advorsos habeo: qui mihi 8 atque animo meo nullius umquam delicti gratiam fecissem, haud facile alterius lubidini malefacta condonabam. sed ea tametsi vos parvi pendebatis, 9 tamen res publica firma erat, opulentia neglegentiam tolerabat. nunc vero non id agitur, bonisne 10 an malis moribus vivamus, neque quantum aut quam magnificum imperium populi Romani sit, sed haec cuiuscumque modi videntur, nostra an nobiscum una hostium futura sint. hic mihi quisquam 11 mansuetudinem et misericordiam nominat. iam

5 tunc P
8 uos ego PCV ego uos C
10 ista PC ita CV
28 nominat? Wörner

pridem equidem nos vera vocabula rerum amisimus. quia bona aliena largiri liberalitas, malarum rerum audacia fortitudo vocatur, eo res publica in ex-12 tremo sita est. sint sane, quoniam ita se mores habent, liberales ex sociorum fortunis, sint miseri- 5 cordes in furibus aerari; ne illi sanguinem nostrum largiantur et, dum paucis sceleratis parcunt, bonos 13 omnis perditum eant. bene et composite C. Caesar paulo ante in hoc ordine de vita et morte disseruit, credo, falsa existumans ea quae de inferis memoran- 10 tur, divorso itinere malos a bonis loca taetra in-14 culta foeda atque formidulosa habere. itaque censuit pecunias eorum publicandas, ipsos per municipia in custodiis habendos, videlicet timens ne, si Romae sint, aut a popularibus coniurationis aut a 15 15 multitudine conducta per vim eripiantur. quasi vero mali atque scelesti tantum modo in urbe et non per totam Italiam sint, aut non ibi plus possit audacia, ubi ad defendundum opes minores sunt.
16 quare vanum equidem hoc consilium est, si pericu- 20 lum ex illis metuit: sin in tanto omnium metu solus non timet, eo magis refert me mihi atque 17 vobis timere. quare cum de P. Lentulo ceterisque statuetis, pro certo habetote vos simul de exercitu 18 Catilinae et de omnibus coniuratis decernere. quanto vos attentius ea agetis, tanto illis animus infirmior erit: si paululum modo vos languere viderint,

4 sita est CV positaē P
7 sceleratis PC scelestis p (in margin) V
21 sin C (?) si PCV
26 attentius PC intentius p (in margin) V Scheindler 27 paululum PC paulum CV (Vogel W[illegible]

iam omnes feroces aderunt. nolite existumare, maiores nostros armis rem publicam ex parva magnam fecisse. si ita res esset, multo pulcherrumam eam nos haberemus, quippe sociorum atque civium, praeterea armorum atque equorum maior copia nobis quam illis est. sed alia fuere quae illos magnos fecere, quae nobis nulla sunt, domi industria foris iustum imperium, animus in consulundo liber neque delicto neque lubidini obnoxius. pro his nos habemus luxuriam atque avaritiam, publice egestatem privatim opulentiam. laudamus divitias sequimur inertiam. inter bonos et malos discrimen nullum, omnia virtutis praemia ambitio possidet. | neque mirum. ubi vos separatim sibi quisque consilium capitis, ubi domi voluptatibus, hic pecuniae aut gratiae servitis, eo fit ut impetus fiat in vacuam rem publicam. | sed ego haec omitto. coniuravere nobilissumi cives patriam incendere, Gallorum gentem infestissumam nomini Romano ad bellum arcessunt. dux hostium cum exercitu [supra caput est. vos cunctamini etiam nunc et dubitatis, quid intra moenia deprensis hostibus faciatis? misereamini censeo—deliquere homines adulescentuli per ambitionem—atque etiam armatos dimittatis, ne ista vobis mansuetudo et misericordia, si illi arma cepe-

3 res PCV om. C (inferior) Augustine res added by second hand P^1

12 discrimen nullum PCV Augustine nullum discrimen (or d. n.) est C

21 et dubitas Hertz proposed to strike out

22 deprensis PCV deprehensis or adprehensis C | misereamini PC miseremini CV

28 rint, in miseriam convortat. scilicet res ipsa aspera est, sed vos non timetis eam. immo vero maxume.
sed inertia et mollitia animi alius alium expectan-tes cunctamini, videlicet dis inmortalibus confisi, qui hanc rem publicam saepe in maxumis periculis 29 servavere. non votis neque suppliciis muliebribus auxilia deorum parantur: vigilando agundo bene consulundo prospera omnia cedunt. ubi socordiae te atque ignaviae tradideris, nequiquam deos in-30 plores: irati infestique sunt. apud maiores nostros
A. Manlius Torquatus bello Gallico filium suum, quod is contra imperium in hostem pugnaverat, 31 necari iussit, atque ille egregius adulescens inmoderatae fortitudinis morte poenas dedit. vos de crudelissumis parricidis quid statuatis cunctamini?
32 videlicet cetera vita eorum huic sceleri obstat.
33 verum parcite dignitati Lentuli, si ipse pudicitiae, si famae suae, si dis aut hominibus umquam ullis pepercit. ignoscite Cethegi adulescentiae, nisi 34 iterum patriae bellum fecit. nam quid ego de Gabinio Statilio Caepario loquar? quibus si quicquam umquam pensi fuisset, non ea consilia de re 35 publica habuissent. postremo, patres conscripti, si mehercule peccato locus esset, facile paterer vos ipsa re corrigi, quoniam verba contemnitis. sed

6 neque CV atque C atque is altered to neque P
8 prospera omnia P prospere omnia P^1V Servius (Wirz)
11 aulus P Ă V t or g z
17 uerum C uero PCV
18 aut PC atque p (in margin) CV
20 iterum PCV iterum iam C
21 statilio gabinio V (Vogel)

undique circumventi sumus: Catilina cum exercitu faucibus urget, alii intra moenia atque in sinu urbis sunt hostes, neque parari neque consuli quicquam potest occulte: quo magis properandum est. quare ego ita censeo: cum nefario consilio sceleratorum civium res publica in maxuma pericula venerit, eique indicio T. Volturci et legatorum Allobrogum convicti confessique sint caedem incendia aliaque foeda atque crudelia facinora in civis patriamque paravisse, de confessis sicuti de manufestis rerum capitalium more maiorum supplicium sumundum'.

53 Postquam Cato adsedit, consulares omnes itemque senatus magna pars sententiam eius laudant, virtutem animi ad caelum ferunt, alii alios increpantes timidos vocant, Cato clarus atque magnus habetur, senati decretum fit, sicuti ille censuerat.

Sed mihi multa legenti multa audienti, quae populus Romanus domi militiaeque mari atque terra praeclara facinora fecit, forte lubuit adtendere, quae res maxume tanta negotia sustinuisset. sciebam saepe numero parva manu cum magnis legionibus hostium contendisse. cognoveram parvis copiis bella gesta cum opulentis regibus, ad hoc saepe fortunae violentiam toleravisse, facundia

2 faucibus (or in faucibus) italiae urget z in faucibus Etruriae agit Linker | in sinu urbis PC urbis om. V (Dietsch brackets) in senatu Linker intra moenia atque and urbis Hertz proposed to omit

4 potest occulte PC occulte potest CV

5 ego ita PCV ita ego C ego om. Selling

16 senat• (i erased) P Charisius and Priscianus quote for senati

4 Graecos gloria belli Gallos ante Romanos fuisse. ac mihi multa agitanti constabat paucorum civium egregiam virtutem cuncta patravisse eoque factum uti divitias paupertas, multitudinem paucitas supe-5 raret. sed postquam luxu atque desidia civitas 5 conrupta est, rursus res publica magnitudine sua imperatorum atque magistratuum vitia sustentabat ac, sicuti effeta parente, multis tempestatibus haud 6 sane quisquam Romae virtute magnus fuit. sed memoria mea ingenti virtute divorsis moribus fuere 10 viri duo M. Cato et C. Caesar: quos quoniam res obtulerat, silentio praeterire non fuit consilium, quin utriusque naturam et mores, quantum ingenio 54 possem, aperirem. igitur eis genus aetas eloquen-tia prope aequalia fuere, magnitudo animi par, item 15 2 gloria, sed alia alii. Caesar beneficiis ac munificen-tia magnus habebatur, integritate vitae Cato. ille mansuetudine et misericordia clarus factus, huic 3 severitas dignitatem addiderat. Caesar dando sublevando ignoscundo, Cato nihil largiundo gloriam 20 adeptus est. in altero miseris perfugium erat, in altero malis pernicies. illius facilitas, huius con-4 stantia laudabatur. postremo Caesar in animum induxerat laborare, vigilare, negotiis amicorum in-

2 multum Eussner

8 sicuti PC ueluti C (a few) | effeta parente z effeta parentum PC—effeta virtute parentum Allen Klimscha effeta aetate parentum Dietsch (1859) sicut vi effeta parentum Weidemann sicuti effeta vi parentum Ritschl sicuti esset effeta (sc. res publica) Wirz effoetae partuum (sc. Romae) Bezzenberger

9 virtute om. Allen Klimscha

14 possem C possum PC

tentus sua neglegere, nihil denegare quod dono dignum esset, sibi magnum imperium exercitum bellum novom exoptabat, ubi virtus enitescere posset. at Catoni studium modestiae decoris, sed maxume severitatis erat. non divitiis cum divite neque factione cum factioso, sed cum strenuo virtute cum modesto pudore cum innocente abstinentia certabat, esse quam videri bonus malebat: ita quo minus petebat gloriam, eo magis illum sequebatur.

Postquam, ut dixi, senatus in Catonis sententiam discessit, consul optumum factu ratus noctem quae instabat antecapere, nequid eo spatio novaretur, triumviros quae [ad] supplicium postulabat parare iubet, ipse praesidiis dispositis Lentulum in carcerem deducit. Idem fit ceteris per praetores. est in carcere locus quod Tullianum appellatur, ubi paululum ascenderis ad laevam, circiter duodecim pedes humi depressus. eum muniunt undique parietes atque insuper camera lapideis fornicibus iuncta, sed incultu tenebris odore foeda atque terribilis eius facies est. in eum locum postquam demissus est Lentulus, vindices rerum capitalium, quibus

55

9 eo illum magis sequebatur Augustine eo magis illum assequebatur PC illam C sequebatur C '(one) eo magis illa sequebatur z (one) (Dietsch)—eo magis illum ea s. Scheindler

13 tresviros Dietsch Wirz Schmalz | ad erased or written over the line in some C postulabant C (one)

17 ascenderis PC descenderis z ('rightly perhaps' Jordan)

20 iuncta PC uincta C | incultu PC inculta C

22 uindices C et indices PCz—Kortte struck out uindices r. capitalium

6 praeceptum erat, laqueo gulam fregere. ita ille patricius ex gente clarissuma Corneliorum, qui consulare imperium Romae habuerat, dignum moribus factisque suis exitium vitae invenit. de Cethego Statilio Gabinio Caepario eodem modo supplicium sumptum est.

56 Dum ea Romae geruntur, Catilina ex omni copia, quam et ipse adduxerat et Manlius habuerat, 2 duas legiones instituit, | cohortis pro numero militum complet, deinde, ut quisque voluntarius aut ex sociis in castra venerat, aequaliter distribuerat, ac brevi spatio legiones numero hominum expleverat, cum initio non amplius duobus milibus habuisset. 3 sed ex omni copia circiter pars quarta erat militaribus armis instructa, ceteri, ut quemque casus armaverat, sparos aut lanceas, alii praeacutas sudis 4 portabant. sed postquam Antonius cum exercitu adventabat, Catilina per montis iter facere, modo ad urbem modo in Galliam vorsus castra movere, hostibus occasionem pugnandi non dare: sperabat propediem magnas copias sese habiturum, si Romae 5 socii incepta patravissent. interea servitia repudiabat, cuius initio ad eum magnae copiae concurrebant, opibus coniurationis fretus, simul alienum suis rationibus existumans videri causam civium 57 cum servis fugitivis communicavisse. sed postquam in castra nuntius pervenit Romae coniuratio-

4 exitum for exitium Vogel Wirz

19 in galliam Priscianus in om. PC (except the inferior which have in or ad)

20 sperabat PC sperans C

nem patefactam, de Lentulo et Cethego ceterisque, quos supra memoravi, supplicium sumptum, plerique, quos ad bellum spes rapinarum aut novarum rerum studium inlexerat, dilabuntur, reliquos Catilina per montis asperos magnis itineribus in agrum Pistoriensem abducit eo consilio, uti per tramites occulte perfugeret in Galliam transalpinam. at 2 Q. Metellus Celer cum tribus legionibus in agro Piceno praesidebat; ex difficultate rerum eadem illa existumans, quae supra diximus Catilinam agitare. igitur ubi iter eius ex perfugis cognovit, 3 castra propere movit ac sub ipsis radicibus montium consedit, qua illi descensus erat in Galliam properanti. neque tamen Antonius procul aberat, 4 utpote qui magno exercitu locis aequioribus expeditus [in fuga] sequeretur. sed Catilina postquam 5 videt montibus atque copiis hostium sese clausum, in urbe res advorsas, neque fugae neque praesidi ullam spem, optumum factu ratus in tali re fortunam belli temptare, statuit cum Antonio quam primum confligere. itaque contione advocata huiusce- 6 modi orationem habuit.

'Compertum ego habeo, milites, verba virtutem 58
non addere, neque ex ignavo strenuum neque fortem ex timido exercitum oratione imperatoris fieri. quanta cuiusque animo audacia natura aut moribus 2 inest, tanta in bello patere solet. quem neque

7 Dietsch brackets Transalpinam

15 expeditus z expeditos PC in fugam a few MSS — expeditus inpeditos in fuga Dietsch (1859) expeditus tardatos in fuga Ritschl expedito in fuga Wirz impeditos in fuga F. Uber gloria neque pericula excitant, nequiquam hortere:

3 timor animi auribus officit. sed ego vos, quo pauca monerem, advocavi, simul uti causam mei consili 4 aperirem. scitis equidem, milites, socordia atque ignavia Lentuli quantam ipsi nobisque cladem attu- 2 lerit quoque modo, dum ex urbe praesidia opperior, 5 in Galliam proficisci nequiverim. nunc vero quo loco res nostrae sint, iuxta mecum omnes intellegi-6 tis. exercitus hostium duo, unus ab urbe alter a Gallia obstant. diutius in his locis esse, si maxume 10 animus ferat, frumenti atque aliarum rerum egestas 7 prohibet. quocumque ire placet, ferro iter aperiun-8 dum est. qua propter vos moneo uti forti atque parato animo sitis et, cum proelium inibitis, memineritis vos divitias decus gloriam, praeterea liberta- 15 9 tem atque patriam in dextris vostris portare. si vincimus, omnia nobis tuta erunt, commeatus abunde, municipia atque coloniae patebunt: si 10 metu cesserimus, eadem illa advorsa fient, neque locus neque amicus quisquam teget quem arma non 20 11 texerint. praeterea, milites, non eadem nobis et illis necessitudo impendet: nos pro patria pro libertate pro vita certamus, illis supervacaneum est 12 pro potentia paucorum pugnare. quo audacius
13 adgrediamini memores pristinae virtutis. licuit 25

7 nequiueram is corrected into nequiuerim P | quo loco PCV quo in loco C

18 sin Kritz (Wirz)

19 after fient z have quia bello incepto pax in manu uictoris constat and omit neque locus

20 tegit V (Scheindler)

24 pugnare pro potentia paucorum CV

25 adgrediamini PC adgredimini CV (Wirz)

vobis cum summa turpitudine in exilio aetatem agere, potuistis non nulli Romae amissis bonis alienas opes expectare: quia illa foeda atque intoleranda viris videbantur, haec sequi decrevistis. si haec relinquere voltis, audacia opus est: nemo nisi victor pace bellum mutavit. nam in fuga salutem sperare, cum arma, quibus corpus tegitur, ab hostibus avorteris, ea vero dementia est. semper in proelio eis maxumum est periculum, qui maxume timent, audacia pro muro habetur. cum vos considero, milites, et cum facta vostra aestumo, magna me spes victoriae tenet. animus aetas virtus vostra me hortantur, praeterea necessitudo, quae etiam timidos fortis facit. nam multitudo hostium ne circumvenire queat, prohibent angustiae loci. quodsi virtuti vostrae fortuna inviderit, cavete inulti animam amittatis, neu capti potius sicuti pecora trucidemini quam virorum more pugnantes cruentam atque luctuosam victoriam hostibus relinquatis'.

Haec ubi dixit, paululum conmoratus signa canere iubet atque instructos ordines in locum aequom deducit. dein remotis omnium equis, quo militibus exaequato periculo animus amplior esset, ipse pedes exercitum pro loco atque copiis instruit. nam uti planities erat inter sinistros montis et ab dextera rupe aspera, octo cohortis in fronte con-

1 uobis pCV nobis PC

16 uirtute is corrected to uirtuti PV | cauete inulti PC cauete ne inulti CV

27 dextera PC dextra C —rupes Merivale et dexteras rupes perangusta Grunauer stituit, reliquarum signa in subsidio artius conlocat.

3 ab eis centuriones omnis, lectos et evocatos, praeterea ex gregariis militibus optumum quemque armatum in primam aciem subducit. C. Manlium in dextra, Faesulanum quendam in sinistra parte curare iubet. ipse cum libertis et calonibus propter aquilam adsistit, quam bello Cimbrico C. Marius in 4 exercitu habuisse dicebatur. at ex altera parte C. Antonius pedibus aeger, quod proelio adesse nequibat, M. Petreio legato exercitum permittit.
5 ille cohortis veteranas, quas tumultus causa conscripserat, in fronte, post eas ceterum exercitum in subsidiis locat. ipse equo circumiens unum quemque nominans appellat hortatur, rogat ut meminerint se contra latrones inermis pro patria pro liberis pro
6 aris atque focis suis certare. homo militaris, quod amplius annos triginta tribunus aut praefectus aut legatus aut praetor cum magna gloria in exercitu fuerat, plerosque ipsos factaque eorum fortia noverat: ea conmemorando militum animos accendebat.

60 Sed ubi omnibus rebus exploratis Petreius tuba signum dat, cohortis paulatim incedere iubet. idem
2 facit hostium exercitus. postquam eo ventum est,

5 dextera C (a few)

6 calonibus zC (?) colonibus PC coloniis C — colonis Klimscha

7 adsistit P adstitit p

11 tumultus PC tumulti Nonius, quoting expressly for that. The reading is said to have been in one C but erased (Dietsch Meusel)

15 inermis C inhermos P

23 iubet, Kritz Dietsch Wirz iubet; Fabri Schmalz

unde a ferentariis proelium conmitti posset, maxumo clamore cum infestis signis concurrunt: pila omittunt, gladiis res geritur. veterani pristinae 3 virtutis memores comminus acriter instare, illi haud timidi resistunt: maxuma vi certatur. in- 4 terea Catilina cum expeditis in prima acie vorsari, laborantibus succurrere, integros pro sauciis arcessere, omnia providere, multum ipse pugnare, saepe hostem ferire: strenui militis et boni imperatoris officia simul exequebatur. Petreius, ubi videt 5 Catilinam contra ac ratus erat magna vi tendere, cohortem praetoriam in medios hostis inducit eosque perturbatos atque alios alibi resistentis interficit. deinde utrimque ex lateribus ceteros aggreditur. Manlius et Faesulanus in primis pugnantes cadunt. 6
Catilina postquam fusas copias seque cum paucis 7 relictum videt, memor generis atque pristinae suae dignitatis in confertissumos hostis incurrit ibique pugnans confoditur.

Sed confecto proelio tum vero cerneres, quanta 61 audacia quantaque animi vis fuisset in exercitu Catilinae. nam fere quem quisque vivos pugnando 2 locum ceperat, eum amissa anima corpore tegebat.

1 a ferentariis C Nonius a om. PC (put over the line in P^1) Dietsch puts a in brackets | posset pC possit PC
2 cum is struck out by Wirz, and bracketed by Dietsch
11 tendere PC contendere C
16 catilina om. PC over the line after postquam or uidet or in margin C
22 vivos Vogel proposes to strike out. The words vivos pugnando locum appear in different order in some of the MSS: v. l. p.: p. l. v.: l. p. v.

3 pauci autem, quos medios cohors praetoria disiecerat, paulo divorsius sed omnes tamen advorsis 4 volneribus conciderant. Catilina vero longe a suis inter hostium cadavera repertus est, paululum etiam spirans ferociamque animi, quam habuerat vivos, in 5 voltu retinens. postremo ex omni copia neque in proelio neque in fuga quisquam civis ingenuus 6 captus est: ita cuncti suae hostiumque vitae iuxta 7 pepercerant. neque tamen exercitus populi Romani laetam aut incruentam victoriam adeptus erat. nam strenuissumus quisque aut occiderat in 8 proelio aut graviter volneratus discesserat. multi autem, qui e castris visundi aut spoliandi gratia processerant, volventes hostilia cadavera amicum alii pars hospitem aut cognatum reperiebant; fuere 9 item qui inimicos suos cognoscerent. ita varie per omnem exercitum laetitia maeror luctus atque gaudia agitabantur.

2 Diomedes and Charisius both give as an example of an old form alis for alius in Sallust alis alibi stantes ceciderunt omnes tamen advorsis (adversis Diom.) vulneribus conciderunt. Dietsch prints the words alis alibi stantes after divorsius, but in italics—see notes

18 C. SALLVSTII CRISPI BELLVM CATILINĘ EXPLICIT INCIPIT BELLVM IVGVRTHIN˜ FALSO—GENVS P

NOTES.

THE TITLE OF THE WORK.—What did Sallust call the monograph? For the title which it bears at the present day, de coniuratione Catilinae (taken from C. 4. 3), there is no authority. The grammarians describe the work in a variety of ways, but never in this. Priscian writes (always I believe) in Catilinario (sc. bello), Nonius in Catilinae bello, and elsewhere we find in Catilinae historia, and the convenient in Catilina is often used. Our best MS (P) calls the book at the beginning bellum Catulinarium, and at the end bellum Catilinae. There is little doubt, then, but that the word Bellum came into it. Wölfflin says "In contrast to Cicero, who liked to describe the movement as a civilis coniuratio (Ep. 5. 12. 2 quoted in note to 4. 2 carptim), the historian laid stress on the designation bellum, as a protest against Cicero's verse, Cedant arma togae concedat laurea laudi". Was it then Bellum Catilinarium or Bellum Catilinae? Probably the latter. Quintilian (3. 8. 9) describes the two works thus—in bello Iugurthino et Catilinae. And Florus, who took his account from Sallust (see note on 61. 2), calls his chapter on the conspiracy Bellum Catilinae. The adjective Catilinarius in fact does not seem to occur till Priscian, a native of Constantinople, ventured on it. (Catilinarum is the true reading in Cic. in Cat. 2. 10. 23; and Pliny the elder wrote Catilinianus.) It was avoided, as Wölfflin thinks, because of the double meaning of which it is capable (see note on 5. 1). Priscian however does not scruple to call the orations against Verres—Verrinae.

A word on another question suggested by the two titles in P. Did not perhaps Sallust write Catulinae? Prof. Wölfflin writes to me: "There would be no difficulty, if we might assume that Sallust called his work Bellum Catulinae: then the fore-title is modernized by the substitution of the adjective which came into vogue after Priscian, but the u is retained; while the after-title has retained the genitive, but lost the u.

In Suetonius de illustr. gramm. 17 the best MSS have Catulinae".

Ch. 1—2, 2] Argument:—The aim of life should be to leave a noble name behind us. This object is to be attained by the employment, not of the body but of the mind—the nobler part. In whatever path of life one may choose, the mind is capable of greater things than the body. That this is so has been proved (1) in the struggles of war; though (2) in the public affairs of peace (alas) the mind has not been allowed to show its supremacy: here rather do we note the disorder which exclusive devotion to our lower nature produces. (3) In the practical affairs of private life too it is only by strenuous exercise of our higher powers that success and fame are achieved. (4) And lastly the mind can win for one who uses his talent a name in the sphere of historical literature.

Something of the kind seems to be the thread of this introduction, but the theme is treated in a somewhat confused fashion. Perhaps Sallust felt that himself, for the preface to the Jugurtha handles almost the very same ideas far more successfully. What is here as Mr Simcox rather too severely says 'a frigid mass of aphorisms' becomes there a really 'moving piece of eloquence'.

Both these prefaces are justly censured by Quintilian (3. 8. 9) as having nothing to do with history—he attributes them to imitation of Isocrates and Gorgias. But it must be remembered that Sallust was attempting something of a new departure. Historical writing, at the time when he set himself to the task, was in low repute. Even the most distinguished of his predecessors, M. Cornelius Sisenna, is not thought much of by Cicero (Legg. 1. 2. 7 Sisenna...omnis adhuc nostros scriptores...facile superavit: is tamen...in historia puerile quiddam consectatur— and cp. Brutus 64. 228). It was not then unnatural that Sallust should seek, as he does in this introduction, to claim for the historian and his work a higher consideration.

1. sese student praestare] Cp. Ter. Eun. pr. 1 si quisquam est qui placere se studeat bonis quam plurimis. Cic. de off. 2. 20. 70 ille tenuis...gratum se videri studet. The construction of acc. with inf. when the subject of both verbs is the same is rare with studeo though not uncommon with volo and cupio. Sallust so constructs properare 7, 6. C. W. Nauck insists that peculiar emphasis is intended by (a) the insertion of se at all, (b) by its strengthened form sese and not se, and (c) by its prominent position; and translates, 'All men who strive to make conspicuous in themselves the superiority of mankind to the other animals'; comparing Cic. in Cat. 1. 2. 4 cupio me esse clementem 'I desire to be recognized as humane', and de off. 2. 22. 78 qui...se populares esse volunt 'who aim at the reputation of popular statesmen'. It may be questioned however if it is not rather a colloquialism, ordinary conversation being unwilling to give studeo two constructions.

silentio] in a passive sense. Cp. 2. 8 de utraque siletur. Other ablatives of manner without attributes in S. are—strepitu (adventare J. 53. 7), cursu (tendere J. 91. 4), contubernio (patris militabat J. 64. 4) etc.

prona] The idea is common in the classics before and after Sallust. Plat. Rep. 586 A βοσκημάτων δίκην κάτω ἀεὶ βλέποντες καὶ κεκυφότες εἰς γῆν καὶ εἰς τραπέζας βόσκονται χορταζόμενοι καὶ ὀχεύοντες. Xen. Mem. 1. 4. 11 οἱ (θεοὶ) πρῶτον μὲν μόνον τῶν ζώων ἄνθρωπον ὀρθὸν ἀνέστησαν· ἡ δὲ ὀρθότης καὶ προορᾶν πλεῖον ποιεῖ δύνασθαι καὶ τὰ ὑπερθεν μᾶλλον θεᾶσθαι.

2. sed nostra omnis vis] There is no especial emphasis on nostra. Omnis as in Caesar's—Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres. 'Now our energy taken as a whole'.

animi imperio] 'The mind is the ruling, the body the serving element in us'.

alterum...alterum] do not, as some commentators explain, agree with animi imperio uti and corporis servitio uti (for the brutes do not subject the body but are its slaves), but refer loosely to animus and corpus. Cp. alterum below § 7.

beluis] The word is used in a similar passage in Cicero N. D. 2. 11. 29 omnem enim naturam necesse est...habere aliquem in se principatum, ut in homine mentem, in belua quoddam simile mentis, unde oriantur rerum adpetitus. Belua in contrast to man is perhaps the 'irrational', bestia or fera the 'savage' beast.

3. quo mihi rectius videtur] Rather with Gründel 'and so, as it seems to me, it is more reasonable etc.', than as Kritz explains quanto autem dii praestant beluis, tanto rectius videtur.

vita ipsa qua fruimur] i. e. our life on earth by itself, as contrasted with posthumous life in the memory of survivors.

4. fluxa atque fragilis] 'fleeting and frail'. Other alliterations in f employed by S. are: fama atque fortuna, flagitium... facinus, foeda atque formidulosa, fortis fidosque, fusi fugatique.

virtus...habetur] almost 'genius'. Cic. Fin. 4. 19. 54 ingeni praestantia quem virtutem vocamus. 'Genius is a glorious and eternal possession'.

5. mortales] S. uses the word in the singular J. 72. 2, 92. 2, and in the plural by itself often. He writes multi mortales always (never multi homines, lest a chance of alliteration should be thrown away), but omnes mortales and omnes homines indifferently. Cicero does not use mortales by itself, and does not object to multi homines. The various theories that it is an archaic word revived, that its use is due to Stoic influence, that it is employed in tacit opposition to di,—all want foundation. Nor is it a more comprehensive word than homines in S., as it should be according to Fronto (apud Gell. 13. 29). Livy and Tacitus followed S. in the free use of the word.

6. consulto...facto] So incepto 20. 10 and perdita re publica opus esse 31. 7.

7. alterum] resumes the utrumque, but is of course not necessary to the sense. Cp. Cic. T. D. 2. 5. 13 ita est utraque res sine altera debilis.

auxilio eget] With the abl. again in the introduction to the Jug. 1. 3 neque fortuna eget (animus), but generally in S. with gen.

Ch. 2, 1. igitur] in S. always (in Cicero not rarely) is put the first word in the sentence, except in questions; 51. 43 placet igitur eos dimitti? J. 31. 18 quid igitur censes? Or. Mac. 14 quid censes igitur? C. 20. 14 quin igitur expergiscimini? Livy also often puts igitur first.

diversi] i. e. taking different roads or directions.

pars...alii] The variety is very characteristic of Sallust. Alii...alii, it is true, is not uncommon, but pars—pars does not occur in the C. at all, and only two or three times in the Jugurtha. Partim—partim is never used. The variations are endless: pars—alii, partim—alii, pauci—pars, pars—reliqui, sunt qui—alii—in this or the reversed order, and many others. In triple division: alii—alii—pars, alii—alii—multi, alii—pars—sunt qui.

agitabatur] The constant use of this word is one of the blots of Sallust's style, and serves to give a tone of monotony, which his striving after variety in other ways hardly removes. The following are samples of the different senses in which it is used: (1) J. 53. 1 rati humum aridam vento agitari. (2) C. 5. 7 agitabatur magis magisque indies animus ferox inopia rei familiaris et conscientia scelerum. (3) C. 53. 4 ac mihi multa agitanti constabat paucorum civium egregiam virtutem cuncta patravisse. (4) J. 54. 2 Iugurtha ubi gentium aut quid agitaret ...exploratum misit. (5) agitare imperium (pacem bellum moras gaudium praesidium)—a conversational use. Cic. Verr. 5. 114 and 154 dies festos agitare, for the agere which alone is used in later works. (6) Absolutely in a variety of meanings. Ep. Pomp. 9 Gallia...nunc malis fructibus ipsa vix agitat (supports itself). J. 18. 9 ei propius mare Africum agitabant (lived). J. 74. 1 varius incertusque agitabat (behaved). J. 59. 1 equitatum omnem pro castris agitare iubet (stand). The word thus tends to lose its edge and to become a mere equivalent of agere, so that exagitare has often to be called in. Sallust himself seems to have grown tired of the word. In the C. it is quite as common as agere, but in the Jugurtha, and still more again in the Histories, agere comes more into use in its place. It is said that S. got to use frequentatives generally less and less. That is perhaps rather doubtful, but the following occur only in the C.—exercitare rogitare adflictare amplexari captare vexare, but these, except the last, occur only once there.

2. habere] not=putare, but to have in their lust of rule a reason for war.

putare] 'to find'. The esse is always omitted after putare by S. Cp. J. 85. 21 eorum fortia facta memorando clariores esse putant, etc. For the turn—of which S. is fond—cp. C. 43. 4 maximum bonum in celeritate putabat. C. 19. 2 boni complures praesidium in eo putabant. J. 53. 3 dum in elephantis auxilium putabant.

periculo atque negotiis] Nonius quotes this to show that sometimes periculum=experimentum (cp. Caes. B. G. 1. 40. 5 factum eius hostis periculum patrum nostrorum memoria). But it is rather a hendiadys, 'hazardous affairs'. So says Macaulay, IV. 409, writing of the battle of Landen. The lot of the two generals ('the hunchbacked dwarf'—Luxembourg, and the 'asthmatic skeleton'—William) "had fallen on a time when men had discovered that the strength of the muscles is far inferior in value to the strength of the mind."

3. The connexion is perhaps—Rulers have discovered the superiority which a strenuous use of the mind gives in war; that the same holds good in peace they do not appear to have discovered, though it is no less true.

regum atque imperatorum] The second is the more comprehensive word (=rulers whatever their title), as in periculo atque negotiis above; and perhaps regum in reference to Cyrus, and imp. in reference to the Greeks.

neque aliud] C. W. Nauck remarks that the first neque here does double duty: it serves both to connect this clause with the preceding, and also answers to the following neque—'and you would see neither general distraction nor confusion perverse confounded'. It may be questioned however whether this clause is meant to be thus connected with the preceding—when that is meant an et is used: cp. J. 89. 7 Numidae plerumque lacte ac ferina carne vescebantur et neque salem neque alia inritamenta gulae quaerebant. Other instances parallel to the present will be found in C. 11. 3, 58. 1, and 10, J. 24. 3.

4. eis artibus] Artes ('qualities' or 'means') is a favourite word with Sallust, especially in the phrases bonae artes (virtues), malae artes (vices). It should be his not eis, says Kvíčala, for eis would include the statement that power won by violence requires violence to maintain it, which is true but not in Sallust's mind, while his would confine the reference to the good qualities mentioned above. But Sallust is not so deep as that.

5. invasere] Another favourite word of Sallust's. It is here used absolutely as in 10. 6; J. 41. 9; cp. Ter. Hec. 356 an dolor repente invasit? Liv. 5. 13. 2 dulcedo invasit...plebeios creandi. Elsewhere in S. it takes an acc., as in Livy (except in J. 32. 4 and Liv. 28. 29 nec maior in corpus meum vis morbi quam in vestras mentes invasit). Cicero always uses a preposition—see incedere 7. 3.

fortuna] 'position'. Cp. 51. 13 in maxuma fortuna minuma licentia est.

6. transfertur] 'passes'.

7. quae homines arant...virtuti omnia parent] i.e. quae homines agunt, cum vel arant vel navigant vel aedificant. 'In agriculture, shipping, building—everything depends upon energy'. For parent cp. Hor. Sat. 2. 3. 94 omnis enim res Virtus fama decus divina humanaque pulchris Divitiis parent.

8. peregrinantes] The foreigner does not trouble to acquaint himself with the interests of the country, in which he is only a passing sojourner.

transiere] is more appropriate than transegere (though the MSS are in its favour) to peregrinantes, and is supported by 1. 1 ne vitam silentio transeant. Some editors however think that with Sallust's love of variety that passage is rather in favour of transegere. The variety however is rather of construction than of phrase.

anima] It is said that we have anima and not animus here, because the sensual man can only be credited with the anima, which the brutes share with man. That however is fanciful: cp. 1. 2 sed nostra omnis vis in animo et corpore sita est with J. 2. 1 nam uti genus hominum compositum ex corpore et anima est e. q. s.

iuxta aestumo] 'to value highly' or 'lightly' according to the context—a use peculiar to S.

9. verum enimvero] Again in 20. 10. It is common in the historians, but rare in Cicero.

frui anima] 'to have real enjoyment of'.

aliquo negotio intentus] Intentus is generally used absolutely, and more often than not with another participle or adj.—infensi intentique, intento atque infesto, intenti paratique etc. Occasionally however it has a noun with it: C. 54. 4 negotiis intentus. J. 76. 2 Metellus, ubi oppidanos proelio intentos...videt, vallo fossaque moenia circumvenit. J. 44. 3 expectatione eventus civium animos intentos putabat. The commentators take this case to be the dative where that is possible, indeed some propose to read aliquoi here (a form that the MSS never exhibit, and aliquo is supported here by Arusian). It is just as likely that in these instances the nouns are also in the ablative, and that intentus retains its full participial force, 'kept on the stretch by'.

Ch. 3, 1. bene facere rei publicae] not 'to benefit the state', but 'to act well for the advantage of the state'. Bene facere (and bene facta) in this sense is common in Cato, from whom perhaps S. borrowed the expression.

vel pace vel bello] instrumental ablative.

2. auctorem] P has auctorem here, but in J. 1. 4 (suam quisque culpam auctores ad negotia transferunt) actores. Jordan rightly reads auctores there too, while Dietsch prefers actorem and actores. It is true that auctor is often used= scriptor, yet it is likely enough that, as S. distinguishes (1. 6) between the planning and execution of an act, he should emphasize the first and more important stage, and prefer to say the author (that is, the originator and executor) rather than the mere agent.

arduum] Certain malevoli reprehensores, says Gell. 4. 15, objected to the use of arduum here. Non enim causa videri debet, cur historiae opus 'arduum' sit, quod hi, qui legunt, aut inique interpretantur, quae scripta sunt, aut vera esse non credunt. To which the reply is—Sed 'arduum' Sallustius non pro difficili tantum, sed pro eo quoque ponit, quod Graeci χαλεπὸν appellant, quod est cum difficile, tum molestum quoque et incommodum et intractabile.

facta dictis exaequanda sunt] Cp. Liv. 6. 20. 8 et cum ea quoque, quae bello gesta essent, pro fastigio rerum oratione etiam magnifica, facta dictis aequando, memorasset. Plin. Ep. 8. 4 una sed maxima difficultas, quod haec aequare dicendo arduum. immensum, etiam tuo ingenio, quamquam altissime adsurgat et amplissimis operibus increscat. Isocr. 4. 13 ὡς χαλεπόν ἐστιν ἴσους τοὺς λόγους τῷ μεγέθει τῶν ἔργων ἐξευρεῖν. So Sallust's words mean perhaps,—it is difficult for verbal expression to maintain the level of the subject-matter. Yet Kritz' interpretation fits the context better—it is difficult enough to give a picture in words in accord with the fact, but the worst of it is that when you have succeeded in that you are carped at alike, when you praise and when you blame. Exaequare seems to be a conversational equivalent for aequare, which S. does not employ. Compare the passages from Livy and Pliny quoted above, and 59. 1, remotis omnium equis, quo militibus exaequato periculo animus amplior esset, with Caes. B. G. 1. 25. 1 Caesar...remotis equis, ut aequato omnium periculo, e.q.s. and Liv. 3. 62. 8 aequato periculo. Exaequare occurs very often in Vitruvius. Elsewhere coaequare C. 20. 11, and adaequare J. 4. 6, are used. In the same way S. uses C. 31. 5 (causa) sui expurgandi, while Caesar writes sui purgandi causa. Other instances of Sallust's use of a compound verb where the simple verb is the classical use are: coire (H. 4. 26 qui quidem mos ut tabes in urbem coierit), conlubere conmaculare conmercari conminuere conturbare degustare denegare derelinquere desenescere devincere, etc. For the reverse, the simple used instead of the compound verb, see note on 7. 1 pugnando.

dehinc quia plerique, &c.] Clearly taken from Pericles' speech, Thuc. 2. 35. 2 ὅ τε ἄπειρος (νομίσειεν ἄν) ἔστιν ἃ καὶ πλεονάζεσθαι, διὰ φθόνον, εἴ τι ὑπὲρ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ φύσιν ἀκούοι. μέχρι γὰρ τοῦδε ἀνεκτοὶ οἱ ἔπαινοί εἰσι περὶ ἑτέρων λεγόμενοι, ἐς ὅσον ἂν καὶ αὐτὸς ἕκαστος οἴηται ἱκανὸς εἶναι δρᾶσαί τι ὧν ἤκουσεν· τῷ δ' ὑπερβάλλοντι αὐτῶν φθονοῦντες ἤδη καὶ ἀπιστοῦσιν. Other equally obvious imitations from Thucydides are to be found in 38. 3 and 52. 11; and cp. J. 7. 5 (et proelio strenuus erat et bonus consilio, quorum alterum ex providentia timorem, alterum ex audacia temeritatem adferre plerumque solet) with Thuc. 2. 40. 3 διαφερόντως γὰρ δὴ καὶ τόδε ἔχομεν ὥστε τολμᾶν τε οἱ αὐτοὶ μάλιστα καὶ περὶ ὧν ἐπιχειρήσομεν ἐκλογίζεσθαι· ὃ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀμαθία μὲν θράσος, λογισμὸς δὲ ὄκνον φέρει: and in J. 60. 1—4 the besieged people of Zama are made to imitate the excitement of the land forces of the Athenians at Syracuse, Thuc. 7. 71. 2—4: cp. especially τοῖς σώμασιν αὐτοῖς ἴσα τῇ δόξῃ περιδεῶς ξυναπονεύοντες with niti corporibus et ea huc et illuc quasi vitabundi aut jacientes tela agitare. These are far from being the only obligations of Sallust to Thucydides, but they are the most certain. Next to Thucydides (the first three books especially) Demosthenes Isocrates Xenophon and Plato seem to have been Sallust's favourite Greek authors. It is in the earlier chapters of the Catiline that S. draws most heavily from Greek originals; chh. 15—36 are however, as far as has been shown, free from imitation.

supra ea] together form a substitute for an adjective: cp. J. 85. 2 mihi contra ea videtur. Supra ea (i.e. quae supra ea sunt) is Sallust's translation for Thucydides' τῷ δ' ὑπερβάλλοντι αὐτῶν.

3. pro pudore, e. q. s.] Here as often the contrasted words are arranged rather with a view to sound than to exact correspondence. Audacia answers to pudor, and for the others—offices are sought no longer by worth (virtus) but by bribery (largitio), nor are they administered with abstinentia, but only for gain (avaritia).

5. reliquorum...ceteros] Reliquorum, the public men of Rome in general: ceteros, all the rest of his colleagues.

cupido] The word is not found in Cic. and Caes. Cupiditas, their substitute, is found only three times in S. (C. 2. 1, 5. 4, 21. 4). In Tac. cupido by degrees entirely supplants cupiditas. In his smaller works cupiditas is used four times, cupido once: in the Hist. cupido is five times as common as cupiditas: in the Ann. cupiditas is not used at all.

eadem qua] Eadem quae the reading of P, which Kortte explains—me vexabat honoris cupido, et vexabat praeterea etiam eadem quae ceteros fama atque invidia, and Linker—h. cupido vexabat me eadem fama atque invidia quae ceteros vexabat—will hardly do. And even if we read qua it seems a strange form of expression. Kortte's conj., which Dietsch adopts, eadem eademque quae, would remove all difficulty. (Cupido eademque ceteros is found in some MSS.)

Ch. 4, 1. bonum otium] Contrasting the sweets of leisure with the disagreeables of ambition (ambitio mala, below).

servilibus officiis] If S. admired Cato's style, he despised his tastes, it seems. In his preface to his de re rustica, Cato says, virum bonum cum laudabant (maiores nostri), ita laudabant, Bonum agricolam bonumque colonum. And Cicero (Cato M. 15. 51) puts into his mouth the sentiment, venio nunc ad voluptates agricolarum; quibus ego incredibiliter delector, quae...mihi ad sapientis vitam proxime videntur accedere. Some commentators, however, cannot believe that S. meant to call agriculture, at any rate, which Roman opinion so highly valued, an occupation unworthy of a free man (cp. Cic. Off. 1. 42. 151 omnium autem rerum, ex quibus aliquid adquiritur, nihil est agricultura melius, nihil uberius, nihil dulcius, nihil homine libero dignius). They explain therefore that S. meant only that an exclusive devotion to agriculture and hunting was to be deprecated, that these are occupations which slaves can prosecute as well as any one else, they require so little intellect. Kvíčala takes colundo aut venando with aetatem agere, and explains servilibus officiis (dative) intentum 'superintending the performances of my slaves'.—Colundo and venando, says Madvig, must be ablatives, as there is no certain instance in prose of the dative of the gerund governing an accusative.

2. carptim] S. is rather fond of adverbs in -im. As Sisenna's few fragments have some fifteen of them, it is not improbable that S. followed his example. Sisenna writes for instance vellicatim ac saltuatim scribendo. Sallust had not presumably at this time formed the plan of writing the history of Rome from 676 to 687 in five books, which he afterwards carried out; though, as compared with a work like Livy's, for instance, even that might be called a selection. There are theories however that all his works were written in the form of essays, and that the putting together was the work of early grammarians. Others think that the Catiline at any rate though published separately was intended to be incorporated in the larger historical work. That such a course was sometimes followed is shown by a letter of Cicero to Lucceius (Ep. 5. 12. 2) where C. urging his correspondent to write a work on his consulship suggests to him—coniunctene malles cum reliquis rebus nostra contexere an, ut multi Graeci fecerunt, Callisthenes Phocicum bellum, Timaeus Pyrrhi, Polybius Numantinum, qui omnes a perpetuis suis historiis ea, quae dixi, bella separaverunt, tu quoque item civilem coniurationem ab hostilibus externisque bellis seiungeres.

spe, metu, partibus] So H. 1. 5 neque me divorsa pars in civilibus armis movit a vero. Tac. A. 1. 1 sine ira et studio quorum caussas procul habeo.

3. de...absolvam] Elsewhere with acc. 38. 3; J. 17. 2 cetera quam paucissumis absolvam. The meaning 'relate', given often to absolvo in S., is perhaps peculiar to him.

de Catilinae coniuratione] Hence the modern and appropriate title of the work.

paucis] Acron on Hor. Sat. 1. 10. 9 sic et Cato laudatur a Sallustio quod multa paucis absolverit.

4. facinus] Perhaps merely 'enterprise', cp. 32. 2; J. 49. 4 uti quemque ob militare facinus pecunia aut honore extulerat, though facinus without an epithet is generally used in a bad sense.

5. prius...quam...faciam] Antequam, Tacitus' favourite, hardly occurs in S. at all. It is used once in J. 97. 4 for variety—et priusquam exercitus aut instrui aut sarcinas colligere, denique antequam signum aut imperium ullum accipere quivit, and twice perhaps in fragments.—Faciam: for the subjunctive cp. Cic. de Or. 1. 59. 251 (Graeci tragoedi) cotidie, antequam pronuntient, vocem cubantes sensim excitant, Tac. H. 1. 4 antequam destinata componam, repetundum videtur. The subj. is of course not necessary; in the parallel passage in the J. 5. 3 the ind. is used, sed priusquam huiuscemodi rei initium expedio pauca supra repetam. And cp. Cic. Phil. 1. 1. 1 ante quam de re publica P. C. dicam ea quae dicenda hoc tempore arbitror, exponam vobis e. q. s. with Phil. 2. 1. 3 priusquam de ceteris rebus respondeo ... pauca dicam. The subjunctive (acc. to Kühnast Liv. Syn. p. 238) is used when it is desired to represent the arrangement as designedly logical.

Ch. 5, 1. L. Catilina] Dietsch writes Lucius in full. But the abbreviation is always used. Only one exception is known to Mommsen—an old grave-stone to a citizen of Praeneste, on which Sextus is written out.—The name Catilina was probably spelt originally Catulina, which is used by Pliny (sc. caro—'dog's-flesh'). Compare the names Porcina, and Aprulla (Wölfflin).

nobili genere natus] L. Sergius Catilina. The Sergii claimed descent from Sergestus. (Verg. A. 5, 121.) Cp. Iuv. 8. 231 quid, Catilina, tuis natalibus atque Cethegi Inveniat quisquam sublimius?

2. ibique iuventutem suam exercuit] The tastes which C. imbibed during the civil war between Marius and Sulla he was able to indulge in the time of the Sullan proscriptions.—This is the only place in S. where iuventus is used for the time of youth, elsewhere it is collective = iuvenes.—Ibique = in eisque rebus. This use of adverbs is very common in S. J. 79. 8 ut vel illi, quos finis populo suo peterent, ibi vivi obruerentur. C. 20. 8 divitiae apud illos sunt, aut ubi illi volunt. J. 14. 22 iamiam frater...quamquam tibi immaturo, et unde (= a quo) minume decuit, vita erepta est. For quo cp. J. 66. 2 Vagenses, quo Metellus...praesidium inposuerat. eo J. 75. 4 pecoris...eo inponit vasa.

3. Cp. Cic. in Cat. 1. 10. 26 habes ubi ostentes illam tuam praeclaram patientiam famis frigoris inopiae rerum omnium. 2. 5. 9 atque idem...frigore et fame et siti et vigiliis perferendis fortis ab istis praedicabatur. 3. 7. 16 nihil erat quod non ipse obiret occurreret vigilaret laboraret, frigus sitim famem poterat. Sallust uses words that lie further off the track. The unusual singular vigilia is used for cc supra quam] Again J. 24. 5 nisi tamen intellego illum supra quam ego sum petere. The more usual ultra quam he does not use. Quintil. 10. 1. 101 has it in the same connexion in contionibus supra quam enarrari potest eloquentem.

Velleius 2. 79 labore vigilia periculo invictus, and in S. cp. C. 15. 4 neque vigiliis neque quietibus. J. 41. 7 penes eosdem aerarium provinciae magistratus gloriae triumphique. J. 31. 20 regna provinciae leges iura iudicia bella atque paces.

4. varius]. So Plutarch describes him (Cic. 10) ἄνδρα τολμητὴν καὶ μεγαλοπράγμονα καὶ ποικίλον τὸ ἦθος, and Cicero p. Cael. 6. 14 haec illi tam varia multiplexque natura.

simulator ac dissimulator] J. 64. 1 contemptor animus. J. 44. 1 praedator. J. 54. 3 cultor. J. 63. 2 victor. Cic. p. Mil. 19. 50 ille latronum occultator et receptor locus. J. 12. 5 mulieris ancillae.

sui profusus] Such genitives after adjectives are very common in S., after for instance—insolens insolitus prudens egregius manifestus sciens liberalis. In the present case the unusual sui profusus is used to correspond with the regular alieni adpetens. Tacitus imitates the phrase (6. 31) prodigi alieni, contemptores sui. H. 1. 49 pecuniae alienae non adpetens, suae parcus, publicae avarus.

satis eloquentiae, sapientiae parum] Eloquentiae is without doubt the true reading. The loquentiae of the late MSS came perhaps from Probus. Gellius 1. 15. 18 was informed that Probus preferred to read loquentiae, quod loquentia novatori verborum Sallustio maxime congrueret; eloquentia cum insipientia minime conveniret. On the latter point cp. (if necessary) Cic. de inv. 1. 1. The word is used only once again C. 54. 1; the adjective eloquens is never used. Facundia and facundus, their equivalents in conversational language, which Cicero and Caesar do not employ, take their place.

5. vastus animus] 'his insatiable appetite', or "a great unfurnished spirit" with Mr Simcox.

inmoderata, incredibilia, nimis alta] S. is very free in his use of adjectives and participles, J. 29. 2 a bono honestoque in pravom abstractus est. J. 48. 3 humi arido atque harenoso. Or. Phil. 20 libertas et vera. Or. Lep. 25 pax et composita. J. 79. 6 loca...nuda gignentium.

6. post dominationem L. Sullae] i.e. from the time when Sulla's tyranny had begun. Cp. 38. 3 post illa tempora. J. 5. 4 Punico secundo quo dux Carthaginiensium Hannibal [illegible]inem nominis Romani Italiae opes maxume ad- dum...pararet] dum (as in 40. 4) = dummodo, which S. does not use.

quicquam pensi habebat] This phrase is not used by Cicero or Caesar. The pensi depends on quicquam, as on nihil in 12. 2, and is not a genitive of price. The phrase pensi habere, where 'pensi' is a genitive of price (cp. Tac. A. 13. 15 neque fas neque fidem pensi haberet), is a later, and perhaps mistaken development,

7. quae utraque] For the neuter in agreement with two or more feminine substantives cp. 3. 4 audacia largitio avaritia vigebant. Quae e. q. s. etc., and 20. 2 ni virtus fidesque vostra spectata forent (see note). For the plural of uterque when the two things referred to are singular, perhaps a conversational inexactitude, cp. 30. 4 ei utrique ad urbem imperatores erant.

8. Perhaps from Cato, who (apud Liv. 34. 4) said, diversis duobus vitiis avaritia atque luxuria civitatem laborare saepe me querentem audistis.

9. hortari...supra repetere] Hortari is used with the inf. when the subject is not personal, as are monere, 52. 3 res monet cavere; and postulare, J. 17. 1 res postulare videtur...exponere. Hortari is used with the supine in Or. Mac. 17 neque ego vos ultum iniurias hortor.

de moribus admonuit] Admonere de occurs only here in S.: with the acc. J. 79. 1 eam rem nos locus admonuit: with gen. C. 21. 4 admonebat alium egestatis. J. 95. 2 nos tanti viri res admonuit.

instituta] Disserere has three objects, (1) instituta, (2) quo modo...reliquerint, (3) ut...facta sit—a notable instance of Sallust's fondness for variety of construction.

atque optuma] The words are I think indispensable in spite of their omission from the best manuscripts. Cp. 10. 6 civitas ex iustissumo atque optumo crudele intolerandumque factum.

Ch. 6, 1. It is rather provoking to be taken back to the Aborigines, but not to connect his history with the beginnings of Rome would perhaps have been too daring an innovation. The annalists always did so, and Sallust's predecessor Sisenna and his successor Tacitus (in the Annals) all conform to the custom. Cicero, on the other hand, is criticized (Dio 46. 21) for beginning his history of Rome—the memoirs of his consulship—οὐκ ἀπὸ τῆς κτίσεως αὐτῆς, ὥσπερ οἱ ἄλλοι οἱ τοῦτο ποιοῦντες, ἀλλὰ ἀπὸ τῆς ὑπατείας τῆς ἑαυτοῦ ἤρξατο. The view of the origin of Rome which Sallust, rejecting Romulus, adopts, came no doubt from Cato, who is reported by Servius on Verg. A. 1. 36 as saying, primo Italiam tenuisse quosdam qui appellabantur Aborigines, postea adventu Aeneae Phrygibus iunctos Latinos suo nomine nuncupatos. The description of the Aborigines, which occurs with little variation in Cic. de inv. 2, Varro and Vitruvius, comes, according to Jordan (Krit. Beit. p. 359), from Dicaearchus, whose ideal portraiture of these people is extant. The Romans pronounced the name Aborigĭnes ('Αβορι-γῖνες in Strabo etc.). It is Greek according to Rubino (Beitr. zür Vorgeschichte Italiens, p. 47) and means 'inhabitants of the mountain-valleys'. He regards the account given by Sallust as so far historical as that the Latin nation were formed by a union of these Aborigines, who came from about Amiternum, and some immigrants who came by sea. The identification of these settlers with Aeneas and his followers was a later Greek addition.

cumque eis] The que is generally appended to the following word and not to a monosyllabic preposition, when the prep. is not repeated. Cumque, as here, is said to occur in Cicero only seven times, but deque (cp. C. 48. 5 deque ea re) seventeen times.

agreste] in a bad sense. Cp. Cic. Rosc. Am. 27. 75 vita autem haec rustica, quam tu agrestem vocas, parsimoniae diligentiae iustitiae magistra est.

sine legibus, sine imperio, liberum atque solutum] An instance of chiasmus: sine legibus i.e. solutum, sine imperio i.e. liberum. The arrangement of four words in pairs, the first pair without copula, the second with atque, is very common in S., e.g. armis cadaveribus, cruore atque luctu: odio amicitia, ira atque misericordia: patriae parentibus, aris atque focis: taetra inculta, foeda atque formidulosa: laetitia maeror, luctus atque gaudia: etc.

2. alii] It is necessary surely to leave P (which has alius) here, for the meaning is that one people lived in one way, and the other in another, not that the individuals lived in all sorts of different ways.

ita brevi...erat] This sentence, which is wanting in the best MSS, is introduced by Augustine (see critical notes) among quotations from Cicero and Sallust. It has been claimed for Cicero's Republic (1. 25. 40). The appearance in this place is probably due to somebody familiar with Augustine's works putting them down in the margin. Is such a sentence needed here? As Jordan well says, it is essential that we should be told that a state was formed, and the finishing-up sentence is very much in Sallust's manner; cp. C. 7. 3; J. 40. 3; C. 65. 5.

3. postquam...videbatur] 'after that it began to appear'. Cp. 56. 4 postquam Antonius cum exercitu adventabat. The construction of postquam with ind. impf. reached its height in Livy. For p. followed first by perf. and then by impf. cp. 10. 1 note on patebant.

sicuti...habentur] =ut in plerisque quae mortalium sunt fieri solet. Kritz.

4. pauci] i.e. only a few.

aberant] 'kept themselves out of' with an active sense, as in Caes. B. G. 6. 14. 1 Druides a bello abesse consuerunt.

5. auxilia portabant] for ferebant. Cp. 42. 2 portationibus. Liv. 45. 1 laetum nuntium portabant. Ov. Pont. 3. 4. 1 portantia verba salutem. The strictly classical use of portare is, as Döderlein says, de rebus gravioris ponderis. Sallust's use of the word and the two examples I have quoted show the beginnings of its usurping the place of ferre, which it ended by altogether supplanting. Compare with instances already given Cic. Fin. 2. 35. 118 opem salutemque ferres. Cicero writes to his brother 2. 10. 2 cum hominem portarem ad Baias Neapoli octophoro Aniciano, but Verr. 5. 11. 27 lectica octophoro ferebatur. Caesar says always sarcinas conferre, but the author of the Bellum Africanum uses comportare. Later authors write: beneficia portare, auspicia portare. Apuleius has suppetias portare, and even aetatem bellule portare. (Cp. French porter.)

magisque dandis e.q.s.] From Thuc. 2. 40. 6 οὐ γὰρ πάσχοντες εὖ ἀλλὰ δρῶντες κτώμεθα τοὺς φίλους.

6. rei publicae consultabant] S. is fond of using the frequentative for the simple verb, and so here consultare takes the meaning and construction of consulere. The construction is found here only—except for an imitation by Aurelius Victor (4th century).

patres] Cp. Cic. R. P. 2. 8. 14...regium consilium delegerat principes, qui appellati sunt propter caritatem patres. Florus 1. 1. 15...consilium rei publicae penes senes esset, qui ex auctoritate patres ob aetatem senatus vocabantur. Patres became a synonym for senatores, because the original senate was made up of all the patres familias who were seniores, who were, that is, over 45 years of age. The title at a later time was also used as a synonym for the patricians generally, the patricii having been originally so called as being members of the families from which the patres came. (Willems.)

7. quod initio...fuerat] This construction is rare before S. Cicero appears to have only two instances: de Inv. 2. 47. 138 omnia supplicia...culpae ac malitiae vindicandae constituta esse. Verr. 2. 53. 132 quae res evertendae rei publicae solerent esse. Caesar has one only B. G. 4. 17. 10 si naves deiciendi operis essent a barbaris missae. S. has C. 46. 2 poenam illorum sibi oneri, impunitatem perdundae rei publicae fore credebat. J. 88. 4 quae postquam gloriosa modo neque belli patrandi cognovit (sc. esse). Or. Lep. 8 at ille eo processit ut nihil gloriosum nisi tutum et omnia retinendae dominationis honesta aestumet. Or. Phil. 3 exercitum opprimundae libertatis habet; id. 6 cum privata arma opprimundae libertatis cepisset; id. 11 (arma civilia cepit) non pro sua aut quorum simulat iniuria sed legum ac libertatis subvortundae; H. 3. 54 (M. Antonius) perdundae pecuniae genitus (dat.?). The construction is probably, as Jordan (Krit. Beit. p. 285) maintains, a development of the older construction with the dative, well-known in the elliptical formulae—decemviri legibus scribendis, comitia collegae creando etc., in which the genitive begins to appear in Livy.

se convortit] The se is omitted only in some inferior MSS, but this is the only place where S. puts the reflexive pronoun with convorto (or vorto); cp. C. 52. 27; J. 20. 4, 85. 9, 101. 6. Cicero writes Planc. 20. 50 non dubito quin omnis ad te conversura fuerit multitudo (Cobet however would write—omnis se ad te).

in superbiam dominationemque] 'into proud usurpation' or 'tyranny'.

Ch. 7, 1. ea tempestate] Old-fashioned and poetical for eo tempore, as Cicero says de Or. 3. 38. 153—a favourite use with S.

2. boni quam mali] S. generally put the contrasted words immediately on either side of quam: 1, 3 ingeni quam virium opibus. 54. 6 esse quam videri bonus malebat. J. 50. 6 sin opportunior fugae collis quam campi fuerat. J. 31. 28 P has in re publica multo praestat beneficii quam maleficii memorem esse, which V alters to—beneficii memorem esse quam maleficii.

3. adepta libertate] Adeptus is again used passively in J. 101. 9 adeptam victoriam retinere cupit. There is not any instance of this use of adeptus before Sallust, for in Cic. Cato M. 2. 4 adepti is the right reading. Plautus however has Trin.

367 non aetate verum ingenio adipiscitur sapientia. Other deponent participles used passively by S. are—dilargitus enisus interpretatus ludificatus machinatus.

incesserat] Dietsch, on the strength of Sallust's fondness for frequentatives, takes this to come from incessere. As it is always used, when taken in a figurative sense, in the perfect or pluperfect it is difficult to refute that, but it probably comes from incedo. The verb takes an acc. in Ep. Mith. 15 inopia rursus ambos incessit: a dat. in C. 31. 3 mulieres, quibus rei publicae magnitudine belli timor insolitus incessit.

4. simul ac] is used here only in Sallust. Ubi primum, which is elsewhere used, is here avoided because of the primum immediately preceding.

in castris per laborem usum militiae discebat] Usum militiae is preferable to usu militiam; for per laborem usu without any link is very awkward. Usum is the practice as opposed to the mere theory. Cp. J. 85. 12, where Marius says: Atque ego scio, Quirites, qui postquam consules facti sunt et acta maiorum et Graecorum militaria praecepta legere coeperint: praeposteri homines; nam gerere quam fieri tempore posterius, re atque usu prius est. For the expression usum militiae, cp. Caes. B. G. 6. 40. 6 usu rei militaris. B. C. 3. 84. 3 qui cotidiana consuetudine usum quoque eius generis proeliorum perciperent.

iuventus...erat...discebat...habebant] Cp. 23. 6 namque antea pleraque nobilitas invidia aestuabat et quasi pollui consulatum credebant. Herzog translates the habebant here, 'it was the fashion to find more amusement', and Dietsch says 'After speaking of the universal system of training for youth he goes on to show the result produced on the minds of each and all'. But the plural is probably an unintentional grammatical slip. A plural verb with a collective substantive is no more a recognized construction in Sall. than it is in Cicero or Caesar. Livy is the first good prose writer to make a constant use of the construction. Pars is found sometimes, it is true, with a plural verb, but it is always there coupled with alii, pauci, etc., and is rather in apposition with the true subject than itself the word agreed with. Of other collectives there are only two instances, J. 73. 3 et Romae plebes litteris, quae de Metello ac Mario missae erant, cognitis volenti animo de ambobus acceperant. Or. Lep. 12 sociorum et Lati magna vis civitate pro multis et egregiis factis a vobis data per unum prohibentur. The distance of the subject from the verb explains both these instances, and in the latter the unum has not been without influence on the number of the verb. Thucydides offers many parallels to the present passage: cp. 1. 13. 1 ναυτικά τε ἐξηρτύετο ἡ Ἑλλὰς καὶ τῆς θαλάσσης μᾶλλον ἀντείχοντο, 2. 21. 5 παντί τε τρόπῳ ἀνηρέθιστο ἡ πόλις καὶ τὸν Περικλέα ἐν ὀργῇ εἶχον, but I do not think that Sall., though that has been maintained, is imitating Thucydides here.

6. se...ferire...properabat] See note on 1. 1. Here, however, the se is due to the quisque.

hostem ferire] occurs again 60. 4; J. 85. 33 (Marius' speech). The expression is used only by S. except for Ennius (apud Cic. Balb. 22. 51) hostem qui feriet erit mihi Karthaginiensis, and Liv. 22. 38. 4 centuriati pedites coniurabant sese... neque ex ordine recessuros nisi... aut hostis feriendi aut civis servandi causa. These instances show it to have been an old-fashioned expression, which lived on in the language of the camp.

facinus faceret] This particular instance of the figura etymologica is often used by S. Caesar, who avoids the figure altogether, would have written f. admittere instead. Cicero has the phrase once, Fin. 2. 29. 95 vide ne facinus facias cum mori suadeas (Madvig notes 'familiaris sermonis imitatio aliqua'). All the instances in Cicero (e. g. servitutem servire, vitam vivere, dicta dicere, gaudium gaudere) are probably reminiscences of the comic poets. Livy has—besides f. facere—acta agere, odio odisse, donis donare, edicto edicere and others.

pecuniae] Cp. 5. 4 sui.

gloriam ingentem] A repetition in another form of laudis avidi, e. q. s. The adjectives are predicates:—there were no bounds to their desire for glory, while for wealth—the riches they desired were only such as could be honourably acquired and employed.

7. memorare possem] i. e. memorarem. Servius quotes the passage with possum.

pugnando] The simple for the compound verb—expugnando or oppugnando. So quaerere for requirere, J. 98. 3 (collis) pauca munimenta quaerebat: terrere for deterrere, Or. Lep. 6 dum vos metu gravioris serviti a repetunda libertate terremini: capere for accipere, J. 85. 18 invident honori meo: ergo invideant labori innocentiae, periculis etiam meis, quoniam per haec illum cepi: suetus for consuetus, etc. For the gerund used rather in a modal than an instrumental sense, cp. C. 61. 2 quem quisque vivos pugnando locum ceperat, J. 28. 7, 51. 5. The Columna Duilli has Macellam pugnando cepet. J. 108. 2 Bocchus seu reputando...seu admonitus, where reputando = reputans. (Cp. Tac. A. 13. 47 trahens—et interpretando.) Such a use of the gerund belongs rather to every-day than to literary language, and has passed into the Romance languages (Ital. caminando=Fr. chemin faisant). It is common however in S.'s imitators Fronto, Dares, Dictys (Septimius). Hyginus writes—ibique vastando iumentorum stabula, tandem concursu pastorum interiit, and—at pater Daedalion unicam filiam flendo ab Apolline est conversus in avem.

nos] Though the sing. possem precedes. Cp. J. 17. 7 uti ex libris Punicis...interpretatum nobis est...quam paucissumis dicam. J. 95. 2 neque enim alio loco de Sullae rebus dicturi sumus et L. Sisenna...parum mihi libero ore locutus videtur.

Ch. 8, 1. ex vero] 'fairly'. Cf. Cic. ad Att. 2. 1. 8 quid verius quam in iudicium venire qui ob rem iudicandam pecuniam acceperit?

3. provenere] 'to crop up'. Cp. Naevius (apud Cic. Cato M. 6. 20) proveniebant oratores novi; Plin. Ep. 1. 13 magnum proventum poetarum annus hic attulit.

4. ita eorum qui fecere] The ea (fecere) of the MSS Jordan is certainly right in following Kortte in cutting out. It is clear that a general conclusion is being drawn from the instance of the Athenians. For the omission of an object after fecere cp. 3. 1 et qui fecere et qui facta aliorum scripsere multi laudantur. The sentiment comes from Cato, if Vopiscus is right when he says—certum est quod Sallustius Crispus quodque M. Cato et Gellius historici sententiae modo in litteras retulerunt: omnes omnium virtutes tantas esse, quantas videri eas voluerint, qui unius cuiusque facta descripserint.

eam...potuere] The ea of the MSS was first altered by Kortte. It should be possunt, not potuere, thinks Kritz, if the sentence gave a general conclusion. But why should not S. say that the consideration in which great men are held depends upon what historians have been able to say of them?

5. copia] Not supply of noble writers, but the advantage of having their deeds recorded by such writers.

negotiosus] 'devoted to affairs'. J. 4. 4 (existumabunt) maius commodum ex otio meo quam ex aliorum negotiis rei publicae venturum.

benefacta] Cato (apud Gell. 16. 1) bene factum a vobis dum vivitis non abscedet.

Ch. 9, 1. igitur] to resume after the digression of the last chapter.

2. supplicils]=supplicationibus, an archaic use. In J. 46. 2 it is used for the olive-branch etc. which ambassadors (caduceatores) carried when asking for peace. Cic. and Caes. use the word only for 'punishment'.

3. ubi pax evenerat] Jacobs says that the words imply 'even towards their former foes', which in pace would not. That seems rather fanciful. If the turn is changed for anything but variety, is it not implied, that the Romans of those times made war only to secure peace, and not from lust of conquest?

seque remque publicam] Que—que, to connect two words, which is an old-fashioned and poetical use, is often used by S. The first member is always me or se, except in J. 100. 5 illo aliisque temporibus. Caesar never uses it, Cicero once only (Fin. 1. 16. 51 easque ipsas sollicitudines, quibus eorum animi 'noctisque diesque' exeduntur e. q. s.). Livy joins two relative clauses thus. Tacitus has it only twice (A. 2. 3, 16. 6) and in Sallust's manner.

4. eos, qui] The instance of T. Manlius Torquatus is referred to in 52. 30.

hostem] The use of a collective singular of concrete substantives is not so common in S. as in Livy and Tacitus. The singular hostis is not (it is true) rare, but hostes is far more common. Other instances are: miles J. 45. 2; pedes J. 101. 6. Cp. too J. 6. 1 leonem atque alias feras...ferire; J. 17. 5 ager frugum fertilis, bonus pecori, arbori infecundus: and for the sake of variety in J. 48. 3 (mons) vestitus oleastro ac murtetis; J. 57. 4 glande aut lapidibus pugnare.

5. magis] is omitted here by P, but in no other place. The omission is due possibly to the ignoscere quam persequi below. Magis is often omitted by Tacitus.

Elsewhere Sallust takes a gloomier view of Roman history—under the influence of Thucydides. He looks on discord as natural to man. Nothing but fear of an enemy gives harmony to the state. The only bright periods in Roman history were the time following the expulsion of the kings, and the interval between the second and third Punic Wars. H. 1. 9 Nam iniuriae validiorum et ob eas discessio plebei a patribus aliaeque discessiones domi fuere iam inde a principio, neque amplius quam regibus exactis, dum metus a Tarquinio et bellum grave cum Etruria positum est, aequo et modeste iure agitatum, e. q. s.

Ch. 10, 1. reges...nationes...populi] the whole world in fact.

Cic. Off. 2. 8. 26 regum populorum nationum portus erat et refugium senatus. Reges monarchies, nationes an aggregate without definite or common government, populi organized communities, of which Carthage was the most notable instance.

patebant] 'were at our disposal'. "The contrary is clausum esse. Cp. Cic. de imp. Pomp. 17. 53 ita clausa nobis erant maria omnia, ut neque privatam rem transmarinam neque publicam iam obire possemus". Kritz. The verb is used in a rather different sense in 58. 2. Servius on Verg. A. 1. 299 says nonnulli sane pateant pacatae sint accipiunt, ut Sallustius, (here).—The construction of postquam, first with a perfect or perfects and then with an impf. denoting a situation, does not occur in Cicero and not often elsewhere. It is found again in C. 12. 1; J. 70. 5 is postquam magnitudine facinoris perculsus ad tempus non venit metusque rem impediebat; with ubi in J. 106. 2 post ubi castra locata et diei vesper erat. Tac., A. 11. 37 has ubi with perf., then with hist. inf., and lastly an impf. Quod ubi auditum, et languescere ira, redire amor, ac...propinqua nox et uxorii cubiculi memoria timebantur; prorumpit Narcissus.

2. optanda alias] Selling proposed optanda (for optandae), and Kritz alias (for aliis), without being aware of the strong MS authority. The sense is clearly 'things desirable enough under other circumstances'. J. 64. 1 virtus gloria atque alia optanda bonis. Oneri refers to otium, miseriae to divitiae.

3. primo pecuniae, deinde imperi cupido crevit] In favour of the transposition recommended by Nipperdey—primo imperi, deinde pecuniae—there is the distinct statement below c. 11 sed primo magis ambitio quam avaritia animos hominum exercebat. Still in § 4 avaritia is taken first, and § 5 ambitio second. That might be due to a sort of chiasmus, but in so confused a passage it would be rash to alter.

ea quasi materies...fuere] One would expect either fuit, the ea being singular and agreeing by attraction with materies, or eae (which Nipperdey proposed to read) to agree with cupidines (the cupido pecuniae and the cupido imperi). Perhaps however the following instances will sufficiently support the ea: 1. 2 (animi...corporis) alterum—alterum. 3. 3 audacia largitio avaritia vigebant. Quae tametsi animus aspernabatur. 31. 1 ex summa laetitia atque lascivia, quae diuturna quies pepererat. J. 41. 1 earum rerum, quae prima mortales ducunt. C. 51. 42 virtus atque sapientia maior illis fuit, qui ex parvis opibus tantum imperium fecere quam in nobis qui ea bene parta vix retinemus.

5. fieri subegit] Subigo is not used in Cicero=cogo, and it is rarely followed by the infinitive; cp. Liv. 9. 41. 5 Tarquiniensem metu subegerat frumentum exercitui praebere.

6. contagio quasi pestilentia invasit] 'the moral infection spread like an epidemic'. Cp. 36. 5 tanta vis morbi ac veluti tabes plerosque civium animos invaserat. J. 32. 4 tanta vis avaritiae in animos eorum veluti tabes invaserat. Observe the variety of construction after invadere. See note on 2. 5.

Ch. 11, 1. animos...exercebat] 'Left...no rest'. Cp. 9. 2 discordias...cum hostibus exercebant. Liv. 39. 40 simultates plures et exercuerunt eum et ipse exercuit eas.

propius virtutem] The comparisons of prope have various constructions in S. Propior with (1) dat. once: cuius aetati mors propior est. (2) ab: quod multo propius est ab eo quo agitat statu. (3) acc.: ipse propior montes...suos conlocat. Propius (adv.) with accusative here. Proximus with (1) dat.: proxumos nostro mari locos. (2) abl.: ea loca quae proxuma Carthagine Numidia appellatur. (3) acc.: in dextero latere, quod proxumum hostis erat. (4) as subst. with gen.: Bocchi proxumos.

2. ignavos] i.e. ignavus. So elsewhere novos, novom, pravom, vivos (not nouus, etc.).

huic quia bonae artes desunt...contendit] Some inferior MSS have hic, but huic is no doubt right. Kritz quotes Liv. 5. 1. 8 Romanis etsi quietae res ex Etruria nuntiabantur, tamen ...ita muniebant. 21. 18. 3 Romani (not Romanis) postquam Carthaginem venerunt cum senatus datus esset. C. 52. 34 Quibus si quicquam umquam pensi fuisset, non ea consilia de re publica habuissent.

3. avaritia pecuniae studium habet] 'includes' (Cato, ap. Gell. 11. 2 Auaritiam omnia uitia habere putabant), or even 'consists in' (Cic. Fin. 1. 13. 42 gubernatoris ars, quia bene navigandi rationem habet).

concupivit] Not a gnomic aorist: the sense is 'no one has in the past and therefore will not in the future'. Cp. C. 58. 15 nemo nisi victor bellum pace mutavit. C. 51. 2 and 11. J. 42. 4 quae res plerumque magnas civitates pessum dedit. 85. 49 etenim nemo ignavia inmortalis factus est. 102. 7 parentis abunde habemus, amicorum neque nobis neque cuiquam omnium satis fuit. The Greek gnomic aorist however is often imitated by Virgil. G. 1. 49, etc.

venenis malis] Venenum is used always by Cicero as a vox mala; it is however strictly a vox media. Cic. Cluent. 54. 148 (where he is quoting a law) qui venenum malum fecit. Gaius says qui venenum dicit, adicere debet utrum malum an bonum: nam et medicamenta venena sunt.

corpus...effeminat] Gellius (3. 1) and two friends hieme iam decedente apud balneas Titias in area sub calido sole discussed this passage, and especially how it could be said that avarice affected the vigour not only of the mind but of the body. Either S. was exaggerating or the exclusive pursuit of wealth led men to disregard the attention due to the body.

neque copia neque inopia minuitur] One would expect that possession would diminish avarice, but in fact it is diminished as little by possession as by want. So 15. 4 (animus Catilinae) neque vigiliis neque quietibus sedari poterat, sleep might have been expected to soothe his mind, but sleep could quiet him as little as waking. Kvíčala however objects that if this were the meaning here, 'neque inopia neque copia' would have been written, and he prefers Fabri's way of putting it—that avarice is a vice to which the very rich and the very poor (and consequently all whose position lies between the two extremes) are subject in an equal degree. But the order of the terms surely makes no difference, cp. 20. 7 nobiles atque ignobiles volgus fuimus, 'the noble as much as the ignoble'.

4. bonis initiis] abl. abs.

5. ductaverat] See 18. 8 patratum. Tac. H. 2. 100 exercitui quem ipse ductaverat.

fidum faceret] morem—maiorum, luxuriose—liberaliter. The alliteration is intentional.

habuerat] So again J. 103. 5 adcurate ac liberaliter habuit, and with other adverbs and adverbial ablatives often. There is rather too much of habere in the chapter; § 3 'includes', § 4 'experienced' and 'showed', § 5 'treated'. The free use of the word, or at least the expression modestiam habere, cp. 61. 4 ferociam quam habuerat vivos; J. 31. 22 quantum importunitatis habent; Or. Lep. 10 habendus metus est aut faciundus, belongs rather to conversational than to literary language.

6. amare potare] "to indulge in wine and women". Merivale. The phrase is repeated in J. 85. 41 quin ergo quod iuvat..., id semper faciant; ament potent.

privatim et publice] 'from private houses and public buildings'. The soldiers did not care whether the property they seized was public or private property. Cp. Cic. Verr. 1. 6. 16 nemini meus adventus labori aut sumptui neque publice neque privatim fuit.

7. nihil reliqui...fecere] Again in 28. 4; 52. 4; 20. 13 quid reliqui habemus praeter miseram animam? (like nihil pensi habere). In J. 76. 4 festinare parare, prorsus ab utrisque nihil relicum fieri = 'to leave nothing undone'.

animos fatigant] 'try the principles of'.

ne illi conruptis moribus victoriae temperarent] ne=nedum, which some MSS and Priscian have. Donatus quotes another instance from Sallust ne illa tauro paria sint, which however is probably a gross corruption of the present passage. There are a few instances in the classics—Cic. Ep. 9. 26. 2 me vero nihil istorum ne iuvenem quidem movit unquam, ne nunc senem. Liv. 3. 52. 9 novam inexpertamque eam potestatem eripuere patribus nostris, ne nunc dulcedine semel capti ferant desiderium. Temperarent is potential of past time—'Much less were they with their corrupt morals to restrain themselves in the hour of victory'. Sauppe however (apud Jacobs-Wirz) supposes an ellipse of num ergo timendum fuit or something of that kind, making the sentence bitterly sarcastic —'Little cause for fear then lest these soldiers with their corrupt morals should restrain themselves' etc.—For the construction victoriae temperarent cp. Tac. H. 3. 31 subit recordatio illos esse qui nuper Bedriaci victoriae temperassent (an imitation of S.). Cicero constructs temperare with the dative of the person only=parco. Livy has irae caedibus imperiis temperare.

Ch. 12, 1. sequebatur] Singular, not because it agrees only with the nearer nominative (as in 25. 5 multae facetiae multusque lepos inerat), but because the three nouns are aspects of one whole. A singular verb is put with—asperitas et insolentia loci; virtus atque sapientia; clades atque calamitas etc. Observe that que is not used. Sequebatur 'came of their own accord'; the word is very common in this sense in Sallust, and cp. Plin. Ep. 1. 8. 14 sequi enim gloria non appeti debet.

innocentia]=pecuniae abstinentia, as in J. 46. 1 Iugurtha ubi quae Metellus agebat ex nuntiis accepit, simul de innocentia eius certior Roma factus; and innocens in C. 54. 6 cum innocente abstinentia certabat.

2. pudorem pudicitiam] 'Pudor est animi, pudicitia corporis castitas' Kritz. Cp. Cic. in Cat. 2. 11. 25 ex hac enim parte pudor pugnat, illinc petulantia: hinc pudicitia, illinc stuprum. —Promiscua habere goes also with pudorem pud.—divina atque humana p. habere does not mean 'they made no distinction between the things of god and men', but 'they cared for nothing in heaven or earth'; cp. J. 31. 9 divina et humana omnia hostibus tradita sunt, and often.—Promiscua means no more than vilia; cp. Tac. G. 5 numerus argenteorum facilior usui est promiscua ac vilia mercantibus.

3. cum...cognoveris...visere] Cum with the future dependent on an infinitive occurs once or twice again in the Catiline, but not elsewhere in Sallust. Indeed according to Dräger (2. 554) only once in other writers—Cic. Verr. 5. 71. 183 mihi optatum illud est, in hoc reo finem accusandi facere, cum et populo R. satisfactum et receptum officium Siculis erit persolutum. The other instances in the C. are 51. 24 qui convenit in minore negotio legem timere cum eam in maiore neglegeris? 52. 17 statuetis—decernere, 58. 16 nam in fuga salutem sperare, cum arma...ab hostibus avorteris, ea vero dementia est. The two verbs are always to be understood as contemporaneous, says Dräger; but that is clearly not so in the present passage.

5. iniuriam facere id demum] For the pleonastic pronoun cp. Cic. Fin. 5. 8. 23 ista anima tranquillitas ea est ipsa beata vita, on which Madvig notes abundantia pronominis non vitiosa, quo cottidiani sermonis more gravius insignitur ea notio, quae in substantivo inest et ab aliis separatur. Cato writes cancer ater, is olet, and amicos domini, eos habeat sibi amicos. Plautus has pater tuus, is erat frater patruelis meus. S. is very fond of this turn, and the pronoun is with him generally followed by demum or vero. C. 20. 4 idem velle atque idem nolle, ea demum firma amicitia est. C. 37. 4 sed urbana plebes, ea vero praeceps ierat multis de causis. C. 8. 3 quia...ea res. C. 58. 16 nam in fuga salutem sperare...ea vero dementia est. J. 63. 7 novos nemo tam clarus neque tam egregiis factis erat, quin is indignus illo honore...haberetur. J. 85. 35 namque cum tu te per mollitiam agas, exercitum supplicio cogere, id est dominum non imperatorem esse. For other forms of a similar pleonasm see C. 61. 1 tum vero, J. 58. 3 sin Numidae propius adcessissent, ibi vero virtutem ostendere, and the constantly occurring quia...eo and tametsi... tamen.

Ch. 13, 1. subvorsos montis, maria constrata esse] Cp. 20. 11 divitias...quas profundant in extruendo mari et montibus coaequandis. Jerome seems to be imitating Sall. when he says: Xerxes rex potentissimus qui subvertit montes, maria constravit. It is objected however to the reading constrata that consternere means to bridge over and not—what the extruendo mari shows to be the meaning here—to extend the land molibus iniectis. Does that matter? The point is rather that the unnatural luxury of the times makes it possible to tread on what should still be sea, no matter how. Klimscha maintains that constructa would give the required sense, construere or extruere acervum rogum sepulcrum being almost synonymous. But is construere used, as extruere is, for piling up (say) the hearth with logs, Hor. Epod. 2. 43? And beyond that, maria constructa would be very ambiguous, for it is far more natural to understand it, as all other commentators do who prefer this reading, of the piscinae. (Val. Max. 9. 1. 1 videlicet ne gulam Neptuni arbitrio subiectam haberet peculiaria sibi maria excogitavit.) Against that interpretation one must appeal to the MS authority and the parallel expression in 20. 11, though it must be admitted that the plural here maria and the constant reference in Latin authors to these fish-pond abominations gives some colour to the explanation. The reading contracta which Dietsch (1859) has is probably a reminiscence of Hor. Od. 3. 1. 33. Montibus coaequandis does not surely, as Kvičala supposes, refer to filling up valleys, but like subvorsos montis alludes not without exaggeration to such works as those of Lucullus, Vell. 2. 33 quem (Lucullum) ob iniectas molis mari et receptum suffossis montibus in terras mare haud infacete Magnus Pompeius Xerxem togatum vocare adsueverat. Varro de re rust. 3. 17 posteaquam perfodisset montem.

2. honeste...per turpitudinem] Per with an abstract noun, as equivalent to an ablative of manner or adverb, is a very favourite construction of Sallust's. C. 42. 2 inconsulte ac veluti per dementiam. J. 7. 1 neque per vim neque insidiis. J. 4. 7 furtim et per latrocinia magis quam bonis artibus.

3. cultus] Perhaps the word is nowhere used in so bad a sense as here. Liv. 29. 21 de cultu ac desidia imperatoris.

terra marique e. q. s.] Gellius 6 (7). 16. 5 gives a list from a satirical poem of Varro's—peacock from Samos, heath-cock from Phrygia, crane from Media, kid from Ambracia, young tunny-fish from Chalcedon, murena from Tartessus, cod (?) from Pessinus, oysters from Tarentum, scallop from Chios (?) sturgeon (?) from Rhodes, scarus from Cilicia, nuts from Thasos, dates from Egypt, chestnuts (?) from Spain. Schmalz quotes from somewhere—intra hos dies scripsit, ut ex India semen boletorum mitteretur. Seneca Ep. 89 nullis animalibus nisi ex fastidio pax est.

luxu antecapere] hunger: Seneca says vomunt ut edant, edunt ut vomant, et epulas, quas toto orbe conquirunt nec concoquere dignantur: thirst by producing perspiration; cold and exhaustion by excessive use of the baths, the tepidaria, caldaria and so forth.

5. eo profusius] Gründel separates the words, 'because they had got to be unable to restrain their appetites, they sought and spent money more recklessly than before when they had not yet exhausted their means'. That I think is to be preferred to the explanation—quo minus animus malis artibus carebat, eo profusius. See note on 1. 3.

Ch. 14, 1. flagitiorum...catervas] As caterva is used only once of things (Gell. 15. 2 vili et incondita verborum caterva) it has been proposed to read stipationem for stipatorum, and by others to adopt the reading of inferior MSS, flagitiosorum atque facinorosorum—unnecessarily. Flagitium is used (like scelus) for a 'scoundrel' by Plautus, and Cicero has Rosc. Am. 46. 134 deversorium flagitiorum omnium. Verr. 5. 1. 4 flagitiorum omnium vitiorumque princeps.

4. a culpa vacuus] with gen. J. 90. 1 ager aridus et frugum vacuus.

par similisque] Jacobs-Wirz (quoting Quint. 10. 1. 102 mihi egregie dixisse videtur Servilius Nonianus 'pares eos (Sallust and Livy) magis quam similes') explains 'alike in degree and kind': Kritz (quoting Cic. Legg. 1. 10. 29 nihil est enim unum uni tam simile tam par quam omnes inter nosmet ipsos sumus) explains better 'equal or at least like'. For that use of que cp. 8. 1 celebrat obscuratque. Liv. 9. 27. 14 caedi capique Samnites, and a few lines further on ad triginta milia caesa aut capta Samnitium proditum memoriae est.

5. molles et fluxi] Surely W. Wagner is quite right in protesting against Jordan's cutting out (molles) etiam. It means 'still' as in § 4 and 61. 4 Catilina...longe a suis...repertus est, paululum etiam spirans. That is a conversational use of the word common enough in Plautus and Terence, and not unknown to Cicero.

6. neque sumptui neque modestiae suae parcere] So 52. 33 parcite dignitati Lentuli, si ipse pudicitiae, si famae suae ...pepercit. 'He spared no sacrifice of money or of honour'. Madvig thinks the correction molestiae self-evident. "Modestiae neglectus ad ea quae hic commemorantur nihil pertinet, neque cum 'sumptui' qui fieret aut subiretur, recte 'modestiae' sed 'immodestiae' quae non fugeretur componenda erat". Is not modestiae however sufficiently justified by the parallel passage quoted?

dum...faceret] Dummodo is never used by S.

Ch. 15, 1. iam primum adulescens] Not 'at the very outset of his youth', but 'to begin then, as a youth'.

nefanda] Cic. would write multa et nefanda. The nefanda perhaps is to go closely with stupra, but cp. J. 80. 3 multa superba et crudelia facinora nobilitatis.

cum virgine nobili] The name is never given.

cum sacerdote Vestae] Asconius (explaining an allusion in the Or. in tog. cand.) says p. 82, 6 Fabia virgo Vestalis causam incesti dixerat, cum ei Catilina obiceretur, eratque absoluta. Haec Fabia quia soror erat Terentiae Ciceronis, ideo sic dixit: etiam si culpa nulla subesset.

2. quod ea nubere illi dubitabat] The inf. after dubito (to have scruples about) in an affirmative sentence is rare. There are but two instances in Cic. apparently, N. D. 1. 40. 113 Accusat Timocratem Metrodorus, quod dubitet omnia, quae ad beatam vitam pertineant, ventre metiri. Att. 10. 3a homines ridiculos! qui cum filios misissent ad Cn. Pompeium circumsedendum, ipsi in senatum venire dubitarint. S. constructs a number of verbs besides with an object-infinitive which are generally found with another construction:—ardere J. 39. 5, cavere J. 64. 2, coniurare C. 52. 24, eniti, imperare, intendere J. 92. 6, postulare J. 17. 1 and others.

adulta aetate] Schmalz proposes to read adultum aetate. Either construction however is found. Cic. Verr. 3. 68. 160 qui in epulis cotidianis adulta aetate per triennium inter impudicas mulieres...versatus sit. Suet. Aug. 69 matres familias et adultas aetate virgines. There is no reason then to alter adulta.

pro certo creditur necato filio vacuam domum scelestis nuptiis fecisse] The expression is supposed by some authorities to come from Cic. in Cat. 1. 6. 14 nuper cum morte superioris uxoris novis nuptiis domum vacuefecisses, nonne etiam alio incredibili scelere hoc scelus cumulasti? The phrase is however probably a stereotyped one. Cp. Liv. 1. 46. 9 cum domos vacuas novo matrimonio fecissent. That Sall. had the Ciceronian sentence in his mind at all is not likely. For firstly, S. leaves out the charge of wife-murder; and secondly, he gives the crime a different date. Nuper in Cic. can hardly mean a year and more ago, and if the crime had been committed before July, 690(64), we should in all probability have heard of it in the Or. in tog. cand. and in Asconius' notes where other such crimes are mentioned (p. 82).

4. infestus] Kritz takes the word passively here, i. e. 'hated by', and not 'hostile to'; but it is used very often by S. and always actively. Even in J. 89. 5 (loca infesta serpentibus) it is probably active (=loca per serpentes hominibus infesta).

neque vigiliis neque quietibus] 'by sleep no more than by waking', 'as little by night as by day'. See 11. 3. The Pseudo-Sall. (Ep. ad Caes. 12. 6) imitates thus: neque tibi nox neque dies curam animi sedaverit.

5. colos] The word occurs only here in the nom. sing., and odor only in J. 44. 4. In both places the old MSS have without exception color and odor, but Probus quotes this passage with colos, and Fronto the other with odos. As to labor, Servius (on Verg. A. 1. 253) says that S. writes labos 'paene ubique'. It occurs four times; twice not in speeches C. 7. 5; J. 100, 3, where no old MS gives labos, twice in two speeches from the Hist. or. Cott. 1; Mac. 18, where V, the only MS that has them, gives labos. Jordan (K. B. 144) thinks therefore that with regard to this word at any rate it was only in speeches that S. indulged in this old form. Lepos—the common form in Cicero—occurs C. 25. 5, and honos C. 20. 8; J. 3. 1.

foedi oculi] Donatus and Servius quote this for foedum = crudele. It is rather 'glassy' or 'bloodshot'.

citus modo, e. q. s.] Cic. de Off. 1. 131 cavendum est ne aut tarditatibus utamur in ingressu mollioribus, ut pomparum ferculis similes esse videamur, aut in festinationibus suscipiamus nimias celeritates, quae cum fiunt, anhelitus moventur, vultus mutantur, ora torquentur: ex quibus magna significatio fit non adesse constantiam.

in facie...inerat] Inesse is used by S. elsewhere with the dative: it is possible therefore that ei (above) is here the object.

Ch. 16, 2. ex illis] Referring per synesin to iuventutem: cp. J. 28. 2 senatus consultus est...eique decrevere. J. 14. 6 familia nostra... quorum. J. 102. 6 populo Romano... melius visum amicos quam servos quaerere, tutiusque rati volentibus quam coactis imperitare.

habere] rather awkwardly depends on imperabat. Imperare takes the infinitive, as well as ut, in S. J. 47. 2 imperavit frumentum et alia quae bello usui forent conportare.

3. insontis sicuti sontis] sicuti = 'as if they were', rather than 'no less than'.

gratuito] 'for nothing', i.e. without any prospect of gain. Kvíčala suggests that it means οὐδὲν προπαθών. Cp. Sen. Ep. 105. 3 odium autem ex offensa sic vitabis neminem lacessendo gratuito (if that be the right reading).

4. tutae tranquillaeque res omnes, sed ea] The ea of course refers to res, see note on 10. 3, ea. One might have thought that a time of calm would not have suited the storm-bird Catiline, but on the other hand he saw there precisely his opportunity.

Ch. 17, 1. L. Caesare et C. Figulo consulibus] It seems to have been the rule, at least until Livy, to omit the copula unless the consuls are given only one name each. Then et (Cic. Cato M. 4. 10 Tuditano et Cethego) or more rarely que (id. 14. 50 Centone Tuditanoque) is employed. S. however offers another exception in C. 38. 1 Cn. Pompeio et M. Crasso consulibus— L. Julius Caesar and C. Marcius Figulus were consuls in 690 (64). Caesar was brother to Julia, who married first M. Antonius Creticus (to whom she bore Antonius the triumvir), and afterwards the conspirator Lentulus.

appellare] Notandum est hoc unicum exemplum ubi cum infinitivo historico coniungitur certum temporis momentum— (h. e. circiter Kalendas Iunias). Constans.

inparatam rem publicam] An attribute is often used by S. for a substantive, for the sake of variety: cp. J. 31. 1 multa me dehortantur...opes factionis, vostra patientia, ius nullum, ac maxume quod e. q. s.: J. 91. 5 res trepidae, metus ingens, malum inprovisum, ad hoc pars civium extra moenia in hostium potestate coegere uti deditionem facerent. Or. Lep. 17 proscriptionem innoxiorum ob divitias, cruciatus virorum inlustrium, vastam urbem fuga et caedibus: etc. See note on 48. 4 deprehensi.

2. ubi satis explorata sunt quae voluit] Explorata may be an adjective, but it is more likely that voluit is an aorist-perfect for pluperfect: cp. J. 70. 1 per idem tempus Bomilcar, cuius inpulsu Iugurtha deditionem, quam metu deseruit, inceperat e.q.s.

necessitudo] =necessitas in S. very often. It occurs only once in the ordinary sense: J. 80. 6 Iugurthae filia Bocchi nupserat. Verum ea necessitudo apud Numidas Maurosque levis ducitur. Necessitas is not used in the Catiline or Jugurtha: on the other hand necessitudo does not occur in the Histories, but necessitas in the ordinary sense does twice—in speeches. Gellius (13. 3) says: *In libris ueterum uulgo reppe*rias 'necessitudinem' dici pro eo quod necessum est. Necessitas=necessitudo is found rarely in Cic. and Caes. The distinction however seems to have been fairly established in Sallust's time, but he, as is not unusual, adheres to the old fashion in his earlier works, though he conforms to the accepted use in his later Histories. S. also uses claritudo for Cicero's claritas, and Cicero himself has sanctitudo for sanctitas in Rep. 4. 8.

3. P. Cornelius Lentulus Sura] Praetor 679 (75), Consul 683 (71): turned out of Senate next year: Praetor again 691

(63). Cic. in Cat. 3. 5. 11 speaks of his dicendi exercitatio. Brut. 66. 235 P. Lentulus, cuius et excogitandi et loquendi tarditatem tegebat formae dignitas, corporis motus plenus et artis et venustatis, vocis et suavitas et magnitudo. Cic. in Cat. 3. 7. 16 Lentuli somnum.

P. Autronius Paetus] 47. 1; 48. 7: school friend of Cicero and quaestor with him. Cic. p. Sulla 25. 71 semper audax, petulans, libidinosus; quem in stuprorum defensionibus non solum verbis uti improbissimis solitum esse scimus, verum etiam pugnis et calcibus e. q. s. Cic. Brut. 68. 241 P. Autronius voce peracuta atque magna.

Cassius] 44. Praetor with Cic. 688 (66) and candidate with him for consulship. Cic. in Cat. 3. 7. 16 L. Cassii adipes. Asconius in tog. cand. p. 73 says Cassius quamvis stolidus tum magis quam improbus videretur, post paucos menses in coniuratione Catilinae esse eum apparuit ac cruentissimarum sententiarum fuisse auctorem.

C. Cornelius Cethegus] 32. 2, 55. 6, 43: Cic. in Cat. 3. 7. 16 Cethegi furiosam temeritatem: p. Sulla 25. 70 Quis de C. Cethego atque eius in Hispaniam profectione ac de volnere Q. Metelli Pii cogitat e. q. s.?

Sullae] 47. 1. Cic. p. Sulla 2. 6 Quis nostrum Servium Sullam, quis Publium...defendendum putavit? Their father Servius was brother of the Dictator. The P. Cornelius Sulla whom Cic. defended was probably a more distant relation, Cic. de off. 2. 8. 29.—To put the name common to the two in the plural is also Cicero's practice. S. has also J. 42. 1 Ti. et C. Gracchus. Livy usually writes e. g. 10. 1. 7 Marcio Livio Dentre et Aemilio.

Varguntеius] 28. 1. Cic. p. Sulla 2. 6 Quis nostrum adfuit Varguntеio? Nemo: ne hic quidem Q. Hortensius, praesertim qui illum solus antea de ambitu defendisset.

Q. Annius] 50. 4. His other name was Chilo, if Q. Annium Chilonem be, as is probable, the right reading in Cic. in Cat. 3. 6. 14.

M. Porcius Laeca] 27. 3.

L. Calpurnius Bestia] 43. 1.

Q. Curius] chh. 23. 26. 28.

4. M. Fulvius Nobilior] This is the only person who is not mentioned in the sequel as taking part in the performances of the conspiracy. Nor is he mentioned in any other author. Wirz therefore suspects that the name has got into the text from a corrupted gloss 'A. Fulvius nobilis' taken from 39. 5. The Fulvii Nobiliores were of senatorian rank.

L. Statilius] 43. 2, 55. 6.

P. Gabinius] 40. 6, 55. 6. Not Capito but Cimber acc. to Cic. in Cat. 3. 3. 6.

C. Cornelius] 28. 1.

domi nobiles] A fixed phrase to denote a man who is a magnate in a provincial town, but a nobody at Rome. Liv. 8. 19. 4 vir non domi solum sed etiam Romae clarus.

6. iuventus pleraque] Cic. uses only the plural of the adj. S. also uses freely parts of the singular of ceteri (which are rare in Cic.)—cetera multitudo, ceteri cultus, ceterum exercitum (Cato has the same collocation), ceteram planitiem, cetera pluviâ.—Cicero says p. Cael. 4. 10 multi boni adulescentes illi homini nequam atque improbo studuerunt.

vivere copia] for the classical vivendi.

incerta...malebant] Malle with acc. is a rare constr. Is Tac. H. 2. 86 imitating?—pro certis et olim partis nova ambigua ancipitia malebat. The variety is noticeable.

Ch. 18, 1. in quis] Jordan reads quis for quibus on the authority of the grammarian Diomedes, who says est et secunda anaphora, per quam elocutio non convenienter respondens ad aliud refertur occulte, ut est apud Sallustium: sed...pauci, in quis Catilina fuit, de qua quam brevissime potero dicam. But D. is not always accurate in his quotations from Sallust, and here he writes brevissime wrongly: so that it is hardly safe to trust him, at any rate when the quis is not what he quotes for. And not only that, but there is no other instance of quis in the Catiline. In the Jugurtha however there are fourteen (in J. 18. 3 quisque for quibusque?), though for some reason or other chh. 29—65 are without it, and there are nine in the Histories. It is clear then that quibus is the true reading here. The contraction was perhaps a conversationalism; Cicero at any rate uses it only in his Letters, and Horace only in the Satires and Epistles.

2. de qua] i.e. coniuratione, from coniuraverunt. An exactly similar example is not to be found, but cp. Cic. Ep. 2. 3. 1 equidem quid sentiam aut scribam ad te pluribus postea, aut, ne ad eam meditere, inparatum te offendam (where sententiam has to be supplied from sentiam). Cic. pro Mur. 13. 29 vestra responsa atque decreta et evertuntur saepe dicendo et sine defensione oratoris firma esse non possunt: in qua si satis profecissem, parcius de eius laude dicerem. Cic. de Orat. 2. 2. 5 etenim ceterae fere artes se ipsae per se tuentur singulae; bene dicere autem...non habet definitam aliquam religionem, cuius terminis saepta teneatur.

3. A new election was rendered necessary by the conviction of Autronius and Sulla, and it is for this second election for which S. makes Catiline anxious to stand. But Asconius (p. 79) seems to represent that it was the first. Mommsen however (Röm. Staatsrecht 1^2. 485. n.) thinks that Catiline did not return to Rome in time for either of these elections (Cic. p. Cael. 4. 10 fuit Caelius adsiduus mecum praetore me; non noverat Catilinam: Africam tum praetor ille obtinebat), and that it was the election of next year from which the resolution of Tullus (not to admit Catiline till the trial was over) was designed to exclude him. That cannot be the meaning I think either of Sallust's words or of Asconius' certainly rather confused account—Paullo ante diximus Catilinam cum de provincia Africa decederet petiturus consulatum et legati Afri questi essent de eo in senatu, graviter vituperatum esse. Professus deinde est Catilina petere se consulatum. L. Volcacius Tullus consul consilium publicum habuit, an rationem Catilinae habere deberet, si peteret consulatum: nam quaerebatur repetundarum. Catilina ob eam causam destitit a petitione. On a matter of fact Asconius is a more trusty authority than Sallust, and perhaps the post here is a slip for ante.

quod intra legitumos dies profiteri nequiverit] Nequiverit is abandoned by all modern editors. Jordan refers to Mommsen R. S., but in his second edition 1. 485. n. he declares it to be indefensible. Neither the mood nor the tense admits of explanation. Nequiverat should be read; such mistakes are frequent in P. 58. 4 nequiveram for -im, J. 39. 1 fuerint for -ant etc.—sometimes corrected, sometimes not. The legitumi dies are the trinundinum (Cic. Ep. 16. 12. 3 as to Caesar's candidature for the consulship in 705, ad consulatus petitionem se venturum, neque se iam velle absente se rationem haberi suam; se praesentem trinum nundinum petiturum), or interval of 17 days between the announcement of the day of holding the consular comitia and that day itself. In early times a name might be given in up to the very day of the comitia; in later times it was necessary for a name to be given in before the trinundinum. It is questionable whether this reform had come into force at this time. Probably not, for it would be a forced translation of intra l. dies 'before the beginning of the days during which it is no longer legal to offer a name' (the phrase intra Kalendas = ante Kalendas includes the Kalends themselves 'before or on'. Gell. 12. 13).

As to what were the rights of the consul in refusing an intending candidate's name authorities are divided. Lange maintains that an impending criminal prosecution in itself debarred a candidate. Mommsen is of opinion that the matter was entirely in the discretion of the consul, though that Tullus' refusal on this occasion was a rather unusual, if not high-handed proceeding. Perhaps however Dr John's middle position is nearer the truth—that if the prosecution had got so far as the sortitio iudicum a man was necessarily excluded. In the case of Scaurus the prosecution do not avail themselves of an interval of 30 days allowed them to collect evidence in Sardinia, so that the trial may get on far enough to prevent Scaurus standing for the consulship (Ascon. Arg. of Cic.'s speech). The same with the case of Clodius and Milo: the aim was that Cic. ad Q. f. 2. 1. 2 sortitione iudicum facta comitia haberentur.

It is very doubtful whether S. is right in representing the plot to have been to make Catiline one of the consuls, instead of Sulla. In his defence of Sulla, Cicero of course declares that it was Catiline who was to be consul; but it is curious that in the copious list of Catiline's offences in the Or. in tog. cand. and in Asconius' comments nothing is said of such an attempt on Catiline's part, though the projected slaughter of the senate is mentioned. Other authorities too—Livy's Epitomator, Suetonius, Cassius Dio—make the plot to have been to restore the unseated consuls by force. Catiline's part in this first conspiracy was probably a very subordinate one, and its real directors Crassus and Caesar. Even Sallust seems to disconnect this plot with Catiline's true conspiracy in the parenthetical way in which he introduces his notice of it. (What evidence there is will be found Cic. p. Sull. 24. 67, Liv. Ep. 101, Suet. Jul. 8.)

6. ea re cognita] 'as the plot got to be known'. The logical subject of the abl. abs. is not here, as it should be, the subject of the sentence. Cp. J. 10. 1 parvom ego, Iugurtha, te amisso patre sine spe sine opibus in regnum meum accepi (where the father is of course not Masinissa's).—As to the meaning, Dietsch holds that as the text stands Sallust's account is absurd. Is it conceivable, he asks, that no public action should have been taken, and the conspirators have had only to postpone the execution for a month? Cassius Dio 36. 27 says that the new consuls being warned of some danger provided themselves with a guard, and that that prevented the execution of the design. Probably S. said the same, but it has dropped out. He marks a lacuna therefore before ea re, and the filling up would be—'the consuls, warned of some danger determined to provide themselves with an armed escort'. But if Sallust's narration is to be cleared of all improbabilities, where are we to stop?

transtulerant] The pluperfect for the aorist-perfect. This use is more common in S. than perhaps in any other author, cp. C. 24. 2, 36. 5, 50. 4, 56. 2, J. 57. 6, 64. 4, 72. 1, 73. 3 and 4, 88. 3. The reference to the time before which the action happened is left to be supplied by the reader from what follows. These pluperfects were perhaps in Seneca's mind when he spoke of Sallust's verba antę expectatum cadentia et obscura brevitas. In the present instance S. is thinking already of the second projected attempt. (For Livy, where the use is not uncommon, see Kühnast, p. 213: it is common too in Curtius.)

7. iam tum] Then on 5th Feb. their designs embraced both senators and consuls, while before—on 1 Jan.—they were content with the consuls. Herzog explains—'then already, as on other occasions afterwards'.

8. patratum] The word is a favourite of Sallust's, but is eschewed by Caesar, Suetonius and Pliny. Cicero has it only twice: ad Att. 1. 14. 7 Teucris promissa patravit, and from an old law in Legg. 2. 8. 19 feriis iurgia ne movento easque in famulis operibus patratis habento. In Sallust's time it had probably sunk into being a slang, if not a coarse word, only (Quint. 8. 3. 44 on κακέμφατα—ductare exercitus et patrare bella apud Sallustium dicta sanote et antique, ridentibus si dis placet). S. however revived it, and Livy and Tacitus follow his lead.

Ch. 19, 2. et] explicative—'many respectable people thought Piso would prove a counterpoise against the power of Pompey, for Pompey's power was already alarming'.

3. in provincia] The in provinciam of P certainly will not do. The order of words and the context show that S. cannot have meant in provinciam...iter faciens, and no other explanation of the reading is admissible. Cassius Dio 36. 27 (ἡ γερουσία) εὐθὺς αὐτὸν ἐς Ἰβηρίαν, πρόφασιν ὡς καὶ ἐπ' ἀρχήν τινα, ἔπεμψε· καὶ ὁ μὲν ἐνταῦθα ὑπὸ τῶν ἐπιχωρίων, ἀδικήσας τι αὐτούς, ἐσφάγη. Asconius, p. 83, ibi (in Hispania), dum iniurias provincialibus facit, occisus erat, ut quidam credebant, a Cn. Pompeii clientibus Pompeio non invito.

in exercitu] Dietsch adopts sine exercitu the reading of a Munich MS—the best of the second class. Surely he remarks S. meant to give the reason of their having an opportunity.

5. veteres] only from the time of the Sertorian war.

voluntate eius] Pompeius was in the far East, and his approval cannot well have been given till after the assassination.

numquam Hispanos praeterea] but L. Piso Frugi, propraetor, was killed in Spain. Cic. in Verr. 4. 25. 56.

Ch. 20, 1. tametsi—tamen] see note on 12. 5. Tametsi—tamen is common in the Catiline, and in the earlier part of the Jugurtha, but from J. 38. 9 through the rest of that work and in the Histories it does not occur. It is first common in Cornificius (abt B.C. 86). In Cicero it appears less and less, not once for instance in the invectives against Catiline. In his writings between the years 63—43 quamquam—tamen (which is also Sallust's chief substitute), and etsi (etiamsi)—tamen prevail.

secessit] P has secedit, which there seems no sufficient reason for rejecting. S. often passes from the historical present to the perfect, and vice versâ: cp. J. 76. 6 ibi vino et epulis onerati illaque et domum et semet igni conrumpunt et quas victi ab hostibus poenas metuerant, eas ipsi volentes pependere. J. 21. 3 igitur Iugurtha oppidum circumsedit, vineis turribusque...expugnare aggreditur. J. 64. 3 postquam haec atque alia talia dixit neque animus Mari fleetitur, respondit. J. 91. 3 castris egreditur noctemque totam itinere facto consedit: and other instances, all, it is true, from the Jugurtha. (See however C. 21. 5, 45. 3.)

arbitris...amotis] arbiter ('one who is present'), like βραβεύς, means both 'witness' and 'judge'. Remotis arbitris is the usual phrase.

2. virtus fidesque...spectata forent] If the predicate belongs to more than one feminine substantive, it is sometimes neuter plural in S.: cp. J. 68. 1 deinde ubi ira et aegritudo permixta sunt. J. 38. 8 nox atque praeda castrorum hostis, quo minus victoria uterentur, remorata sunt. J. 52. 4 plerosque velocitas et regio hostibus ignara ('the enemy's ignorance of the district') tutata sunt. (This construction is not found in Caesar, and is, I believe, rare in Cicero.) In the following instances however the predicate is feminine plural: J. 70. 2 ex quo illi gloria opesque inventae. J. 73. 6 quorum res fidesque in manibus sitae erant. J. 114. 4 spes atque opes civitatis in illo sitae—because perhaps one of the substantives in each pair is plural and concrete. In one place, C. 51. 12 fama atque fortuna eorum pares sunt (if that be the right reading), we have an exception. The relative pronoun also when it refers to two feminine singular abstract substantives is neuter plural: C. 3. 4, 5. 7, J. 41. 3 sed ubi illa formido mentibus decessit, scilicet ea, quae res secundae amant, lascivia atque superbia incessere.

dominatio in manibus] Schmalz compares Asinius Pollio (Cic. Ep. 10. 31. 3), quam iucunda libertas et quam misera sub dominatione vita esset, i.e. quae sub dominatione est vita. The joining of two substantives by prepositions (except cum and sine) is rare in classical and dignified Latin. 'The great hopes we have, nay the power we grasp'. d. i. m. is not a mere explanation of spes magna, but a correction and addition; hence the plural fuissent.

3. per ignaviam, etc.] i.e. per ignavos aut vanos homines. ignaviam in reference to virtus, vana ing. to fides (virtus fidesque vostra).

multis et magnis tempestatibus] 'many great occasions'. multa nefanda stupra 15. 1, without et, because nefanda stupra are taken to represent one idea.

facinus incipere] incipere with a subst. in acc. is rare in prose. Cicero gives it only a neuter pronoun for object, not a subst.

6. ceterum. The connexion is—So I need not repeat, but I should wish to add. In 17. 6 it means 'not only so, but'. The adv. is not often used in the Catiline, but is very common in the Jugurtha, to mean 'but' adversative—a sense in which the word is not used in Cic. and Caes.

nosmet ipsi] 'unless we assert our liberty ourselves'. This is one of the few places where we owe the true reading to V, for the ipsos of P is not only not what the sense requires, but contrary to Sallust's usage in the matter. When the personal pronoun is strengthened by -met it is Cicero's rule to put ipse in the same case: e.g. T. D. 2. 21. 47 praecipitur ut nobismet ipsis imperemus. Sallust however puts the ipse (it is sometimes omitted: C. 44. 2, J. 4. 2 ne...quis existumet memet studium meum laudando extollere) in the nominative: C. 23. 2 suamet ipse scelera occultare, J. 18. 7 semet ipsi Nomadas appellavere, 41. 9 semet ipsa praecipitavit. Nor without -met is ipse put in the same case as the reflexive pronoun: J. 58. 6 (cum) alii in angustiis ipsi sibi properantes officerent.

7. strenui boni nobiles atque ignobiles] 'All the rest of us, though we are ready for work and well disposed, the man of family as much as the man of no family'. Jordan however has doubts whether the reading of P in this case is satisfactory. Should there not be the same sort of contrast in the first member as in the second? Perhaps then Aurelius Victor gives us what S. wrote in his phrase 'immissique in imperium promiscue boni malique nobiles atque ignobiles' (cp. J. 67. 2 iuxta boni malique strenui et inbelles), though P may be right in leaving out the que (cp. C. 51. 9 armis cadaveribus, cruore atque luctu). The strenui then will be an old gloss to boni. In this instance however must not P be defended against its champion? Would S. make Catiline admit in his impassioned address that any of his party were mali?

fuimus] 'have become'.

8. pericula repulsas] egestatem obviously answers to divitiae, and perhaps repulsas to honos, but the words are not chosen or arranged to correspond precisely. Pericula in the sense of 'criminal charges' is common.

9. quae quousque tandem] cp. Cic. in Cat. 1 (ad init.) Quousque tandem abutere Catilina patientia nostra?

inhonestam] i. e. non honestatam honore, 35. 3.

in manu vobis] cp. J. 14. 13 nos uti per otium tuti simus in vostra manu est. J. 31. 5 id frustra an ob rem faciam in vostra manu situm est: so here 'to gain the victory depends on you'. Jordan doubts whether the reading of the inferior MSS in manibus be not the true one, and indeed the sense required is rather 'victory is within our grasp'. S. is fond of repeating a phrase that occurs to him: cp. dominatio in manibus above. In manu is used for 'to have at one's disposal', 51. 36: 'to be able to control', J. 14. 4: and in manibus in a more literal sense in J. 73. 6 opifices agrestesque omnes, quorum res fidesque in manibus sitae erant.

10. viget aetas, animus valet] Cic. Mil. 31. 85 vestrae religiones viguerunt, vestra vis valuit. Catiline's followers have the lusty bodily vigour of youth, and are in full possession of their mental powers. J. 11. 5 confectum annis Micipsam parum animo valuisse.

divitiis] the luxuries which wealth supplies serve but to debilitate the strength.

consenuerunt] with S. -ere is the rule, -erunt the exception. In the Catiline there are only four instances of the longer form: dixerunt 51. 9, sumpserunt 51. 38, venerunt 45. 3. The form in -erunt is however the accepted literary form. The shorter conversational -ere is less common even in Plautus and Terence than the other, and is extremely rare in Cicero (see Or. 47. 157 nec verò reprehenderim: scripsere alii rem; 'scripserunt' esse verius sentio, sed consuetudini auribus indulgenti libenter obsequor) and Caesar. The only writer with whom the form -ere predominates is Cato (it is about thrice as common as the other form) and from him no doubt S. borrowed it. Livy afterwards uses it often, but mainly (acc. to Wölfflin) where he wishes to give peculiar elevation to his style. Tacitus also uses it freely.

11. etenim] 'And besides'. J. 85. 49. 'Etenim' utimur non tam cum proxima confirmamus, quam cum in universa argumentatione progredimur, ut saepe fere idem sit ac 'porro' 'praeterea'. Madvig.

12. cum—emunt] 'with all their buying of'.—cum has almost a concessive sense.

toreumata] cp. 11. 6, 'works in rilievo'—a Greek word in scorn.

emunt—aedificant] So Nepos says in praise of Atticus 13. 1 cum esset pecuniosus nemo illo fuit minus emax minus aedificator.

trahunt vexant—vincere] They treat their wealth as a foe to be vanquished. Deltour compares the French 'bourreau d'argent', 'tourmenter sa fortune'. The phrase divitias vincere is used in a different sense in J. 63. 2 domi modicus, lubidinis et divitiarum victor.

16. vel imperatore e. q. s] he kept his promise at the last, 60. 4 strenui militis et boni imperatoris officia simul exequebatur.

Ch. 21, 1. quibus mala abunde omnia erant] The use of adverbs as adjectival predicates is commoner in S. than in any prose writer. From the frequency of the construction in the comic poets and Cicero's letters, it is clear that it was a conversational use. Caesar appears to use only praesto so. In many instances the verb (esse) may be taken to mean 'find oneself', 'behave', 'happen', etc., and from such an understanding of the verb the construction no doubt originated; but on the whole the adverb is treated and felt entirely as a predicate. The following are some of the most unusual instances, J. 85. 6 adnitundum est uti neque vos capiamini et illi frustra sint (cp. Plaut. Amph. 974 iam hisce ambo et servus et era frustra sunt duo qui me Amphitruonem rentur esse). Applied to things, frustra esse occurs in C. 20. 2, and often in the Jugurtha. Cp. also J. 14. 11 ut ubivis tutius quam in meo regno essem (Cic. ad Att. 14. 22. 2 qui mihi videntur ubivis tutius quam in senatu fore). For abunde cp. C. 58. 9 omnia nobis tuta erunt, commeatus abunde. Ita J. 85. 7 ita ad hoc aetatis a pueritia fui, uti e. q. s. So elsewhere circum, contra, facilius, laxius licentiusque, longe, parum, post, satis, etc.

movere] cp. Tac. Ann. 3. 32 motam rursus Africam incursu Tacfarinatis, and motus (terrae) for earthquake and political convulsion. "Imitated by Ammianus Marcellinus (about 395 A.D.) 15. 5 composita turbare; quieta perturbare". Merivale.

condicio belli] i. e. what to be got from the war. Cic. p. M. Marc. 4. 12 recte igitur unus invictus est, a quo etiam ipsius victoriae condicio visque devicta est.

praemia] On that point they had already been informed, 17. 1.

quid ubique] cp. 27. 1 C. Manlium Faesulas...dimisit; praeterea alium alio, quem ubique opportunum sibi fore credebat. Either (1) ubique=et ubi, or (2)='anywhere'. The latter is I think right.

opis aut spei] for variety's sake put for res et spes.

2. tabulas novas] Cic. in Cat. 2. 8. 18 Quid enim exspectas?...an tabulas novas? Errant qui istas a Catilina exspectant.

proscriptionem] probably only 'a publication', took its sinister sense from Sulla's proceedings.

sacerdotia] For the priests had allotments of land, stipends, and in some cases an official residence.

fert] cp. 58. 6 diutius in his locis esse, si maxume animus ferat, frumenti atque aliarum rerum egestas prohibet.

3. praeterea esse] supply 'he said' from polliceri.

P. Sittium Nucerinum] an eques of Nuceria in Campania. Catiline, or rather Sallust, is inaccurate here. Sittius left Rome for Spain in the year 690—64 (cp. Cic. p. Sull. 20. 56), and Piso was already dead in June or July of that year (Asconius, p. 83 Piso autem, cum haec (the Or. in tog. cand.) dicerentur, perierat).—Probably then Sittius was sent out to succeed Piso. Sittius however does not appear to have been long in Spain. He went thence to Mauretania, where he commanded a mercenary force. He returned to Rome after the suppression of the conspiracy, but to escape a prosecution—presumably for complicity therein—he started off again for Spain, en route for Mauretania. There he acted as a very successful 'condottiére' for many years. Later he did good service in the African War 708 (46), with Sallust therefore.—It is curious that Sallust throws suspicion on Sittius while he spares Sulla. If Sittius was an accomplice, so was Sulla (see Cic. p. Sull. 20). S. treats Crassus and Caesar with the same respect of persons (Crassus 17. 7, Caesar 49. 1).

C. Antonium] Hybridam, son of M. Antonius the orator, uncle and father-in-law of the triumvir. He was expelled from the Senate at the same time as Lentulus, for oppression of the Provincials, and was praetor with Cicero. After the conspiracy he was tried for oppression in his government of Macedonia, was defended by Cicero, but condemned. It was a subordinate object of Sallust's, according to Mommsen, to wash Antonius as white as possible (59. 4 pedibus aeger).

4. cupiditatis suae] for suus not referring to the subj. cp. 28. 1 constituere...Ciceronem...domae suae...confodere.

5. curae haberent] is not used by Cic. Caes. or Livy.

Ch. 22, 1. popularis] again 24. 1, 52. 14 only. It is not used in the Jugurtha or Histories. A slang equivalent for socios (participes conscios), used here in contempt. Ter. Eun. 1031 o populares, ecquis me hodie vivit fortunatior? Phorm. 35 amicus summus meus et popularis Geta. Donatus says popularitas in omnis rei consortium sumitur.

humani corporis sanguinem] a fable. Cic. says nothing about it. Plut. Cic. 10 καταθύσαντες ἄνθρωπον ἐγεύσαντο τῶν σαρκῶν. Dio. 37. 30 παῖδα γάρ τινα καταθύσας, καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν σπλάγχνων αὐτοῦ τὰ ὅρκια ποιήσας, ἔπειτα ἐσπλάγχνευσεν αὐτὰ μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων. Flor. 4. 4 additum est pignus coniurationis sanguis humanus, quem circumlatum pateris bibere.

circumtulisse] i. e. had it passed round from hand to hand.

2. inde] i. e. ex ea potione: degustare elsewhere takes an acc.

consuevit] rarely used impersonally. This is the only place in Sall. where fieri (or facere) is expressed. C. 29. 2, J. 25. 3, 59. 3 (sc. fieri), J. 82. 1, 96. 3 (sc. facere). Both the verb of custom and the inf. are omitted in H. 4. 44 ut in secunda re. H. 2. 39 prudentiore quam illas per gentes imperio.

atque eo dictitare fecisse] These words cannot but be corrupt. Two ways of taking them are proposed. 1. fuere qui dicerent Catilinam dictitare se eo fecisse: but then why is dictitare present when aperuisse and circumtulisse are past? 2. to make dictitare an historical infinitive (J. 32. 3 fuere qui...elephantos traderent: alii perfugas vendere, pars praedas agebant: would offer something of a parallel); but against this there are, if no other objection, the objections which apply to any interpretation—why is the frequentative dictitare employed, and how is it that fecisse has neither subject nor object? If however the words are to be retained, the latter way is the better. It is more reasonable to suppose that Sallust, anxious to disavow any responsibility for the story, gives what was said to have been the object of the rite, than that Catiline should be represented as giving this very unnecessary explanation at the end of the meeting. Ritschl maintains that the words as they stand are a corruption of some barbarously worded gloss, put by a reader who wished to give the (certainly not unnecessary) explanation, that the final clause (quo e. q. s.) did not refer merely to the last words but to the whole sentence, not merely that is to the disclosure of the plans but also to the sacrifice. The reader wrote perhaps atque eo dictam rem fecisse—[dictam rem however (and dictas res) appears in some late MSS, and looks more like an attempt to improve upon dictitare]. If however the words are really a corruption of something Sallust wrote, Ritschl suggests that it was idque eo fecisse. For other conjectures see text.

3. non nulli ficta et haec e. q. s.] S. seems to think that the theory that the blood-drinking was a later invention of Cicero's friends is not improbable: and yet he has stated above that it was a contemporary rumour: § 1 fuere ea tempestate qui dicerent ('there were people who said at the time that'). Dr John supposes that S. uses a favourite phrase without consideration (cp. C. 17. 7, 48. 7, 14. 7).

Ch. 23, 1. probri gratia] 'on account of his disgraceful life'. Cic. de leg. 3. 3. 7 censores...probrum in senatu ne relinquunto.

3. Fulvia] Whether she had anything to do with the Fulvius mentioned in 17. 3, or with the Fulvia wife of Clodius (afterwards of Curio and M. Antonius) there is no evidence.

maria montisque polliceri] The expression does not, it seems, occur elsewhere, but it must have been a common saying, as it still lives on in the Italian 'promettere mari e monti'. 'To promise mountains' however often occurs. Ter. Phorm. 68 modo non montes auri pollicens. Pers. Sat. 3. 65 magnos promittere montes.

4. occultum habuit] 'did not keep concealed'. J. 94. 3 quamquam toto die intentos praelio Numidas habuerat. J. 10. 1 neque ea res falsum me habuit.

quae quoque modo] cp. 21. 1 quid ubique. It is either (1) quae et quo: or (2) quoque=in any way. The first is the more appropriate, as it is not said that Fulvia had any other informant than Curio. But Nipperdey is right, I think, in preferring the reading of some inferior MSS quoquo='no matter how'.

5. ea res] and also, as Plut. Cic. 11 says, the fear of what would happen if Catiline and Antonius got together as consuls.

6. pleraque nobilitas] see note on 17. 6 iuventus pleraque.

aestuabat — credebant] 7. 4 iuventus...erat...discebat...

habebant: as the writer gets further away from the subject sense overrides grammar.

quamvis egregius] 'however distinguished'. Quamvis is used only once again by S. and also with an adj. (spes) quae quamvis ampla. Or. Mac. 20.

post fuere] 'fell into the background'.

Ch. 24, 1. comitiis habitis] seems to mean 'at' and not 'after the comitia', as in Cic. Phil. 2. 32. 81 si qui (de caelo) servavit, non comitiis habitis, sed prius quam habeantur, debet nuntiare. Kritz demurs, however, saying nondum enim absolutis et ad finem perductis comitiis, non poterant declarari creati consules. But certainly the declaration was made at the Comitia. For a similar aoristic use of the perf. pass. part. cp. Liv. 2. 36. 1 servum...sub furca caesum medio egerat circo (Cic. Div. 1. 26. 55 writes servus per circum, cum virgis caederetur, furcam ferens ductus est).

2. concusserat] Kvíčala explains the tense thus 'afterwards however they recovered from the shock and supported their leader energetically'. Roby § 1489 quotes this passage under the heading 'the standard of time is sometimes not given till a subsequent separate sentence', and it is more natural to explain it with reference to the following sentence, 'Catiline's rage was not checked for a moment by this repulse, while his associates had at the first experienced a severe shock'. See note on 18. 6 transtulerant.

neque tamen] as you would have supposed after this repulse. S. does not mention the prosecution by Lucceius.

pecuniam...sumptam mutuam] For the coupling of both a participle and an adjective to one substantive, cp. Liv. 32. 2 pecunia Romae mutua sumpta (observe the difference of the order of words). J. 12. 3 quem ille casu ministrum oblatum promissis onerat.

Faesulas] Fiesole, close to Florence.

Manlium] The Greek historians, Plut. Cic. 14, Dio 37. 30, Appian B. C. 2. 2, call him Mallius. Manutius &c. on Cic. ad Att. 4. 3. 3 give him the cognomen of Acidinus. Plut. id. ἄνδρα τῶν ἐπιφανῶς ὑπὸ Σύλλᾳ στρατευσαμένων. Dio id. Γάϊός τις Μάλλιος τῶν τε πολεμικῶν ἐμπειρότατος (μετὰ γὰρ τῶν τοῦ Σύλλου λοχαγῶν ἐστρατεύετο) καὶ πολυδαπανώτατος ὤν.

princeps fuit belli faciundi] Cic. Phil. 5. 16. 44 (Caesar) ipse princeps exercitus faciendi et praesidii comparandi fuit. —belli faciendi. "This periphrasis of a verbal idea by facere and the corresponding subst. is colloquial. Cicero admits it only in the passive, e.g. gratulatione facta". Schmalz.

3. mulieres etiam aliquot] which was surprising considering the subjection of women in Rome.

4. interficere] Appian B. C. 2. 2 χρήματα δὲ ἀγείρων πολλὰ παρὰ πολλῶν γυναικῶν, αἱ τοὺς ἄνδρας ἤλπιζον ἐν τῇ ἐπαναστάσει διαφθερεῖν.

Ch. 25, 1. Sempronia] wife of D. Junius Brutus (consul 677—77), mother of D. Junius Br. Albinus, one of the percussores Caesaris. Cp. § 4. Her husband was away at this time perhaps, 40. 5.

2. docta] for the variety of construction cp. 10. 4 pro his superbiam crudelitatem, deos neglegere, omnia venalia habere edocuit. Cic. T. D. 5. 20. 58 tondere filias suas docuit.

psallere saltare elegantius, e. q. s.] psallere. Quint. 1. 10. 31 nec psalteria et spadicas, etiam virginibus probis recusanda. Saltare. Cic. Mur. 6. 13 Nemo enim fere saltat sobrius, nisi forte insanit, neque in solitudine neque in convivio moderato atque honesto: tempestivi convivii, amoeni loci, multarum deliciarum comes est extrema saltatio. Tu mihi adripis id, quod necesse est vitiorum esse postremum. Corn. Nep. Epam. 1. 2 scimus enim musicen nostris moribus abesse a principis persona, saltare vero etiam in vitiis poni, and his Preface. Serv. on Verg. G. 1. 350 (quoting this passage) saltationem aptam religioni nec ex ulla arte venientem.

3. sed ei cariora semper omnia quam decus atque pudicitia fuit] decus atque pudicitia are regarded as one notion, and the verb agrees with the nearer subject. J. 74. 3 Numidis in omnibus proeliis magis pedes quam arma tuta sunt. (On the other hand in J. 50. 6 sin opportunior fugae collis quam campi fuerat, ea vero consueti Numidarum equi facile inter virgulta evadere, the verb does not agree with the nearer object—which the emphasis on collis will perhaps explain.) Cp. Cic. Phil. 4. 4. 9 Quis illum igitur consulem nisi latrones putant? Ep. 6. 4. 3 Me non tantum litterae...quantum longinquitas temporis mitigavit. Ov. Trist. 1. 2. 1 quid enim nisi vota supersunt? Liv. 9. 8. 5 nec quidquam ex ea (sponsione) praeterquam corpora nostra debentur Samnitibus. But in these and other instances the sentence has a negative or interrogative form. Is not S. alone in applying this construction to affirmative sentences?

4. sed ea] § 3 sed ei, § 4 sed ea. S. sets up Sempronia again, to launch once and again a fresh attack on her.

5. verum] used with contempt, as in C. 52. 33 verum parcite dignitati Lentuli. Tacitus clearly borrows from S. in his character of Poppaea Sabina. A. 13. 45 sermo comis, nec absurdum ingenium: modestiam praeferre et lascivia uti... Famae nunquam pepercit.

posse] The hist. inf. generally expresses some action; cp. however J. 67. 2 ita neque caveri anceps malum neque...resisti posse.

iocum movere] i.e. to give a humorous turn to the conversation. Teuffel quotes as parallel a grammarian's definition of 'mimus': sermonis cuiuslibet motus sine reverentia.

inerat] agrees with the nearer of the two substantives.

Ch. 26, 1. nihilo minus] resuming after the digression of the last chapter. One would have thought that after the preparations for revolution which Catiline had made, he would not have cared about the consulship. But in Cat.'s plans the consulship was simply one among other means for accomplishing his designs, and conversely the armed bands were to support his candidature. Sallust however in what follows does not give a very plausible reason for Catiline's persistence in standing for the consulship.

2. dolus] Gellius (12. 9) classes the word along with tempestas, facinus, periculum, venenum (C. 11. 3) that in the older language were vocabula ancipitia—capable of a good or bad sense. "Ulpian too says: Veteres dolum etiam bonum dicebant et pro solertia hoc nomen accipiebant, praecipue si adversus hostem latronemve aliquis machinaretur. The Roman term for legal fraud was dolus malus". Long. Astutia however is generally used in bad sense (cp. Cic. Ep. 3. 10. 9 quod si id est maxime astuti, omnia ad suam utilitatem referre), and probably S. did not intend to be very complimentary to Cicero's detective skill.

4. pactione provinciae] Of the two consular provinces, Cisalpine Gaul and Macedonia, the latter and more productive province had fallen to Cicero, but he resigned it to Antonius. Afterwards Cicero resigned Cisalpine Gaul as well to Q. Metellus Celer.

praesidia amicorum] Cic. ad Att. 2. 1. 7 equitatus ille quem ego in Clivo Capitolio...collocaram.

5. consulibus] but it has just been said that Catiline relied on Antonius' support, and that it was Cicero only for whom C. was laying his snares. Are we then to suppose that S. refers to the consules designati, for Cic. (in Cat. 1. 5. 11) at any rate alleges that Cat. had plotted to kill his fellow-competitors—cum proximis comitiis consularibus me consulem in campo et competitores tuos interficere voluisti? Or shall we say that consulibus is used generally? for the consular authority was represented mainly by Cicero as Antonius maintained a completely passive attitude (but cp. 29. 3, 32. 1 consuli). In the next chapter also § 2 consulibus occurs again. The first explanation will hardly do there, as there is no evidence that after the election Cat. plotted at any other time to assassinate the consuls designate. It is possible though that—the former explanation being right in c. 26—S. repeats the plural through inadvertence, as Dr John suggests. Neither explanation however appears to me very probable, and the proposal to read consuli in c. 26, and to strike out consulibus in c. 27, is tempting. Nipperdey would strike out quas consulibus in campo fecerat altogether. He takes objection not only to consulibus but to in campo, for it is said above that Cat. was aiming at Cic.'s life omnibus modis.

aspera foedaque] adj. for adv. as often: in this place for variety, prospere cessere being used above. The adj., so used, is not always next to the verb: 52. 29 vigilando agundo bene consulundo prospera omnia cedunt. J. 101. 1 citi sese ostendunt. A participle is sometimes so used: J. 53. 1 properantes arma capiunt.

Ch. 27, 1. Manlium Faesulas] cp. 24. 2. Manlius had come up to Rome to assist in the candidature. Cicero describes Catiline at that time as circumfluentem colonorum Arretinorum et Faesulanorum exercitu p. Mur. 24. 49.

Camertem] of Camerinum in Umbria. Nothing is known of Septimius and C. Julius.

ubique] see 21. 1 quid ubique.

2. cum telo esse] to have arms concealed about the person. Cic. Mil. 4. 11 (an old law) quae...esse cum telo hominis occidendi causa vetat.

item alios iubere] J. 100. 4 ipse armatus intentusque item milites cogebat. alios=ceteros, 43. 3, and often in the Jugurtha—a use common in Livy, but not found in Cicero. The words were not probably very sharply defined in the language of conversation.

fatigari] the passive hist. inf. occurs only once again in the Catiline 10. 6 haec primo paulatim crescere, interdum vindicari: more often in Jug. with and without expressed subject.

Observe the arrangement here. 27. 2—28. 3 preparations of the conspirators in Rome, 28. 4 and outside Rome. 29—31. 4 counter-preparations of the government. Then follows the struggle between them. The narrative too is broken up by short descriptions of the resulting situation 27. 2, 28. 4, 31. 1—3, in which the verbs are mainly in the historical infinitive.

3. Sallust it will be observed puts the meeting at Laeca's house before the passing of the sctum (29. 2). It is clearly a mistake, which has thrown this part of the narrative into confusion. Linker and Ottema attempted to throw the blame on a transposition of the sheets of the original of all our MSS, and wished to put 27. 3 postremo—28. 3 susceperant after 31. 4 Paulo. They are obliged however at 31. 5 to alter postremo to postero die and to insert Catilina after causa. That theory is now however given up even by the thorough-going defenders of Sallust at the present time. Indeed the mistake is rather cherished by Dietsch (ed. of 1859, 1. 43 ...postremo consilium, quo res ordinasset, non indignum esse scriptore, qui ornate quam tenuiter annalium in modum scribere mallet), A. W. Zumpt, and others, as a striking instance of Sallust's advance upon the meagre annalists, and of his admirable ideal method. Rather it is a striking instance of Sallust's indifference to accuracy, and neglect of the most obvious sources of information. His acquaintance with Cicero's two first Catilinarian speeches must have been very superficial.

per M. Porcium Laecam] Jordan quotes, in support of the per of the MSS, 44. 1 sed Allobroges ex praecepto Ciceronis per Gabinium ceteros conveniunt. But the difficulty which has been felt is not in the expression itself, but that S. should not have known that the meeting was held at Laeca's house, or that knowing it he did not say so. The fact surely was notorious: Cic. in Cat. 1. 4. 8 Dico te priore nocte venisse inter falcarios—non agam obscure—in M. Laecae domum: p. Sulla 18. 52 quid tandem de illa nocte dicit, cum inter falcarios ad M. Laecam... convenit? The correction of Palmieri penes (which Dietsch adopts) is surely out of the question. Penes is never used as a precise equivalent for apud (Ter. Adelph. 388 istaec iam penes vos psaltriast. Ellam intus e. q. s. is the nearest instance perhaps). Better is the correction propere ad (propere per 28. 2 below). The propere will account for the per, but is perhaps better away; the original omission of the ad is explained by the termination of convocat. I doubt however whether after all there is much difficulty in supposing that S. did not care to mention the detail that the meeting was held in Laeca's house, or even that he did know that it was so. He was quite at sea about the when, why should he know the where? (The ibi is not either in favour of a change: it need mean no more than 'at that meeting'. cp. 5. 2.)

4. paraverat] S. has a great fondness for the indicative mood, and there are many instances besides the present instance of its use in Or. Obl. in the relative sentences, which cannot but be regarded as parts of the speech: C. 14. 7 scio fuisse nonnullos qui ita existumarent, iuventutem, quae domum Catilinae frequentabat, parum honeste pudicitiam habuisse: C. 50. 3 convocato senatu refert quid de eis fieri placeat, qui in custodiam traditi erant. Cp. also C. 22. 3, 30. 6, 50. 4, 51. 32 and 43, J. 38. 9 Iugurtha...verba facit: tametsi ipsum...clausum tenet (so P, but Jordan teneret), tamen se...missurum: 54. 1 hortatur ad cetera quae levia sunt parem animum gerant (here sunt because q. levia sunt is only a periphrasis for levia); and many others.

Ch. 28, 1. Cornelius] was certainly one. See Cic. p. Sull. 18. 52. (Appian B. C. 2. 2 and Plut. Cic. 16 confuse him with C. Cornelius Cethegus, when they mention Cethegus as one of the two.)

Varguntеius senator] Cic. in Cat. 1. 4. 9 talks of duo equites. Perhaps V. had lost his place in the senate in consequence of the trial de ambitu (Cic. p. Sull. 2. 6). Appian gives Lentulus, Plutarch Marcius as the other. Cic. p. Sull. 6. 18 says that Autronius set Cornelius on.

cum armatis hominibus] Can S. be right about this? Would the two conspirators have made their 'morning-call' with attendants, and armed attendants? The other authorities say nothing of this. Appian B. C. 2. 3 Λέντλῳ δὲ καὶ τοῖς συνωμόταις ἔδοξεν...Λέντλον μὲν αὐτὸν καὶ Κέθηγον ἐφεδρεῦσαι ταῖς Κικέρωνος θύραις περὶ ἕω μετὰ κεκρυμμένων ξιφιδίων, ἐσδεχθέντας τε διὰ τὴν ἀξίωσιν καὶ λαλοῦντας ὀτιδὴ μηκῦναι τὴν ὁμιλίαν ἐν περιπάτῳ καὶ κτεῖναι περισπάσαντας ἀπὸ τῶν ἄλλων. Plut. Cic. 16, Dio 37. 32. Hagen supposes that here (as also in 18. 3) Sall., intent upon writing quam verissume (4. 3), wrote down what he found in his authorities in spite of the improbability. Dietsch marks a lacuna after hominibus, for he is convinced that S. must at least have added what he supposed these men were for. Sallust's idea may have been that the armed men were to be kept in reserve to shield the murderers afterwards, or to force an entry if necessary. Certainly Cicero's precautions (in Cat. 1. 4. 10 domum meam maioribus praesidiis munivi atque firmavi) were rather extravagant as against two men only.

4. in Etruria] The 120,000 soldiers settled in Etruria, Samnium, and Lucania.

Ch. 29, 1. longius] only here of time in S., but often in Caesar.

exagitatam] Exagitari is never used in S. in the sense 'discussed', 'canvassed', but always to mean 'excited'. The choice then lies between Nipperdey's agitatam (the senate would surely not get their first intimation of the matter from the talk of the town, he says) and Kortte's exagitatum, which most editors rightly adopt. The senators had already been much excited by popular talk, so that when Cicero gave them an opportunity, the Senate gave expression to its feelings in the Sctum ultimum.

2. decrevit, darent] cp. J. 35. 2 persuadet...regnum Numidiae ab senatu petat: C. 45. 1 ita agant permittit. Sallust is the only writer to omit ut after decerno and peto. The omission of ut after hortari (J. 54. 1, 56. 2) is found also in Caesar and Tacitus.

3. ea potestas...maxuma permittitur] 'The powers thereby conferred are the greatest the senate can give'. Caesar B. C. 1. 5 calls it illud extremum atque ultimum senatus consultum. Willems remarks upon this explanatory passage (ea potestas...ius est) "The words seem to me an interpolation. In the first place, it is not true that a iussus populi was required for all the measures enumerated, not for instance for recruiting or for coercion of the allies. In the second place, the party of the populares, to which Sallust belonged, never admitted that the senate had the right to suspend the laws de provocatione (which is implied in domi imperium atque iudicium summum habere)". Le Sénat, 2. 252, n.

consuli] the singular; for the authority, not the persons, of the consuls is meant. Cp. Liv. 3. 9. 5 quod populus in se ius dederit, eo consulem usurum; non ipsos libidinem ac licentiam suam pro lege habituros.

According to other authorities, on the night of the 20th Oct. Crassus called Cicero up to show him an anonymous letter he had just received, warning him to leave Rome to escape the impending massacre. (Caesar too, whether at this time as is probable or not, gave Cicero intimation of the movements of the conspirators, Suet. Jul. 17.) The production of this letter in the Senate on the next day brought courage and conviction to the senators it seems. They are thereby assured that there is not an understanding between the democrats and anarchists as there had been before—a fact that had made them cautious in dealing with the first conspiracy; and the information that was laid before them by a certain Q. Arrius of Manlius' movements in Etruria, dispelled the doubts they had felt, much to Cicero's vexation, as to whether there was anything in the consul's warnings. Hence they were prepared to pass the Sctum ultimum.

Ch. 30, 2. arma portari] 'were transported to one place or another'. Cp. 42. 2 armorum atque telorum portationibus.

Hor. Od. 1. 26. 3 tristitiam et metus tradam protervis—portare ventis.

3. senati decreto] The genitive senati appears five times in Jordan's text: c. 36. 5, 53. 1, J. 40. 1 (senati decreta), J. 25. 11 (senati verbis). In the three instances from the Catiline the form has, besides that of P, the authority of grammarians in its favour. It is only in these formulae that it is employed. In C. 53. 1, two lines above senati decretum, S. writes senatus magna pars, and cp. with J. 25. 11 senati verbis J. 21. 4 senatus populique R. verbis. And if a preposition is used the form senatus appears. C. 51. 36 per senatus decretum, J. 28. 3 ex senatus decreto, and C. 42. 3 ex senatus consulto. The use of senati is perhaps to be reckoned among Sallust's archaisms: senati consulto is twice cited by a grammarian from Sisenna, and Plautus uses it. But yet the form is common in inscriptions, and Quintilian writes 1. 6. 27 Quid de aliis dicam, cum senatus senati an senatus faciat, incertum est. In C. 59. 5 Dietsch writes tumulti causa against the best MSS, but with the authority of the grammarian Nonius.

Q. Marcius Rex] consul 686—68, and afterwards proconsul in Cilicia. Beyond his correspondence with Manlius nothing is said of his doings.

Q. Metellus Creticus] consul 685—69, and, as proconsul, he finished the subjugation of the Cretans.

4. ad urbem] Pseudo-Asconius on Cic. in Verr. 2. 6. 17 Omnis magistratus qui intramuranus non est nec urbanus, etiamsi administrator eius Romae est, ad urbem dicitur. Sallustius: ii utrique e. q. s.

impediti ne triumpharent calumnia paucorum] It was not the aristocracy, but Pompeius who opposed their triumphs. He maintained that neither could triumph inasmuch as they had fought alieno auspicio:—Marcius not, because of the Lex Manilia 688(66); Metellus not, because of the Lex Gabinia 589(165). Metellus did triumph however in 692(62) and then got the name of Creticus which S. by anticipation now gives him.

quibus omnia honesta atque inhonesta vendere mos erat] J. 80. 5 caeci avaritia, quis omnia honesta atque inhonesta vendere mos erat. J. 31. 12 homines superbissumi quibus... honesta atque inhonesta omnia quaestui sunt—a favourite reflection of Sallust's. In his Histories S. constructs mos est with the usual ut.

5. Q. Pompeius Rufus] afterwards proconsul in Africa 693 (61). It is more likely that he was sent to Capua at a later time, and to succeed Sestius. Cic. p. Sest. 4. 9.

Q. Metellus Celer] consul 694 (60), governed Gallia Cisalpina as proconsul after Cicero resigned it in 692 (62). Cic. in Cat. 2. 3. 5 itaque ego illum exercitum prae Gallicanis legionibus et hoc dilectu, quem in agro Piceno et Gallico Q. Metellus habuit, et his copiis, quae a nobis cotidie comparantur, magno opere contemno: and id. 12. 26.

6. sestertia centum] over 800 guineas.

7. itemque decrevere] a decrevere to be taken from this to govern libertatem, etc.

Capuam] Is distribuerentur considered as a verb of motion, or is in to be supplied from in cetera municipia? 'should be broken up and sent to'.

minores magistratus] not probably a fixed, but a relative title (Mommsen R. S. 1^2. 19). The tresviri nocturni are certainly included, probably also the aediles and perhaps the quaestors. P gives here maiores, which Dietsch thinks has some claim to be considered. Certainly the reading would give the Stusconsultum a more thorough-going and exceptional stamp.

Ch. 31, 1. omnis tristitia invasit] for the construction see 10. 6.

2. neque loco neque homini cuiquam] quisquam with any but a personal subst. is rather rare (but Cic. Verr. 2. 6. 17 cuiquam generi hominum), and would not be ventured but for the following homini. Cp. J. 72. 2 neque loco neque mortali cuiquam aut tempori satis credere.

3. rei publicae magnitudine belli timor insolitus] magnitudine abl. of cause to insolitus: the extent and power of the Republic had left no enemies to fear.

afflictare sese] Cic. T. D. 3. 26. 62 muliebres lacerationes genarum pectoris feminum, capitis percussiones.

rogitare, omnia pavere] pavere takes an acc. once or twice in Livy, and often in Tacitus. Jacobs-Wirz prefers to punctuate rogitare omnia, pavere, as in J. 66. 1 parare omnia, festinare; but the pavere then is very weak. Certainly rogitare is more fitted to stand alone, but even rogitare will be rather solitary, and Eussner's rogitare omnia, omnia pavere (which Schmalz adopts) is not a very daring alteration. However that may be, rogitare and pavere should be taken as a pair,— 'they were alarmed at the answers they received'.

superbia atque delictis omissis] J. 41. 3 lascivia atque superbia.

5. sicut iurgio lacessitus foret] Jordan refers for the use of sicut to 38. 3, 53. 5: and Fabri (who reads however et ut for aut sui above) takes the clause to refer to the prosecution of Paullus, and explains the meaning to be that Catiline wished by his presence to create the impression that he regarded this prosecution merely as an attempt to annoy him by a malicious attack on his honour. But sicut comes only from C, and the sense I think requires one of the conjectures si, sicubi (=si forte—that word however does not occur in S., though it is unnecessarily conjectured in J. 60. 4), or si cuius:—At last either to dissemble (his very presence in the senate would do that) or to clear himself, should he be provoked by taunts from any quarter, he attended the meeting of the senate.

6. praesentiam eius timens] Cic. in Cat. 1. 5. 10 magno me metu liberabis, dum modo inter me atque te murus intersit.

luculentam] 'brilliant' or 'splendid'. Cicero applies the same epithet to Cato's speech on 5th Dec., ad Att. 12. 21. 1 cur ergo in sententiam Catonis? quia verbis luculentioribus et pluribus rem eandem comprehenderat: where it means only 'perspicuous', 'distinct', 'outspoken'.

postea scriptam edidit] consequently, it is implied, I need say nothing of it. It was published in 694 (60) according to Cic. ad Att. 2. 1. 3 (though that passage is rightly (?) suspected).

7. ut erat paratus ad] J. 7. 4 Iugurtha ut erat inpigro atque acri ingenio. Paratus is generally constructed with inf., but once (J. 91. 2) with ut, and with ad here only.

ea familia ortum] ortus only here in S. with simple ablative, elsewhere with ex. Cicero's construction with ab does not occur. The fact that ex is used in all writers with orior in speaking of the source of streams fixes the metaphor perhaps in the common expressions, C. 6. 3 invidia ex opulentia orta est, etc.

omnia bona in spe haberet] Cic. ad Att. 11. 19. 1 quod nulla equidem habeo in spe. Omnia='nothing but'. Cic. Ep. 5. 10 (a) sed tamen omnia mihi dura imperas.

plebem Romanam] Should populum Romanum be read here with Dietsch and Schmalz? But it is difficult to suppose that if the archetype of P had P. R. the writer can have interpreted that plebem R. The plebem is not out of place in Catiline's mouth perhaps.—The earliest Sergius that we hear of was decemvir in 305 (449) Liv. 3. 35. 11. A L. Sergius Fidenas was consul for the third time in 316, and consular tribune in 321. A C. Sergius was thrice consular tribune between 367 and 374. The most distinguished however was a M. Sergius Silus who is highly eulogized by Pliny H. N. 7. 29 M. Sergio ut quidem arbitror nemo quenquam hominem iure praetulerit, licet pronepos Catilina gratiam nomini deroget. He lost his right hand in the Second Punic War, but went on fighting with an iron substitute.

inquilinus civis] inq. is used here only as an adj. Cp. J. 12. 5 mulieris ancillae. The construction does not occur in Caesar, and is rare in Cicero. S. may have borrowed it from Cato, who has ventus auster, lapides silices etc. As to the justice of the taunt, Arpinum received civitas in 451 (303), and ius suffragii in 566 (188). In this chapter S. misplaces one utterance of Catiline's (see next note), and perhaps he is wrong about this too. Asconius says (p. 84) Huic orationi (in tog. cand.) Ciceronis et Catilina et Antonius contumeliose responderunt, quod solum poterant, invecti in novitatem eius, and, though Cat. may have repeated himself, Cic. declares (Or. 37. 129) that Cat. was silent and did not attempt to answer this speech—the first of the invectives, nor does Cic. in the second speech make any allusion to any such taunt.

9. quoniam quidem, e. q. s.] The remark however was made a few days before the Comitia, and to Cato. Cic. p. Mur. 25. 51 praesertim cum idem ille in eodem ordine paucis diebus ante Catoni ... iudicium minitanti ac denuncianti respondisset, si quod esset in suas fortunas incendium excitatum, id se non aqua sed ruina restincturum. (Florus 4. 1. 7 follows S., and Val. Max. 9. 11. 3 gives it thus L. vero Catilina in senatu, M. Cicerone incendium ab ipso excitatum dicente; Sentio, inquit, et quidem illud si aqua non potuero, ruina exstinguam.)

Ch. 32, 1. ex curia] not necessarily the Curia Hostilia, but any place in which the senate might meet. The senate met on this occasion in the temple of Juppiter Stator. Cic. in Cat. 1. 13. 33, and ad init. hic munitissimus habendi senatus locus.

neque insidiae consuli procedebant] a curious construction! The following passages are quoted as parallel: (a) below, § 2 insidias consuli maturent, (b) J. 35. 4 insidiatores Massivae paret, (c) C. 40. 2 requirere coepit, quem exitum tantis malis sperarent, (d) C. 40. 3 miseriis suis remedium mortem expectare. In all five passages Gründel takes the datives (?) to be dependent on the noun. Jacobs-Wirz understands the tantis malis in (c) to be abl. abs., and in the other passages takes the dat. to be dependent on the phrase insidiae procedebant (etc.), though in the present instance the consuli goes more closely with insidiae than with procedebant. Dietsch thinks this passage stands quite alone, and must be emended, for insidiae is not a verbal noun as traditio responsio obtemperatio with which a dative is found constructed in Cic., and the dative with procedere is never a dat. incommodi. He supposes therefore, following Gerlach, that intentae has fallen out after consuli (or else would strike out consuli). Is not however the explanation of Jacobs, Kritz and others the right one? For this dative cp. Caes. B. G. 5.20 imperat frumentum exercitui. Cic. traditio alteri: obtemperatio scriptis legibus: intercessorem dictaturae: sibi ipsi responsio. Liv. exprobatio cuiquam: remedium timori: Vulcano votum, etc. (Kühnast, p. 130). Tac. suffugium hiemi: subsidium rei familiari: paci firmator, etc. (Dräger, p. 25).

multa antecapere] Wirz takes multa to be a gloss to explain intempesta below. Kritz, who also strikes it out, asks 'why not all?'; but it must mean 'many things besides what he had already'.

cum paucis] 'only a few'. Cic. in Cat. 1. 9. 24 quamquam quid ego te invitem, a quo iam sciam esse praemissos, qui tibi ad Forum Aurelium praestolarentur armati? id. 2. 2. 4 moleste fero quod ex urbe parum comitatus exierit.

2. mandat quibus rebus possent opes factionis confirment] For the mixture of tense after an historical present cp. Cic. Verr. 2. 23. 55 rogant eum, ut sibi id, quod ab ipsis abisset pecuniae, curet. Caes. B. G. 1. 8 castella communit, quo facilius si se invito transire conarentur, prohibere possit. The clause which is logically nearer to the principal, in such a case, is the one to be put into the present. Sallust however writes J. 46. 4 persuadet ut Iugurtham maxime vivom, sin id parum procedat, necatum sibi traderent (where Cicero would have put procederet—tradant. Dräger, H. S. 1. 236).—Hoffmann agrees with Dietsch that possint should be read here.

ex suo numero]=ex numero suorum. Cp. J. 35. 6 igitur unus ex eo numero, qui...parati erant.

Ch. 33, 1. quo] without a comparative is common in S. cp. 11. 5, 14. 2, 38. 3, etc.: and for the variation quo...uti cp. 34. 2 non quo...sed uti, 58. 3.

corpora nostra...qui] J. 85. 28 vostra consilia accusantur, qui mihi summum honorem et maxumum negotium inposuistis.

feneratorum] The XII Tables fixed the highest rate of interest at 10 per cent. per annum. Afterwards it was reduced by half: cp. Tac. A. 6. 16. For the provinces there seems to have been not even a legal limit.

plerique patriae sed omnes fama atque fortunis expertes sumus] The old-fashioned construction of expers with the ablative, which Plautus uses, is employed to give variety: cp. J. 74. 3 Romani signorum et armorum aliquanto numero, hostium paucorum potiti. J. 84. 2 plerosque militiae paucos fama cognitos. Or. Lep. 17 praedam venum aut dono datam. The use of sed is questionable, in C. 61. 3 (pauci...paulo divorsius sed omnes tamen advorsis volneribus conciderant), the tamen makes all the difference. Weinhold's patria sede, or better Eussner's independent patriae sedis would mend the passage: cp. Or. Lep. 12 plebis innoxiae patrias sedes occupavere pauci satellites mercedem scelerum.

liberum corpus] The severity of the XII Tables, which (if Gellius 20. 1. 18 rightly understands the words) allowed the creditor even more than the exact 'pound of flesh', was mitigated by the lex Poetelia et Papiria 428 (326). Liv. 8, 28. 8 ne quis..., in compedibus...teneretur; pecuniae creditae bona debitoris, non corpus obnoxium esset.

praetoris] a praetor was murdered by usurers 665 (89) because he ventured secundum debitores ius dicere.

2. vostrum] Gellius 20. 6. 14 'inportunissime' inquit (Apollinaris Sulpicius) 'fecerunt qui in plerisque Sallusti exemplaribus scripturam istam sincerissimam corruperunt. Nam cum ita in Catilina scriptum esset: saepe maiores uestrum miseriti plebis Romanae, uestrum obleuerunt et uestri superscripserunt. Ex quo in plures libros mendae istius indoles manauit,—an unpleasant intimation of early corruption in the MSS of Sallust.

opitulati] a conversational word, frequently used in Cicero's letters, but not by Caesar, Livy, or Tacitus.

argentum aere solutum est] The Lex Valeria 668 (86). Velleius 2. 23 Valerius Flaccus turpissimae legis auctor qua creditoribus quadrantem solvi iusserat. A creditor had to be satisfied with the copper as for the silver sestertius—with 6*s.* in the pound.

3. plebes...a patribus secessit] (1) 260 (494) Liv. 2. 32. (2) 305 (449) Liv. 3. 50. J. 31. 17 maiores vostri parandi iuris et maiestatis constituendae gratia bis per secessionem armati Aventinum occupavere. (3) 467 (287) to the Janiculum owing to the burden of debt. Liv. Ep. 11. (4) C. Gracchus occupied the Aventine.

5. te atque senatum obtestamur, consulatis miseris civibus—neve nobis—inponatis] see note on 51. 7.

maxume ulti] ulti is logically the principal verb, 'how in the battle for life or death we may sell our blood as dear as possible'.

Ch. 34, 1. respondit—vellent—discedant] The other instances in S. of the present subj. in oratio obliqua dependent on a past tense are 41. 5 legatis praecepit ut studium coniurationis simulent, e. q. s. (Dietsch however reads respondet and praecipit) and 52. 14. Cicero appears to have never put the present in this case, but there are numerous instances in Caesar and Livy (Kühnast, p. 225). For the mixture of tense here cp. 32. 2. Hoffmann says that the present (discedant and proficiscantur) is here used that there may be no mistake about their having the force of imperatives; if the impf. had been used it would have been possible to take them hypothetically.

2. optumo cuique] i.e. nobilissumo cuique ex optimatibus.

Massiliam in exilium proficisci] Cic. in Cat. 2. §§ 14, 16. Milo after Clodius' murder went to Marseilles.

oreretur] The same form is found J. 72. 1, but oriretur in J. 6. 3. "The poets of the Augustan age use neither oriretur nor oreretur. In the MSS of the prose writers, and especially in the more accurate, oreretur and orerentur are so common, that they cannot be regarded, one and all, as mistakes of the writers of the manuscripts." Neue, Formenlehre 2. 418.

3. earum exemplum] The words imply that we have here an exact copy of the original letter: and the style makes that exceedingly probable. The letter contains many words and phrases that do not occur elsewhere in Sallust: satisfactio, conscientia de culpa, medius fidius, statum dignitatis obtinere, aes alienum meis nominibus, honore honestatos.

Ch. 35, 1. re cognita] cognita is nom. Catulus had befriended Catiline it is said and got him acquitted when he was charged with incest with a vestal virgin, Fabia, sister of Cicero's wife Terentia. The trial took place in 681 (73).

fiduciam—tribuit] for the more usual fidem facit.

2. in novo consilio] the sudden resolution of going to Manlius.

3. non quin] P V etc. have non quin aes alienum meis nominibus ex possessionibus solvere non possem, et alienis nominibus liberalitas Orestillae suis filiaeque copiis persolveret, sed quod, e. q. s. If non quin is to be kept the non (possem) must go. I have ventured to restore et for at, which Jordan has ex conj., as he states in his preface to the second edition p. xi, 'haec verba neque Nipperdei patrocinio neque coniectura mea ab omni dubitatione vindicata esse sero intellexi'. The at does not mend matters much; for other conjectures see critical notes to text. If we expunge the non and take the et—persolveret as parenthetical with Nipperdey, the passage will do well enough in a letter written in such hurry. 'Not but what I could have paid out of my own property my own personal debts—and the liberality of Orestilla would have wiped off out of her own and her daughter's fortune those for which others had given security on my behalf—it is not that, but because...' aes alienum alienis nominibus is explained by some editors to mean debts arising from loans raised by friends of Catiline on his security, but see 24. 2.

non dignos homines] Cicero, and perhaps Murena,—the first consul in his family.

honore honestatos] Plaut. Capt. 355 Di tibi omnes omnia optata offerant, quom me tanto honore honestas—an archaic, perhaps popular, phrase.

4. hoc nomine] common in the epistolary style for causa. Cic. ad Att. 6. 2. 3 is multis nominibus...Graecos in eo reprehendit quod mare tantum secuti sunt.

6. Orestillam commendo tuaeque fidei trado] J. 63. 3 sed is natus et omnem pueritiam Arpini altus. V corrects to O. tibi commendo.

Ch. 36, 1. C. Flaminium] The Flammam of one MS is probably from a gloss—a C. Flaminius Flamma is mentioned in Cic. ad Att. 14. 16. 4.

in agro Arretino] Arezzo not far from Florence: the 'via Cassia' was the shortest route, but Catiline went by the 'via Aurelia'. Some of his followers awaited him at Forum Aurelii.

2. praeter—condemnatis] not as Priscian says for condemnatos, for praeter is adv., cp. Gellius 1. 23. 13 uti posthac pueri cum patribus in curiam ne introeant, praeter ille unus Papirius.

4. multo maxume] It was the rule with Cicero to put multo with comparatives, longe with superlatives. Sallust, on the contrary, puts longe with the superlative only once, J. 9. 2 longe maxuma, and writes Or. Macr. 9 longe saevior. Cicero, it is said, has multo with a superlative only once de imp. Pomp. 18. 54 magna ac multo maxuma.

otium atque divitiae, quae prima mortales putant] Fabri, on the strength of J. 41. 1 abundantia earum rerum quae prima mortales ducunt, explains this construction as an attraction, prima being used substantively. Rather in the present passage quae is according to the ordinary rule neuter, and in the passage quoted we have an instance of synesis common with res. J. 102. 9 humanarum rerum fortuna pleraque regit.

perditum irent] common in the comic drama, and clearly a colloquial phrase. It is not used by Cicero (unless perditum eamus be the proper reading in Ep. 14. 1. 5); often in Sall. 52. 12 ne illi sanguinem nostrum largiantur et, dum paucis sceleratis parcunt, bonos omnis perditum eant. J. 31. 27, 85. 42 nam ubi se flagitiis dedecoravere turpissumi viri, bonorum praemia ereptum eunt, J. 68. 1 cum maxuma cura ultum ire iniurias festinant. Perditum ire is not a mere periphrasis equivalent to perdere, but rather 'to go in for'.

5. namque] once or twice only before consonants in Cicero, S, puts it more often than not before consonants.

duobus senati decretis] abl. abs. with concessive sense, as 11. 4 bonis initiis.

inductus] with quisquam.

patefecerat—discesserat] i.e. dies statuta aderat, neque quisquam etc. Kvičala.

tanta vis morbi ac veluti tabes] ac veluti is Haupt's correction for atque uti. Some MSS omit the uti, but the writers, says Haupt, struck out what they did not see how to correct. Similar phrases often occur in S., cp. J. 32. 4 tanta vis avaritiae in animos eorum veluti tabes invaserat. H. 4. 26 qui quidem mos ut tabes in urbem coierit. Or. Phil. 9 neu patiamini licentiam scelerum quasi rabiem ad integros contactu procedere. C. 10. 5 ubi contagio quasi pestilentia invasit. Dietsch's erat quae uti tabes from Bursian (?), though ingenious, does not in the face of the above passages seem very probable. Nipperdey thought the following passages sufficient to defend the MS reading. Tac. H. 1. 46 nam gregarius miles ut tributum annuum pendebat. id. 2. 94 liberti principum conferre pro numero mancipiorum ut tributum iussi. Cic. de inv. 2. 3. 8 ex his duabus diversis sicuti familiis. Caes. B. G. 6. 26. 2 ab eius summo sicut palmae ramique late diffunduntur.

Ch. 37, 1. aliena mens] The medical metaphor introduced by morbi and tabes is still maintained in aliena: cp. Livy's alienata mens for 'insanity'.

qui conscii coniurationis fuerant] 'who had become members of the conspiracy', or 'had been' before the exposure in the senate.

2. id adeo] καὶ τοῦτό γε: repeated in § 11. J. 110. 4, 111. 1 faciundum aliquid, quod illorum magis quam sua retulisse videretur: id adeo in promptu esse, quoniam copiam Iugurthae haberet.

3. egestas facile habetur sine damno] to explain sine cura: 'since beggary is a position which it is not difficult to keep up'.

4. sed urbana plebes ea vero praeceps erat] for ea vero see note on 12. 5. Sallust uses both plebs and plebes. Plebs, however, occurs only thrice, and the form plebei occurs only in the Histories; so that plebes should be regarded perhaps as belonging to the third declension.

5. item alii qui] supply aetatem agebant from praestabant, or even praestabant itself. But most editors wisely strike qui out. The alii patrimoniis amissis is put instead of qui...amiserant for variety.

sicut in sentinam] 'the drains'. Cicero is fond of the metaphorical use of the word, cp. in Cat. 1. 5. 12 exhaurietur ex urbe magna et perniciosa sentina rei publicae. Ad Att. 1. 19. 4 etc.

6. ex gregariis militibus alios senatores videbant] S. is probably right about the gregarii milites (Willems, Le Sénat 1. 407). He is supported by Dion. Hal. 5. 77 βουλήν τε γὰρ ἐκ τῶν ἐπιτυχόντων ἀνθρώπων συνέστησε. According to other authorities, however, Sulla recruited the senate only from the equites. Liv. Ep. 89 (Sulla) senatum ex equestri ordine supplevit, Appian B. C. 1. 100 ἐκ τῶν ἀρίστων ἱππέων.

multi—sibi quisque, si in armis foret, ex victoria talia sperabat] When quisque is put in apposition to a plural subject, as here, it does not as a rule influence the number of the verb. See C. 38. 3. The present exception is due to the long interval which separates multi from the verb. There are also two exceptions in fragments quoted by Grammarians from the Histories, but probably the quotations are not correct, e.g. H. 3. 72 ut sustinere corpora plerique nequeuntes arma sua quisque instans incumberet (should be stantes incumberent).

[There is a curious instance of the use of quisque in J. 18. 3 exercitus eius compositus ex variis gentibus amisso duce ac passim multis sibi quisque imperium petentibus brevi dilabitur where quisque cannot be referred to the subject of the sentence. But Madvig thinks that at least quisque must be taken to = quibusque, if quibusque should not be rather read.]

Why should this class be a factor of the urbana plebs in particular? It is explained why the other two classes §§ 5 and 7 are to be so considered, but why should the class which expected to make its fortune out of a revolution after Sulla's pattern be confined to Rome? Nipperdey proposed accordingly to put § 7 before § 6, supposing that praeterea—alebat had been originally left out by mistake, then added in the margin, and so in after copies inserted in the wrong place. The reference of maxuma spe to victoria talia sperabat would he thought be thus rendered clearer. The alteration would be an improvement, but it is a mistake to look for much orderly arrangement in S., and certainly the urbana plebs, who saw the senators assembling and had the splendours of town-life before their eyes, would be under an especial temptation to indulge in hopes of like good fortune.

7. privatis atque publicis largitionibus] privatis, those of candidates for office: publicis, from the aediles.

8. quo minus mirandum] i.e. et eo quod omnes malum publicum alebat minus mirandum est quam si eos malum publicum non aluisset. Gründel.

rei publicae iuxta ac sibi consuluisse] iuxta 'as little as'. Cp. 2. 8 eorum ego vitam mortemque iuxta aestumo.

9. quorum victoria Sullae parentes proscripti, bona erepta, ius libertatis inminutum erat] By the lex Cornelia L. Sullae de proscriptione 673 (81), Vell. 2. 28 adiectum etiam, ut bona proscriptorum venirent, exclusique paternis opibus liberi etiam petendorum honorum iure prohiberentur, simulque, quod indignissimum est, senatorum filii et onera ordinis sustinerent et iura perderent. Cicero in his consulship prevented a bill to enable the children of the proscribed to hold offices passing. It passed finally 705 (49).

11. multos post annos] 11 years. See next note.

Ch. 38, 1. Cn. Pompeio et M. Crasso consulibus tribunicia potestas restituta est] 684 (70). Liv. Ep. 89 Sulla (673—81) tribunorum plebis potestatem minuit et omne ius legum ferendarum ademit. (1. Any one who had been tribune was declared incapable of holding other offices. 2. The tribunes were not allowed to propose any legislative measures to the tribes, nor—3. To hold public meetings at all.) Vell. 2. 30 Pompeius tribuniciam potestatem restituit, cuius Sulla imaginem sine re reliquerat.

adulescentes] for there was no legituma aetas for the tribuneship, though it was usually filled after the quaestorship, for which the age was 31: summam potestatem is the tribuneship.

fieri] hist. inf.

3. post illa tempora] i.e. when the period of renewed tribunicial activity began, cp. post dominationem in 5. 6. Dietsch thinks the reference of illa too vague for the perspicuous Sallust, and reads ex conj. post Sullae tempora—in 28. 4 P has exulanas, p exillanis, for ex Sullanis.

honestis nominibus] H. 1. 10 pauci potentes, quorum in gratiam plerique concesserant, sub honesto patrum aut plebei nomine dominationes adfectabant. Sall. clearly had before him Thuc. 3. 82 οἱ γὰρ ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι προστάντες μετ' ὀνόματος ἑκάτεροι εὐπρεποῦς, πλήθους τε ἰσονομίας πολιτικῆς καὶ ἀριστοκρατίας σώφρονος προτιμήσει, τὰ μὲν κοινὰ λόγῳ θεραπεύοντες ἆθλα ἐποιοῦντο, παντὶ δὲ τρόπῳ ἀγωνιζόμενοι ἀλλήλων περιγίγνεσθαι ἐτόλμησάν τε τὰ δεινότατα, ἐπεξῆσάν τε τὰς τιμωρίας ἔτι μείζους κ.τ.λ.

4. neque illis modestia neque modus contentionis erat] cp. 11. 4 neque modum neque modestiam victores habere. The illis refers to both parties. It is not necessary to strike it out with Kortte; nor to read, as Eussner proposes, neque illis modestia neque modus his contentionis erat, which would make S. draw a curious distinction between the want of moderation of character in the oligarchy, and of moderation in acts in the popular party.

Ch. 39, 1. As Mommsen says, Sallust is clear that the Gabinian and Manilian laws dealt the democracy a deadly blow. He identifies Pompeius with the aristocratic party throughout, cp. 19. 2, 30. 4.

2. innoxii] is here passive in meaning, = inviolate. (It is used in another sense 40. 6.) Other adjectives so used are ignarus J. 18. 6 mare magnum et ignara lingua commercio prohibebant, J. 52. 4 regio hostibus ignara: incertus J. 49. 5 inter virgulta equi Numidaeque conseederant neque plane occultati humilitate arborum et tamen incerti quidnam esset. ('They were difficult to distinguish as to what they were.') Cp. too J. 10. 1 neque ea res falsum me habuit—where falsus means 'deceived'. J. 17. 6 salubri corpore (salubris generally means 'health-giving').

ceterosque iudicils terrere, quo plebem in magistratu placidius tractarent] The sense seems to be: The oligarchs (ipsi) resorted to legal prosecutions, to deter the other officials (the tribunes principally) from stirring up the people against them. The passage however is a difficult one, and such an explanation is not free from objection. That the tribunate should be called a magistratus is no difficulty, cp. J. 37. 1 tribuni plebis ...continuare magistratum nitebantur; but there would be a contradiction, though only a verbal one, as it has just been said that the oligarchs had a monopoly of the magistracies. It certainly looks too as if ipsi and ceteros were meant as a division of the oligarchs (Fabri quotes 20. 7, but not very aptly, to show that ceteri need not be so taken). More serious too and suspicious is the que which many editors, who otherwise retain the MS reading, strike out; it is very out of place (cp. 51. 30 iuxta bonos et malos lubidinose interficere, ceteros metu terrere), and its presence in the best MSS gives colour to the alteration of Ritschl. He adopted Kritz' qui for quo, but altered the order—ceteros, qui plebem in magistratu placidius tractarent, iudiciis terrere. The reading of our MSS may have arisen from the words plebem—tractarent being accidentally omitted, then added in the margin and afterwards copied into the wrong place, qui being altered to que and quo inserted to make sense. The meaning will then be:—The extreme oligarchs frightened their milder colleagues, who (or—because they) did not treat the people with sufficient harshness, with legal prosecutions. I should not however be disposed to abandon the MS reading, as interpreted above, for this alteration. Would Sallust, with his affection for the indicative, have used the subjunctive? (C. 52. 8 fecissem is the only at all parallel instance as far as I know.) The meaning given to p. tractare is not probable, cp. J. 41. 2 nam ante Carthaginem deletam populus et senatus Romanus placide modesteque inter se rem publicam tractabant (they managed to share the government and yet to keep the peace), Tac. A. 3. 12 simulque illud reputate, turbide et seditiose tractaverit exercitus Piso. The first interpretation seems to me more suitable to the context and to Sallust's treatment of the subject elsewhere than the other. He takes no account of the moderate politicians, and with Thucydides before him (3. 82. 8 ff, here ἡ μετὰ ψήφου ἀδίκου καταγνώσεως: other echoes will be found in J. 41. 42 and elsewhere), represents the history of Rome as in the main a see-saw of a few unscrupulous men divided into two bitterly hostile camps, who use party catchwords merely to mask their selfish aims. See J. 31. 13 pars eorum occidisse tribunos plebis alii quaestiones iniustas plerique caedem in vos fecisse pro munimento habent, 41. 5 omnia in duas partis abstracta sunt. See too note on eorum below.

3. dubiis rebus] abl. abs.

novandi] absolutely in this sense is rare: cp. Tac. A. 4. 18 neque mansurum Tiberio imperium, si eis quoque legionibus cupido novandi fuisset.

eorum] is understood by some editors to refer to plebem § 2, or even to plebis § 1. But it surely refers to ceteros, who cannot therefore be the moderate oligarchs. (Ritschl did not account for eorum.)

4. superior aut aequa manu] 'aut' deminutivum: cp. J. 56. 5 cuncti aut magna pars.—Tac. A. 1. 63 manibus aequis abscessum.

illis qui victoriam adepti forent] If Catiline's forces had not collapsed but had held their own against the then government, the victors in the civil war which would have followed (whether Catiline or the aristocrats) would not have been able, exhausted by the bloody conflict, to have maintained themselves in power—that appears to be the meaning; but if illis is to be referred to Catiline's party only, as Dietsch maintains, then must we not with him alter qui to si? Jacobs however endeavours to get this sense out of the words as they stand 'Not even to them even if they', which seems very forced.

qui plus posset] "ὁ μεῖζον δυνάμενος, a veiled allusion to Pompeius." Schmalz.

5. fuere tamen] It would be better to begin the new paragraph here. S. now leaves his reflection and returns to the interrupted narration 36. 3. Others explain the tamen 'in spite of the poor chances of ultimate success, Catiline found many followers'.

fuere...complures, qui...profecti sunt] The indicative is used when a subject is expressed, cp. 52. 21 alia fuere quae illos magnos fecere.

Fulvius senatoris filius, quem...parens necari iussit] Val. Max. 5. 8. 5 nec minus animose A. Fulvius, vir senatorii ordinis iuuentem in aciem filium retraxit. Namque iuuenem...supplicio mortis affecit, praefatus non se Catilinae eum aduersus patriam, sed patriae aduersus Catilinam genuisse. Dio 36. 37 Αὖλον δὲ Φούλβιον, ἄνδρα βουλευτὴν, αὐτὸς ὁ πατὴρ ἀπέσφαξεν. The patria potestas gave the father the ius vitae necisque over the son. The lex Pompeia de parricidiis excluded from the number of persons who could be guilty of parricide (i.e. the murder of a blood relation) the father who killed the son. It was not till later times that this power was withdrawn. Hadrian condemned to deportation a father who killed his son. Constantine (A.D. 319) included killing by a father under the crime of parricide. So by the legislation of the later emperors severe punishment would only be inflicted on a son by a magistrate. Trajan compelled a father to emancipate a son whom he treated with inhumanity. The later emperors also took away the power a father had of choosing whether he should rear or expose a child, and of selling his children. As regards the rights of paterfamilias over the property of the son, see note on 39. (A similar act of severity is highly praised by Ampel.

in his list of Romani, qui in toga fuerunt illustres mentions Cornelius Cethegus, qui fratrem suum Cethegum, quod cum Catilina coniurasset, morte multandum censuit, on the 5th of Dec.)

6. isdem] cp. Cic. Or. 47. 157 (Ennius says) in templis isdem; at 'eisdem' erat verius, nec tamen probavit, ut opinius.

aut per se] Dietsch reads ipse for per se, but unnecessarily: cp. Cic. p. Arch. 10. 26 a Q. Metello Pio..., qui civitate multos donavit, neque per se neque per Lucullos impetravisset.

Ch. 40, 1. P. Umbreno cuidam] Cic. in Cat. 3. 6. 14 idem hoc decretum est...in Q. Annium Chilonem, qui una cum hoc Furio (50. 4) semper erat in hac Allobrogum sollicitatione versatus, in P. Umbrenum, libertinum hominem e. q. s.

obpressos—quod...esset] for the inconcinnity cp. 16. 4 eis amicis sociisque confisus C., simul quod aes alienum—ingens erat. J. 25. 5 ei, quod res in invidia erat, simul et ab Numidis obsecrati.

2. quod in Gallia negotiatus erat] Cic. p. Font. 5. 11 referta Gallia negotiatorum est, plena civium Romanorum: nemo Gallorum sine cive Romano quicquam negotii gerit; nummus in Gallia nullus sine civium Romanorum tabulis commovetur.

civitatium] Of the fem. nouns in -tas which are found occasionally with gen. plur. in -ium, civitas is the commonest, and especially in Livy.

notus erat atque eos noverat] J. 70. 1 suspectus regi et ipse eum suspiciens.

quem exitum tantis malis sperarent] Some editors take tantis malis to be abl. abs.: cp. 11. 4 bonis initiis malos eventus habuit. It is more probably the dat., cp. J. 14. 24 utinam emori fortunis meis honestus exitus esset. So in § 3 below miseriis suis is dat. after remedium expectare. Liv. 3. 3. 5 id remedium timori fuit. See 32. 1 insidiae consuli procedebant.

5. aliena consili] alienus is generally used absolutely in S. It is used once with a, 51. 17 (sententia) aliena a re publica: once with simple abl., 56. 5 alienum suis rationibus: with the gen. here only, as once or twice in Cicero (Fin. 1. 4. 11 quis alienum putet eius esse dignitatis).

ab Roma aberat] S. never puts the simple ablative with absum, but always ab. Otherwise it is not Sallust's practice to put the preposition with the ablative of a name of a town. He does so only four times: J. 91. 3 pervenit in locum tumulosum ab Capsa non amplius duum milium intervallo. J. 104. 1 (legatos) et Sullam ab Utica venire iubet. J. 61. 1 Metellus... ab Zama discedit. The classical usage (Cicero's and on the whole Caesar's) is to put the preposition only when the town is used for the surrounding district, or when a general is spoken of as withdrawing from a town with his troops (J. 61. 1). In older Latin the preposition is more often used than not, and it is Livy's general practice. (Suetonius says of Augustus, c. 86, neque praepositiones urbibus addere neque coniunctiones saepius iterare dubitavit, because he was anxious, sensum animi quam apertissime exprimere.) Neither Livy nor Augustus however were generally followed.

6. Gabinium arcessit quo maior auctoritas sermoni inesset] Umbrenus was but a libertinus, while Gabinius (17. 4) was an eques and in the inner circle of the conspiracy.—The MS P gives the spelling arcesso always in the Catiline, but varies between that form and accerso in the Jugurtha.—With regard to the tense of inesset, when the dependent cause follows the principal clause with the verb in the historical present, in the Catiline its verb is generally present (36. 3 decernit ut habeant. 48. 5 postulant uti referatur. 50. 3 refert quid de eis fieri placeat, etc.). The only other instance of a past tense is C. 44. 3 Volturcium mittit ut confirmarent (cp. C. 32. 2). In the Jugurtha on the other hand past and present tenses are used about equally. It has been remarked that Caesar uses the present after historical presents of verbs imperandi adhortandi petendi monendi, while after other verbs he uses both present and past indifferently. Post-Augustan writers prefer the past sequence.

innoxios] in a different sense above 39. 2, cp. the use of requirere § 1 'to look up', § 2 'to ask'.

operam suam] Cic. in Cat. 3. 2. 4 itaque ut comperi, legatos Allobrogum belli Transalpini et tumultus Gallici excitandi causa a P. Lentulo esse sollicitatos, id. § 9 ita...esse praescriptum, ut equitatum in Italiam quam primum mitterent.

Ch. 41, 2. maiores opes] in contrast to the aes alienum. The senate had more ability to relieve them of their burden of debt.

4. Q. Fabio Sangae, cuius patrocinio] Cic. de off. 1. 11, 35 tantopere apud nostros iustitia culta est ut ei qui civitates aut nationes devictas bello in fidem recepissent earum patroni essent more maiorum. And the patronate might pass on from father to son, as with the Marcelli in Sicily. Q. Fabius Maximus was the conqueror of the Allobroges. Pseudo-Cic. c-

52. 134 talks of Murena—Viderat ille Murenam...consulem designatum, ad me consulem cum Allobrogibus communis exitii iudicia adferre.

5. praecepit ut—simulent] Cp. 34. 1 ad haec Q. Marcius respondit, si quid ab senatu petere vellent, ab armis discedant. Schmalz supposes that Sall. resuscitates the old form of the present praecĕpio, praecĕpit. So Linker, followed by Dietsch and others. Cp. J. 13. 6 Romam legatos mittit quis praecepit (so P, but Jordan praecipit) primum ut veteres amicos muneribus expleant, but J. 28. 1 praecipit omnis mortalis pecunia aggrediantur (only C have praecepit).

bene polliceantur] polliceri and promittere are often so constructed: i.e. absolutely with an adverb where one would expect rather an object, 'to make splendid promises'. In other writers (besides bene) large liberaliter polliceri (promittere) are found, and such parallel phrases as largiter posse (Caes.) Latine docere (discere, even oblivisci in Cic.). For further instances of adverbs used predicatively in S., cp. J. 11. 1 tametsi ipse longe aliter (alia) animo agitabat, J. 24. 5 nisi tamen intellego illum supra quam ego sum petere; and note on 26. 5 (Nägelsbach, pp. 376, 488).

Ch. 42, 2. portationibus] occurs besides in only one writer—Vitruvius; a common and not a literary word.

festinando] Cato (apud Gell. 16. 14) qui unum quid mature transigit, is properat, qui multa simul incipit neque perficit, is festinat.

3. in citeriore Gallia C. Murena] S. is wrong here. C. Murena was in Gallia transalpina, where he had been left in command by his brother Lucius, when he went to Rome to canvass for the consulship: cp. Cic. Mur. 41. 89. It was Metellus Celer who was in command in nearer Gaul. He had been first sent in agrum Picenum (C. 30. 5) or more exactly in agrum Gallicum Picenumque (Cic. in Cat. 2. 12. 26), and his command was extended or transferred to Gallia cisalpina, when Cicero handed over that province to him before the close of the year 63 B.C. Kortte altered citeriore to ulteriore, which Dietsch and others adopt, preferring to attribute the mistake to the MSS rather than to S.

Ch. 43, 1. Lentulus cum ceteris—constituerant] J. 38. 6 cohors una Ligurum cum duabus turmis Thracum—transiere J. 101. 5 Bocchus cum peditibus—invadunt. Caesar and Tacitus give no examples of the construction. Cicero has the construction only once or perhaps twice. Phil. 12. 11. Pompeius cum Scipione—leges inter se et condiciones contulerunt. [illegible]. 7. 2 me aliquando cum similibus nostri rem suos (? defensurum).

paratis ut videbantur magnis copiis] videbantur instead of videbatur of the best MSS. Perhaps, as Fabri says, videor is always used personally in such a parenthesis, but at any rate the plural seems necessary here to show that the meaning is not 'when they had got ready forces which seemed to them great', but 'when their forces were as it seemed to them ready'.

Faesulanum] is certainly surprising. For one gathers from S. himself, 32. 2, 43. 2, 44. 6, that the plan was that the conspirators should not carry the incendiarism and massacre into execution till Catiline, coming from Faesulae, had got close to Rome; and that for the reason that Cic. in Cat. 3. 4. 8 gives (ut) praesto esset ille, qui et fugientes exciperet et se cum his urbanis ducibus coniungeret. And not only that, but Bestia would not be tribune till 10 Dec., while we are led to suppose in 36. 1—3 that Catiline had already reached Faesulae long before that date. There is therefore a general agreement among the commentators that S. did not write Faesulanum. Dietsch has suggested Carsulanum (Carsulae near Narnia in Umbria) and Trossulanum (Trossulum near Volsinii in Etruria). Aesulanum (Aesulae near Tibur) has also been proposed, and Wirz suggests more cautiously suburbanum. It may however be questioned whether the slip or mistake is not Sallust's own; and not a scribe's. Appian, who undoubtedly took his account of the conspiracy from S., has the same mistake. B. C. 2. 3. Λέντλῳ δὲ καὶ τοῖς συνωμόταις ἔδοξεν ὅτε Κατιλίναν ἐν Φαισούλαις πυνθάνοιντο γεγενῆσθαι...Λεύκιον δὲ Βηστίαν τὸν δήμαρχον ἐκκλησίαν εὐθὺς ὑπὸ κήρυξι συνάγειν καὶ κατηγορεῖν τοῦ Κικέρωνος. And see note on 56. 4, p. 160.

L. Bestia—contione habita—proxuma nocte] Cic. in Cat. 3. 4. 10 hanc autem Cethego cum ceteris controversiam fuisse dixerunt, quod Lentulo et aliis Saturnalibus caedem fieri atque urbem incendi placeret, Cethego nimium id longum videretur. The Saturnalia were on 19 Dec. Sallust gives no date, but a contio could not be held on the day of the Saturnalia. Perhaps the plan was originally fixed for 10 Dec.—the day of Bestia's entry upon his office, but when no tidings came of Catiline's approach, the execution was postponed to 19 Dec., in spite of the protests of Cethegus.

optumo consuli] Cic. ad Att. 12. 21. 1 (Brutus) se etiam tribuere multum mihi putat, quod scripserit 'optimum consulem'; quis enim iciunius dixit inimicus?

2. ea] sc. negotia.

Statilius et Gabinius] [illegible] 14. 7. Cassium qui sibi procurationem incendi [illegible] 19.

53 cum Catilina egrederetur ad exercitum, Lentulus in urbe relinqueretur, Cassius incendiis, Cethegus caedi praeponeretur, e. q. s.

duodecim—loca] Plut. Cic. 18 improves upon this ἄνδρας δὲ τάξαντες ἑκατὸν καὶ μέρη τοσαῦτα τῆς Ῥώμης ἕκαστον ἐφ' ἑκάστῳ διεκλήρωσεν κτλ.

filii familiarum] So in the only other place where the expression is used 51. 9 matres familiarum. Varro says si analogias sequi vellent, plures patres familias dicere non debuerunt, sed ut Sisenna scribit, patres familiarum. Sallust imitated Sisenna, Tacitus Sallust (A. 1. 26, 3, 8 Tiberius... iuvenem sueta erga filios familiarum nobiles liberalitate auget, 11. 13 lege lata saevitiam creditorum coercuit, ne in mortem parentum pecunias filiis familiarum foenori darent). All other writers from Terence to Quintilian prefer the other form: patres (etc.) familias.—As regards the rights of the father over the son's property—rights which were always exercised without scruple to the full extent to which they were sanctioned by law, see Maine, Anc. Law p. 141 ff. Poste's Gaius p. 64. The proprietary privileges of the parent were not curtailed in any way till the time of Augustus. The oppressive action of the patria potestas in depriving the sons of all power of holding property except at the will of their fathers would explain the eagerness of some of the filii familiarum to kill their fathers.

3. dies prolatando] prolatare is rather a favourite word of Sallust's, but he never uses it except here with an object expressing time. Eussner therefore proposes to read in dies prolatando cp. Ep. Mithr. 12 pretio in dies bellum prolatans. But dies means 'arrangements', 'fixtures', and cp. Tac. A. 6. 42 diem ex die prolatabant.

languentibus aliis] alii for reliqui or ceteri; J. 58. 3 locum cepere paulo quam alii editiorem.

Ch. 44, 1. aliter]=alioquin as in 29. 3.

2. eo] to Gaul.

5. quis sim] Cic. in Cat. 3. 5. 12 gives the letter to the same effect, but in different words. Erant autem sine nomine, sed ita: Quis sim, scies ex hoc quem ad te misi. Cura ut vir sis et cogita quem in locum sis progressus: vide, quid iam tibi sit necesse, et cura ut omnium tibi auxilia adiungas, etiam infimorum. Which, if either, is the exact version? Dietsch truly remarks that Cicero does not pretend to be reading from a copy, but quoting apparently from memory (erant), while Sallust's words imply that he is giving us the original. On the other hand Halm no less truly says that Sall.

gives it in a more courteous form, while in Cic. it bears in its careless composition which betrays great haste quite the stamp of being in its original shape.—Should one not with Schmalz and Meusel accept the reading of P and V and the mass of MSS qui (perhaps also in Cicero)? The distinction that quis asks after the name, qui after the character was not observed in the speech of the people, perhaps not in that of a Lentulus in a great hurry. Dictys Cret. (Septimius), a constant imitator of Sallust, has: Acasto obviam venit, eique quinam esset indicat.

Ch. 45, 1. L. Valerio Flacco] whom Cic. defended de repetundis in 695 (59) successfully.

C. Pomptino] was afterwards with Cicero in Cilicia.

ponte Mulvio] the northernmost bridge over the Tiber, over which the 'via Flaminia' went: now Ponte Molle.

Allobrogum comitatus] plural: cp. magno comitatu Cic. in Cat. 3. 2. 6.

cetera, uti facto opus sit, ita agant permittit] When the dependent clause precedes the historic present on which it depends, it is rare for the dependent verb to be in the present, unless (as is here the case) other historic presents precede. In the only other instance where a present is used other historic presents do not however prepare the way—J. 103. 3 eos ad Marium, ac deinde, si placeat, Romam legatos ire iubet. In two other passages a past tense is used—J. 98. 3 uti suis receptui locus esset, collis duos propinquos inter se occupat; J. 106. 2 uti noctu clam secum profugeret rogat atque hortatur. —S. seems to be the first writer to omit ut after permittere. The omission is common afterwards in Livy. S. also omits ut after decernere C. 29. 2 and persuadere J. 35. 2—in which he stands alone, and also after cavere hortari petere praecipere (J. 28. 1) litteras mittere.

2. homines militares] cp. 59. 6.

3. ad id loci] The phrases ad id locorum J. 63. 6 and post ea loci J. 102. 1 are used by S. of time.

cito cognito consilio] S. does not mean to imply at the beginning of the chapter per legatos cuncta edoctus that the ambassadors were in the secret of the intended arrest at the bridge. Cicero (in Cat. 3. 2. 6) expressly states that they were not—res praetoribus erat nota solis, ignorabatur a ceteris. There is no reason, then, to suspect cito with Long and others.

4. dedit] from dedo.

Ch. 46, 1. propere] Cic. in Cat. 3. 3. 6 ipsi comprehensi ad me, cum iam dilucesceret, deducuntur.

2. porro] 'on the other hand'. J. 25. 7 timebat iram senatus, ni paruisset legatis: porro animus cupidine caecus ad inceptum scelus rapiebatur. Cicero does not represent himself as at all undecided in the matter.

tantis civibus deprehensis quid facto opus esset] c. deprehensis is surely abl. abs. Schmalz however prefers to make it dat. after facto, as in the phrase quid huic homini faciam? Cp. 52. 25 dubitatis, quid intra moenia deprensis hostibus faciatis?

perdundae rei publicae] gen. of quality, cp. 6. 7 note. Observe the variety of construction.

3. Caeparium Terracinensem] Other, if not all, editors write Tarracinensem, which is Cic.'s spelling. Terracina is the modern name.

4. ceteri sine mora veniunt] Cic. in Cat. 3. 3. 6 tardissime autem Lentulus venit, credo quod in litteris dandis praeter consuetudinem proxima nocte vigilarat.

cognito indicio] learning, that is, that information had been given, not what it was.

5. [in senatum] perducit] The bracketed words were probably added by some one who did not observe that in aedem Concordiae followed perducit, no less than they follow venire: cp. 35. 6 nunc Orestillam commendo tuaeque fidei trado. 36. 5 quisquam. Kvičala attempts but not quite successfully to defend the words. Senatum he says does not mean 'the assembled senators' but 'a sitting of the senate', and the following eo senatum advocat mean 'for it was there that he called the senate together'.

6. Volturcium cum legatis introducit] But says Cicero (in Cat. 3. 4. 8) introduxi Volturcium sine legatis.

Ch. 47, 1. dissimulare de coniuratione] instead of the more usual accusative.

omnia uti gesta erant aperit] see 48. 4.

docetque se...nihil amplius scire quam legatos] 'and (with regard to the members of the conspiracy) he informs the senate that he knew no more than the ambassadors did'. To this the natural way of taking these words it is objected that Volturcius could not know how much or how little the ambassadors knew, that in point of fact the ambassadors knew more than he did, that it is absurd that when V. is questioned about himself he should answer for the Allobroges, and finally that any such shuffling excuse is out of place when V. is making a clean breast of it. I do not think there is much in these objections but Herzog's and Kritz's alternative interpretation will not do—to make legatos the object of scire, 'that he knew nothing but about the ambassadors' (i.e. that they had a hand in the conspiracy), for there is no parallel for nihil used of persons. The interpretation of Jacobs will however give the same sense. He makes legatos subject to in ea coniuratione esse—'that he knew nothing but that the ambassadors were in the conspiracy, though he had heard from Gabinius more than once that this and that person were concerned in it'.

2. ex libris Sibyllinis] see Cic. in Cat. 3. 4. 9. S. discriminates more accurately between the evidence and Lentulus' interpretation of it, but omits that the year was more fatal by its being the tenth post virginum absolutionem.

Cinnam atque Sullam antea] sc. fuisse from esse. Tac. G. 2 quoniam qui nunc Tungri, tunc Germani vocati sint.

urbis potiri] potior is more often constructed with the abl. than the gen. in good writers. Sallust on the other hand uses these two cases indifferently, and once combines them J. 74. 3 armorum aliquanto numero, hostium paucorum potiti. Arusian attributes to him the acc. also cuncta potiundi, but that is doubtful.

ab incenso Capitolio] 671 (83): Appian B. C. 1. 83, Tac. Hist. 3. 72 arserat et ante Capitolium civili bello, sed fraude privata.

illum] in or. obl. for hunc.

3. abdicato magistratu] Cicero constructs abdicare se magistratu: in Cat. 3. 6. 14 atque ita censuerunt, ut P. Lentulus, cum se praetura abdicasset, in custodiam traderetur. Livy uses Sallust's construction often.

in liberis custodiis] Dio 58. 3 ἄδεσμον φυλακήν.

4. P. Lentulo Spintheri] and Q. Cornificio, both energetic members of the aristocratic party. The former was active as consul 697 (57) in agitating for Cicero's recall, the latter was candidate for the consulship with Cicero. Nothing is known of Cn. Terentius.

C. Caesari—M. Crasso] as a guarantee, or to exculpate them?

ante] not by the time of the meeting, but in time to be put in libera custodia.—S. omits the votes of thanks to Cicero, Flaccus, and Pomptinus (in Cat. 3. 6. 14).

Ch. 48, 1. plebs coniuratione patefacta, quae] The quae of course refers to plebs not to the nearer coniuratione. Cp. below § 4 se missum a M. Crasso, qui Catilinae nuntiaret. J. 6. 3 opportunitas suae liberorumque aetatis, quae etiam mediocris viros spe praedae transvorsos agit.—The third speech against Catiline was delivered after the sitting of the senate.

2. usu cotidiano et cultu corporis] concrete. Tac. Ann. 4. 30 dandosque vitae usus cui vita concederetur. Cultu, clothes, etc. J. 75. 1 ubi plerique thesauri filiorumque eius multus pueritiae cultus erat. Cp. Cic. in Cat. 4. 8. 17.

quippe cui...erant] quippe qui occurs about a dozen times in S., though only this once in the Catiline, and always with the indicative. This is not a little remarkable, as even the Comic poets, though they generally put the indicative, use the subjunctive as well. In Cicero it is followed, without exception perhaps, by the subj. Many writers (e. g. Caesar and Curtius) do not use it at all, and others very rarely: it occurs only once in Nepos and in Tacitus. (Utpote qui, however, in the one place in which it is used—C. 57. 4—is followed by the subj.)

3. post eum diem]=postridie, which S. does not use.

4. ne eum L. et C. aliique—deprehensi terrerent] 'the arrest of'. For other instances of a participle used attributively with a subst. where we should use a verbal noun, cp. C. 31. 7 perdita re publica opus esse. C. 43. 3 inter haec parata atque decreta: and in the J. 21. 3 ante praelium factum. 55. 2 ob ea feliciter acta. 77. 1 pariter cum capta Thala.

e periculo] e for ex is rare in S. C. 61. 8 e castris, and in the Histories e contempto—e locis—e muris.

5. hominem nobilem] "S. uses vir in apposition only when he means to praise, and not when (as here) he is mentioning external advantages which do not determine a man's worth" Fabri. Cp. J. 70. 2 Nabdalsam hominem nobilem, magnis opibus, 77. 1, with C. 51. 16, 53. 6, J. 22. 2 P. Scipioni summo viro, 27. 2 C. Memmius...vir acer, 43. 1 Metello...acri viro. The curious expression turpissumi viri in J. 85. 42 perhaps means 'disgraces to the male sex'. Fabri compares Liv. 33. 28. The explanation of Schmalz, that the Optimates in spite of their effeminacy wish to pass off as men when it comes to pocketing rewards, seems rather far-fetched.

tanta vis hominis] C. 8. 3 scriptorum magna ingenia.

6. falsum videri] videri does not denote any uncertainty. Cic. Acad. 2. 47. 146 (maiores voluerunt) qui testimonium diceret, ut arbitrari se diceret etiam quod ipse vidisset; quaeque iurati iudices cognovissent, ea non ut esse facta, sed ut videri pronuntiarentur.

potestatem] sc. iudicandi.

tantam rem esset mentitus] mentior with acc. is a poetical construction which Livy also employs, 10. 40. 4 auspicium mentiri ausus.

7. machinatum] There is probably no instance of the passive use of this participle before this. It occurs again in two fragments, but adjectivally used H. 2. 23. 3 cum machinato strepitu tonitruum. H. 3. 34 At Lucullum regis cura machinata fames brevi fatigabat.

appellato Crasso—illius potentia] J. 14. 11 Iugurtha... fratre meo atque eodem propinquo suo interfecto, primum regnum eius sceleris sui praedam fecit.

Ch. 49, 1. neque pretio neque gratia Ciceronem inpellere potuere] Priscian: queo, quivi vel quii. S. in C. sed neque pretio neque gratia inpelli quivit. Septimius (an imitator of Sallust) writes inlici quivit (Cicero). Is this not sufficient evidence to establish quivere against the MSS? But if Priscian (with Sept.) is not sufficient authority for quivere when he quotes especially for that word, not much weight is to be attached to his contradicting the MS reading neque precibus neque gratia neque pretio in a part of his quotation which is immaterial to his purpose. The fact that the two words pretium and gratia are often coupled, not only in other authors, but in S. himself (he writes, pretium aut gratiam: pretio aut gratia: pecuniae aut gratiae), is no great objection to his strengthening the phrase in one instance, but does explain very well why Priscian (quoting from memory) should give the words as he does. Dietsch adds that precibus is contained in gratia. They are not synonyms, however, and the meaning may well be 'neither by entreaties, nor by offer of services, nor by money down'—a climax. That Sallust should speak with some emphasis here in clearing Caesar—the one aim of his book according to Mommsen—is not unnatural. (Of late authorities, however, Kvičala alone as far as I know defends the MS reading. Kortte and Kritz, however, found no difficulty in it.)

2. uterque—exercebant] uterque here only in S. with plural (30. 4 ei utrique ad urbem imperatores erant). The construction however is not rare in Livy. Caesar has B. C. 3. 30 uterque eorum ex castris exercitum educunt (and elsewhere?).

Catulus] When the office of pontifex maximus fell vacant owing to the death of Q. Metellus Pius at the end of 690 (64) or beginning of the next year, Labienus (trib. 691) got the Lex Domitia of 650 (104) which Sulla had repealed, restored. It gave the election to the tribes. The election took place on 6 Mar. 691 (63). Ov. Fast. 3. 415. Suet. Jul. 13 pontificatum maximum petit, non sine profusissima largitione; in qua reputans magnitudinem aeris alieni, cum mane ad comitia descenderet, praedixisse matri osculanti fertur, domum se nisi pontificem non reversurum. Atque ita potentissimos duos competitores multumque et aetate et dignitate antecedentes superavit, ut plura ipse in eorum tribubus suffragia quam uterque in omnibus tulerit. Q. Lutatius Catulus was consul 676 (78), censor 689 (65), and (Vell. 2. 43) omnium confessione princeps senatus. Catulus probably was getting on for 60, Caesar was born in 654 (100) or more probably acc. to Mommsen in 652 (102), and was therefore 37 or 39. The expressions extrema aetate and adulescentulo are therefore much exaggerated —by the disappointed Catulus.

3. res autem opportuna videbatur] 'The state of Caesar's affair...to their project', or 'their project (of getting Caesar suspected) seemed favoured by circumstances'.

privatim—publice] go with e. liberalitate and m. muneribus respectively, and not with debebat. His debts amounted to 1300 talents before he filled any office. Plut. Caes. 5. His extravagant shows, as curule aedile, much increased them.

4. ementiundo] 'lying roundly'.

dicerent] i.e. quae, ut dicebant, audissent. Cic. Verr. 5. 7. 17 nominat iste servum quem magistrum pecoris esse diceret; eum dicit coniurasse. Cic. Phil. 2. 4. 7 at etiam litteras quas me sibi misisse diceret, recitavit (cp. 30. 1. Saenius—litteras recitavit, quas Faesulas adlatas sibi dicebat).

conflaverant] with reference to the following usque adeo e. q. s.

egredienti] from the sitting 5 Dec. It was in fact his speech on that occasion which excited the wrath of the equites. Ex senatu, this is the only place in which S. uses egredior with the prep. ex: elsewhere it takes the simple ablative.

Ch. 50, 1. dum haec in senatu aguntur] S. returns quite unconcernedly (and awkwardly, considering the preceding words egredienti ex senatu) to 48. 6.

praemia] Cic. in Cat. 4. 3. 5 says praemia amplissima. What the ambassadors got is not known. As to Volturcius see 30. 6. The Allobroges, at any rate, did not get their grievances redressed, and revolted next year.

liberti] not libertini because liberti Lentuli. In reference to his manumitter a freedman is called libertus not libertinus.

opifices atque servitia] See Cic. in Cat. 4. 8 (§ 17 auditum est, lenonem quendam Lentuli concursare circum tabernas e. q. s.) partim] when in a sentence that has two members the partim etc. is put only with the second member, the partim denotes the smaller number (Kritz). J. 31. 10 incedunt per ora vostra magnifici, sacerdotia et consulatus, pars triumphos suos ostentantes.

multitudinum] rare in plural, 'gangs'.

soliti erant] soliti is apparently an adj.

2. lectos et exercitatos orabat (in audaciam)] The participles are to be taken as adjectives. Kritz puts in audaciam after exercitatos with the later MSS, explaining 'trained to do deeds of daring'. But at least ad and not in should then be used. Kvíčala thinks in audaciam cannot be a gloss and must be explained in some way: he proposes to take it with grege facto, 'after forming a compact body to give each other courage'. Cp. Liv. 40. 15 ille ut me in securitatem suam occidas postulat—and for late position of ut Liv. 22. 9. 11 omnia ea ut mature fiant curare iubet, etc.

grege facto] Cp. the expression gregarius miles.

3. dispositis praesidiis] The meeting was held in the temple of Concord, on the clivus Capitolinus. Cic. ad Att. 2. 1. 7 equitatus ille, quem ego in clivo Capitolino te signifero ac principe collocaram. Dio 37. 35 τὸν μὲν δῆμον τοῖς στρατηγοῖς ὁρκῶσαι ἐς τὸν κατάλογον, εἰ δή τις χρεία στρατιωτῶν γένοιτο, ἐκέλευσεν. Cic. in Cat. 4. 7. 14 plenum est forum, plena templa circum forum, pleni omnes aditus huius loci ac templi (the doors of the curia were always left open that the public might follow the debates).

quid de eis fieri placeat, qui in custodiam traditi erant] If the question was so put, Silanus egreditur relationem in making any proposal about those not already arrested.

paulo ante] probably on the day before (4 Dec.)—the sitting in which rewards were assigned to the envoys Cic. in Cat. 4. 3. 5.

4. primus sententiam rogatus] Silanus was husband of Cato's stepsister Servilia, who was mother by a former marriage of M. Brutus the percussor Caesaris.—The custom of calling upon the consul-designate first seems to have been an old one (Cic. Phil. 5. 13. 35 sed qui ordo in sententiis rogandis servari solet, eundem tenebo in viris fortibus honorandis. a Bruto, igitur, consule designato, more maiorum capiamus exordium.) The reason is given by Appian B. C. 2. 5 ὧδε γὰρ Ῥωμαίοις ὁ μέλλων ὑπατεύσειν πρῶτος ἐσφέρει γνώμην, ὡς αὐτός, οἶμαι, πολλὰ τῶν κυρουμένων ἐργασόμενος, καὶ ἐκ τοῦδε εὐβουλότερόν τε καὶ εὐλαβέστερον ἐνθυμησόμενος περὶ ἑκάστου.—Silanus was followed by a number of consulars, all of whom spoke in favour of death. Their names are given in Cic. ad Att. 12. 21. 1, Phil. 2. 5. 12. Immediately after the consuls-designate would come Q. Lutatius Catulus the princeps senatus. Plutarch (Cic. 21, Caes. 8) must be wrong in putting Catulus' speech after that of Caesar and perhaps after Cato's, but it may be that the Catulus of whom he speaks is a son. [The custom of calling upon the consuls-designate first for their opinion would apply of course only to the latter half of the year. The old rule that at other times the princeps senatus should first be appealed to was at this time often departed from by a presiding consul who wished to do honour to any consular. Cicero (ad Att. 1. 13. 2) complains in Jan. 693 (61) that the consul preferred his brother the pacificatorem Allobrogum to him, but consoles himself by the reflection—ille secundus in dicendo locus habet auctoritatem paene principis et voluntatem non nimis devinctam beneficio consulis. It was usual however for the president to adhere to the order which he adopted on the 1st Jan. throughout the year.]

in custodiis] i.e. in libera custodia in different houses.

P. Furio] has not been mentioned by S. before: cp. Cic. in Cat. 3. 6. 14 P. Furium, qui est de eis colonis, quos Faesulas L. Sulla deduxit. He is perhaps then the Faesulanum quendam (59. 3) who commanded the left wing of Catiline's army at Pistoria.

supplicium sumundum] He afterwards explained his words away. Suetonius (Jul. 14) says that the effect of Caesar's speech was such, ut D. Silanum consulem designatum non piguerit sententiam suam, quia mutare turpe erat, interpretatione lenire, velut gravius atque ipse sensisset exceptam. Plut. Cic. 21 ὥστε καὶ τὸν Σιλανὸν αὖθις μεταβαλόμενον παραιτεῖσθαι καὶ λέγειν, ὡς οὐδ' αὐτὸς εἴποι θανατικὴν γνώμην, ἐσχάτην γὰρ ἀνδρὶ βουλευτῇ Ῥωμαίων εἶναι δίκην τὸ δεσμωτήριον.

decreverat] Sallust's favourite use of the pluperfect comes in very awkwardly here—not before the turn came to Caesar, but, as dixerat and censuerat below, before the division. These pluperfects led Appian to suppose that Nero spoke before Caesar, but that does not seem to have been the case, see below.

pedibus in sententiam Ti. Neronis iturum se dixerat] (It was allowable, then, for a previous speaker to rise again to give a short explanation.) Silanus said that he would vote for Nero's proposal, when the time came for a division. The presiding magistrate (one of the consuls, or, in their absence, the praetor urbanus) then gave out Qui hoc censetis, illuc transite; qui alia omnia, in hanc partem, and, after counting the numbers, Haec pars maior videtur, unless the senators were unanimous (sine ulla varietate). [It has been questioned whether, when there was a perrogatio, there was also a division.

For the pedibus ire is often merely descriptive of the custom, which must have given great animation to the debates, of clustering round a speaker with whose views you agreed. The senators, who were so low down on the list that they did not often get a chance of speaking, availed themselves of this method of influencing the debate; and even members who had already spoken, or others who chose to waive their right to speak, left their seats for the purpose. Was this running division the only division? The question is raised by Gellius (14. 7). He found Varro, in the Manual of Procedure which he drew up for Pompeius, laying it down senatus consultum fieri duobus modis; aut per discessionem, si consentiretur, aut, si res dubia esset, per singulorum sententias exquisitas; while two other learned and contemporary authorities maintained, nullum senatus consultum fieri posse non discessione facta, quia in omnibus senatus consultis, etiam in iis, quae per relationem fierent, discessio esset necessaria. Perhaps Varro did not mean that in the second case there was no division. But if Varro is rightly understood, these authorities cannot have been ignorant of what was actually done, the question in dispute must have been as to what methods were constitutional. The practice of different presidents may have varied; it may have depended on how far the rogatio was carried (for the presiding consul could stop where he liked), or on the course the debate took. That a speaker was not tied down to the opinion he might express in his speech is clear (cp. Cic. Phil. 11. 6. 15 dixit tamen, si quis eorum, qui post se rogati essent, graviorem sententiam dixisset, in eam se iturum); and, in a meeting where opinion fluctuated so much as in the present case, it must surely at least have been necessary to count up the adherents of the speakers who had brought forward definite proposals, as matters stood at the close of the debate. In this place does not Silanus anticipate a division? It would not have been necessary for him to say that he was going to stand by Nero, it would have been enough to go at once and join the group of Nero's supporters.]

quod] 'because he had'? surely qui is right.

praesidiis additis] Wirz states that P has abditis. Jordan perhaps did not note it, because mistakes between b and d are of frequent occurrence in the MS, e.g. J. 8. 2 adduxit for abduxit etc. At any rate, additis is nearer than abductis (which Wirz reads) to abditis; and is otherwise I think preferable. Appian of other authorities alone speaks of Nero's proposal, and he gives it rather differently, perhaps more correctly B. C. 2. 5 ὁ Νέρων ἐδικαίου φυλάττειν αὐτούς, μέχρι Κατιλίναν ἐξέλωσι καὶ τὰ ἀκριβέστατα μάθωσιν. It is clear at any rate that it was a proposal for adjournment; and is it not more probable that he should urge his amendment on the ground that sufficient measures had not yet been taken for the public safety, than on the ground that the senate was being overawed by Cicero's equites? If he took the former line he would be likely to meet with support (Cic. in Cat. 4. 7. 14 iaciuntur enim voces, quae perveniunt ad aures meas, eorum qui vereri videntur, ne non habeam satis praesidii ad ea quae vos statueritis hodierno die transigunda). But to have objected to Cicero's guards would have been to do what Caesar even ventured only to insinuate very delicately (51. 19 and 36), and would surely have left him no supporters—least of all Silanus. Nero seems to have spoken after Cicero and before Cato. Cicero says (in Cat. 4. 4. 7) video adhuc duas esse sententias, unam D. Silani ...alteram C. Caesaris. Cicero did little to shake the impression which Caesar had made, and the consul's friends were inclined so far, for Cicero's own sake, to vote against death. It is probable, then, that Nero made himself the mouthpiece of the murmurs which reached Cicero's ears. After Cato's speech, on the other hand, such a proposal would not have found a hearing; and if Nero (who was, by the way, grandfather of the emperor Tiberius) was, as Willems assumes, praetorius, he would of course have precedence of Cato, who was tribune designate.

5. Caesar, ubi ad eum ventum est] It has been said that the consul-designate was called upon before the consulares. It is probable that the same custom obtained with regard to the other ranks, that Caesar therefore who was now praetor designate was called upon before the praetorii (e.g. Nero), and that Cato who was tribune (pl.) designate had precedence of tribunicii.

Ch. 51, 1. omnis homines...qui] Notice the similarity of the beginning of Caesar's speech with that of the Catiline itself.

patres conscripti] S. makes Adherbal begin his speech to the senate thus (J. 14. 1) Patres conscripti, Micipsa pater meus e. q. s. In the wrong position he gives to P. c. he shows a foreigner's ignorance of Roman usage. [The title is generally understood as Livy explains it (2. 1. 11) patres et conscripti, the conscripti being plebeians. But it appears doubtful whether the title P. c. was not of earlier origin, and in use before the plebeian members were enrolled. Ihne explains it 'patricians enrolled on the senate list' (the album senatorium), in distinction to the whole body of patricians: and Willems, taking patres=senatores (see C. 6. 6), 'the enrolled fathers,' though there were no patres that were not conscripti.]

2. lubidini simul et usui paruit] Corn. Nep. Alcibiades 4 plusque irae suae quam communi utilitati paruisse. Usui his true interest. For the tense of paruit cp. 11. 3 concupivit.

4. qui reges—consuluerint] V has quae—consuluerunt. Either qui or quae will do well enough (for quae with consulo giving the result of the deliberation cp. 52. 35 neque parari neque consuli quicquam potest occulte). Many editors prefer quae, because, they say, the point is not who they were but what they did. But why should not Caesar, continuing from Omnis homines qui e. q. s. remark 'I could tell you of many a warning example of people who have not kept their minds free from passion'? It is a question rather of MS authority however, and V probably as usual puts quae—consuluerunt, to assimilate the earlier part of the sentence to quae—fecere at the close. But such variety as P gives is very characteristic of Sallust, and consuluerunt can hardly be right; the position of patres conscripti if nothing else shows that an indirect question is meant.

recte atque ordine] a phrase often heard in the senate. Liv. 28. 39 suos imperatores recte et ordine et ex voluntate senatus fecisse. For the hendiadys cp. J. 14. 25 per scelus et sanguinem, J. 40. 5 ex rumore et lubidine plebis, J. 66. 2 ludum et lasciviam, J. 73. 1 parat festinatque. For the coupling of adv. and subst. cp. J. 113. 1 dolo an vere, H. 1. 65 furtim ac celeritate.

5. The Rhodians were rewarded for the help they gave Rome in the war with Antiochus 565 (189) by the gift of the greater part of Caria and Lycia. Not long after—in the Third Macedonian War—a party at Rhodes proposed to take sides against Rome; but the Rhodians remained neutral notwithstanding, and endeavoured to bring about a peace between the combatants and sent ambassadors to Rome who ventured to talk about declaring war upon the party which refused to make peace. The Romans were indignant. There was a talk of making war upon them. The Rhodians did all they could to propitiate, executed some, and sent to the scaffold others of the Macedonian party and so forth. War was not declared against them, but Lycia and Caria were taken from them and their trade hopelessly crippled. A curious instance to be quoted by one who was mansuetudine et misericordia clarus factus (54. 2). Sallust probably introduces it because Cato the Censor defended the Rhodians, urging that it was unfair to punish for intentions which were never carried out (fragments of the speech are preserved in Gellius 6. (7.) 3). It would be well to remind the stern Cato of the generosity of his great-grandfather.

infida atque advorsa] not et, so that magna atque magnifica and infida atque advorsa should contrast—to think that Rhodes should have been tempted by the greatness and splendour which it owed to Rome to prove faithless and opposed to its benefactor!

6. et in pace et per indutias] for the change of preposition cp. 52. 15 in urbe et non per totam Italiam. J. 14. 13 in omnibus bellis...per otium.

per occasionem] they never used the chances they had = quamvis occasio non deesset.

7. providendum est...ne...valeat...neu...consulatis] We have here acc. to Jordan (K. Beiträge, p. 348) a suggestion of an old stereotyped parliamentary turn which appears more fully in three places in the orations of the Histories; Or. Mac. 13 quod ego vos moneo quaesoque ut animadvortatis neu... appelletis. Ep. Pomp. 8 quod ego vos moneo quaesoque ut animadvortatis neu cogatis. Or. Phil. 9 quod ego vos oro atque obsecro...ut animadvortatis neu patiamini. So too in C. 33. 5 obtestamur consulatis ... neve ... imponatis. Cp. a letter of Lepidus to the Senate (ap. Cic. Ep. 10. 35) in qua re ego vos, P. C. oro atque obsecro ut...rei publicae consulatis neve misericordiam nostram...sceleris loco ponatis. Observe also the zeugma; magis irae (obsequamini) quam famae consulatis. Cp. J. 46. 8 pacem (agens) an bellum gerens. J. 14. 4 (quibus) cogor prius oneri quam (possum) usui esse. J. 85. 47 meque vosque in omnibus rebus iuxta geram and in H. ut res magis quam verba gererentur.

8. digna poena pro factis eorum] J. 62. 8 ex mala conscientia digna timere. For dignus pro cp. Ter. Hecyr. 209 an quicquam pro istis factis dignum te dici potest? The construction seems to have been peculiar to the language of the people, says Schmalz.

9. composite atque magnifice] so Cato says (52. 13) bene et composite C. Caesar...disseruit, and Marius J. 85. 31 non sunt composita verba mea: parvi id facio...illis artificio opus est. Cornificius ad Her. 4. 12. 18 compositio est verborum constructio aequabiliter perpolita. Perhaps Sallust in what follows is thinking of Cic. in Cat. 4. 6. 11. Videor enim mihi videre hanc urbem...subito uno incendio concidentem; cerno animo sepulta in patria miseros atque insepultos acervos civium e. q. s.

matres familiarum] Cp. Cic. in C[illegible] nem matrum familias.

conlubuisset] The MS authority is strongly in favour of conlubuissent. Indeed the sing. seems to be only in one MS. Jordan produces Augustine, who quotes the passage, in favour of the singular (but the MSS vary even there), and the author of the Pseudo-Ciceronian invective against Sallust quae alteri facere collibuisset. But it must be noted that the writer of these invectives discriminated between the styles of Cicero and Sallust to some extent (for instance he is careful not to use cur which Sallust never uses in Sallust's invective, but uses it twice in Cicero's). And the facere alters the case: here it is impossible even to supply an infinitive to govern quae. The plural is also perhaps more according to rule. "Libere collibere licere," says Neue (Formenlehre, 2. 626), "cannot have a substantive for subject, but may have a neuter pronoun or adjective of quantity. If this subject is plural the verb is so also." Cp. Suet. Jul. 20 cetera item quae cuique libuissent dilargitus est, and cp. J. 49. 2 quae ab imperatore decuerint omnia suis provisa. S. uses conlubet for lubet here only. It is perhaps a conversational word. Horace for instance has Sat. 1. 3. 6 si collibuisset, but Od. 4. 3. 20 si libeat. Cicero uses conlibitum est (Ep. 15. 16. 2, N. D. 1. 38. 108).

caedem incendia fieri, postremo armis cadaveribus, cruore atque luctu] Wecklein would read ruinis for armis, so that, as cadaveribus refers to caedem, ruinis should answer to incendia. But surely armis is required to match cruore, as luctu matches cadaveribus.—cruore atque luctu, for the juxtaposition of concrete and abstract cp. 6. 3 civibus moribus agris. Tac. A. 1. 55 crimina et innoxios discerneret.

10. illa oratio] i.e. oratio illorum qui ante me sententias dixerunt.

11. non ita est] for the more usual non est ita. J. 85. 42 verum non ita est.

iniuriae suae] the possessive pronoun with iniuria is always objective in S. Cp. Or. Phil. 10 quae (arma) ille advorsum divina et humana omnia cepit, non pro sua aut quorum simulat iniuria sed legis ac libertatis subvortundae.

gravius...habuere] Plancus (Cic. Ep. 10. 17. 2) writes fratrem meum...graviter se habuisse antea tibi scripsi (to be poorly). But I do not think that graviter habere = aegre ferre ('to take a thing heavily'—as in older English) is elsewhere found, though aegre habere (Liv. 7. 5. 5) occurs. The verb habere is a favourite of Sallust's; cp. just below vitam habent for v. agere (cp. 4. 1) and J. 99. 1 silentium habere iubet. See note on 11. 5 habuerat.

12. fama atque fortuna eorum pares sunt] See note on 20. 2 virtus fidesque. Perhaps the feminine is used here because fortuna is concrete. (Constans proposes to strike out eorum (see next line) and to make f. atque f. ablative.)

13. neque studere neque odisse] i.e. without respect of persons: studere absolutely 'to show partiality' is rare, and is perhaps old-fashioned. Cato has it in this sense.

14. in imperio] abstract for concrete.

15. paulo saevior] The reading saevior is I think only just possible—'if it were a little too—what people would call 'cruel'' (§ 14). Herzog well remarks, that saevior contains a logical contradiction to paulo. P has sevior, and the omission of a middle syllable, when another word is thus produced, is common enough in that MS, e.g. libertate (liberalitate) suum (summum) primum (plurimum) honestas (honestatos) etc., the error being sometimes left, sometimes emended by the writer or corrector. Severior should therefore be read. (It is said that saevus does not occur in Caesar.)

17. aliena a re publica] 40. 5 note.

18. nam profecto aut metus aut iniuria te subegit...genus poenae novom decernere] The argument is not put as clearly as it might be. There is intended to be a strong emphasis on novom it seems. 'For it is an unprecedented punishment, which only alarm or indignation can account for your proposing'. De timore takes up the metus, and de poena the iniuria. There is no place for alarm, and no punishment—certainly not death—is proportionate to the offence.

consulem designatum] and as such, as Appian says (see 50. 4 note, p. 137), εὐβουλότερόν τε καὶ εὐλαβέστερον ἐνθυμησόμενος περὶ ἑκάστου.

19. cum praesertim] The words occur in that order always in the Catiline and Jugurtha. In the Histories praesertim cum is put instead.

20. Something of this kind was certainly said by Caesar. Cic. in Cat. 4. 4. 7 seems to endorse the view of the chief pontiff. Indeed, when not philosophizing, Cicero adopted or ridiculed the popular belief as suited his purpose. Cp. p. Clu. 61. 171 nam nunc quidem quid tandem illi mali mors attulit? Nisi forte ineptis fabulis ducimur, ut existimemus illum apud inferos impiorum supplicia perferre, with Phil. 14. 12. 32 illi igitur impii quos cecidistis etiam ad inferos poenas parricidii luent e.q.s. (cp. Lucr. 3. 830).

possum equidem dicere] 'I may be permitted to say, what is the simple truth'. Equidem—Sallust employs 'this most sensitive and individual of particles' eleven times, and always in speeches or letters, never when he is speaking in his own person. Caesar himself uses equidem twice, also in speeches:—B.G. 2. 33. 14 equidem me Caesaris militem dici volui, vos me imperatoris nomine appellavistis; and ap. Gell. 13. 3. 5 equidem mihi videor pro nostra necessitate, non labore, non opera, non industria defuisse. And Cicero employs the particle the more often the more conversational the tone of his writing, more often in the confidential letters to Atticus than in the to a great extent formal ad Familiares, and in other works chiefly in dialogue. With Sallust it is a flower of parliamentary oratory.—The eleven instances in S. are the following: here; C. 52. 16 quare vanum equidem hoc consilium est; C. 58. 4 scitis equidem milites; C. 52. 11 iam pridem equidem nos vera vocabula rerum amisimus; C. 51. 15 equidem ego sic existumo; J. 10. 6 equidem ego; J. 85. 26 equidem ego; Or. Phil. 6 equidem a principio...maturandum putabam; ep. Pomp. 4 equidem fateor; ep. Mith. 13 equidem...bellum cepi; id. 16 scio equidem. The reader will have noticed that, while in the Catiline and Jugurtha (the present instance is perhaps not an exception) equidem is used as a strengthened form of quidem, in the Histories a change has come about, and that equidem=ego quidem. The former use occurs in Plautus and again in Apuleius' Novel (but not in his other works) so that it clearly was so used in conversation, but perhaps not in refined conversation. In Terence it is employed as always in Cicero=ego quidem. This use of the word the authority of Cicero made the universal use in cultivated literature, and Sallust with the rest, in spite of his affection for archaisms and occasional colloquialisms, felt the influence. (Jordan Krit. Beit. pp. 314—336.)

22. an quia lex Porcia vetat] Perhaps 'the Porcian legislation', for there were three laws of that name (Cic. de Republ. 2. 31. 54), the first possibly introduced in 556 (198) by M. Porcius Cato, afterwards the Censor. The lex Porcia is spoken of sometimes as if it did no more than abolish scourging (here it seems, and in Cic. p. Rab. p. r. 4. 12 Porcia lex virgas ab omnium civium Romanorum corpore amovit; Liv. 10. 9. 4 Porcia tamen lex sola pro tergo civium lata videtur). But it did more than that: re-enacting the earlier leges Valeriae, it provided that no magistrate could scourge or put to death a Roman citizen if he appealed from the magistrate to the people. That the lex Porcia is produced mainly as putting an end to scourging is due to the fact that the lex Sempronia (of C. Gracchus) re-enacted the rest of the l. Porcia, adding only an extension of liability to those who took part with the magistrate in violation of the rights of citizens. And the quaes- tiones perpetuae indirectly abolished the death penalty altogether (see Maine's Ancient Law, ch. 10), for they could inflict no more than outlawry (aquae et ignis interdictio)—practically, that is, exile. It is to this practical abolition of the death penalty that Caesar alludes in the following words—at aliae leges...exilium permitti iubent, and in § 40. That Sallust is right in not making Caesar allude to the lex Sempronia (by name at any rate), however apposite it may be to the present occasion, is not improbable. The l. Porcia was, so far as it concerned scourging, a law of generally recognized validity, while the l. Sempronia was extremely unpalatable to the senate; and more than that, Caesar by his presence and proposal laid himself open to the charge that he was infringing that law: cp. Cic. in Cat. 4. 5, 10 Video de istis, qui se populares haberi volunt, abesse non neminem, ne de capite videlicet civium Romanorum sententiam ferat...At vero C. Caesar intellegit, legem Semproniam esse de civibus Romanis constitutam, qui autem rei publicae sit hostis eum civem nullo modo esse posse; denique ipsum latorem Semproniae legis iniussu populi poenas rei publicae dependisse. ('The argument of Cicero, that the men were hostes not cives, was a mere evasion; for their true character had only been prejudged by the senatus consultum ultimum, the constitutional validity of which had been recently called in question in the case of Rabirius, which was a moral defeat for the senate'. Heitland's edition of the p. Rabirio, p. 112, where a full discussion of the leges Porciae etc. will be found.)

24. in minore negotio] Negotium is often used by S. = res, cp. J. 6. 2 Micipsa...vehementer eo negotio permotus (the growing importance of Jugurtha); J. 58. 7 infecto negotio; J. 107. 6 ea res uti in tali negotio probata.

neglegeris] Jordan reads in the same way J. 40. 1, neglegisset (though P has neglexisset), Or. Lep. 23 intellegerint (V intellegerent), J. 6. 2 intellegit (? present). S. often uses the other form of the perfect of intellego, but that is not against this reading. It is strange, however, that no grammarian notices these old forms.

25. tempus dies] tempus, time with its inevitable changes of circumstances. dies, time in its inevitable advance. Livy also puts the words together 2. 45. 2 diem tempusque forsitan ipsum leniturum iras.

26. ceterum] 'but', not a Ciceronian use.

27. omnia mala exempla ex rebus bonis orta sunt. sed] Ex rebus bonis would mean 'from a prosperous condition of affairs': but it is questionable whether S. would then have used ex; cp. Hist. 1. 9 at discordia et avaritia atque ambitio et cetera secundis rebus oriri sueta mala, and the novom illud exemplum below shows clearly enough that S. must have written ex bonis (sc. exemplis). If, however, it is felt that rebus, which has clearly given the writers of MSS some trouble, must be accounted for, Klimscha's re bonis ('good under the then circumstances') will remove that difficulty. Exemplum seems to be used without any connotation of warning example or precedent (Nägelsbach p. 39 quotes Liv. 25. 33 exempla haec vere pro documentis habenda), and to mean no more than 'exceptional proceeding'. (Klimscha quotes Cic. de imp. Pomp. §§ 61. 63.) The meaning then will be—All bad exceptional measures arise from such as were in their time good. A further difficulty confronts us in sed, for the two sentences are not, it is clear, opposed. Schmalz explains 'the precedents are at first good, but when etc.', and various other explanations and corrections are proposed, but none I think are satisfactory but that of R. Schöll. He proposes to read sunt: et. The examples given of the Thirty Tyrants and of Sulla are, as he justly says, examples of a policy passing into abuse in the same hands, and not of a policy passing into other and unworthy hands. The two sentences should be regarded as parallel and coordinate. The doings of the Greek tyrants and of Sulla are first quoted as proofs of omnia...orta sunt, and in § 35 what is said in the second part of the sentence et ubi... transfertur is applied to the present case.

ignaros [eius]] eius, i.e. imperi, as ignarus belli J. 96. 1; but ignarus might well stand absolutely as in J. 91. 1, but it would then rather mean 'people who did not know what they were doing'.

ab dignis et idoneis] idoneus = fit to suffer—a rare use.

28. inposuere] without indirect object, devictis Atheniensibus being abl. abs. J. 100. 3 simul consul quasi nullo inposito omnia providere. For the history see Xen. Hellen. 2. 3. 2 etc.

29. ea populus laetari] Cp. Cic. Ep. 7. 1. 1 utrumque laetor.

32. Damasippum] L. Junius Brutus D. praetor 672 (82), when, under the orders of the younger Marius, he slaughtered many of the senators of Sulla's party. He was afterwards among the three thousand or more prisoners taken by Sulla at the battle at the Porta Collina, who were cut down, on the third day after the battle, in the Campus Martius.

cum...iussit, quis non factum eius laudabat?] The cum is surely temporal. Some commentators, however, make the cum = quod—an old-fashioned use which maintained itself in common speech after gratulor etc. Cic. Ep. 9. 14. 3 'o mihi Cicero' inquit 'gratulor tibi, cum tantum vales apud Dolabellam'. J. 102. 5 Rex Bocche, magna laetitia nobis est, cum te...di monuere, uti e. q. s.

33. postremo] 'or even'. J. 10. 2 postremo, quod difficillumum inter mortalis est, gloria invidiam vicisti.

vas aut vestimentum] Perhaps from Cato (Gell. 13. 23. 1) neque mihi aedificatio neque vasum neque vestimentum ullum est manupretiosum.

35. atque ego] As has been said above, we have here the application of the general observation of § 27—that a custom good in itself and when it was first originated often becomes an abuse in the hands of unworthy successors. Note alio tempore, alio consule, and hoc exemplo. For the position of ego after the first word of the sentence cp. § 41 Hanc ego; 52. 2 Longe mihi; 52. 36 Quare ego; 53. 2 Sed mihi; J. 4. 9 Verum ego; and Marius begins his speech J. 85. 1 (as was the habit of the elder Cato) Scio ego.

36. hoc exemplo] Cic. Ep. 4. 3. 1 quod exemplo fit id etiam iure fieri putant.

37. quo minus aliena instituta...imitarentur] Quo minus is only used twice again by S. § 41 (where causam is a preventive reason), J. 38. 8.—Polyb. 6. 25. 11 ἀγαθοὶ γὰρ, εἰ καί τινες ἕτεροι, μεταλαβεῖν ἔθη καὶ ζηλῶσαι τὸ βέλτιον οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι.

38. arma atque tela militaria ab Samnitibus] The veru, Verg. A. 7. 665 veruque Sabello, and the scutum: that was the general opinion, though the scutum according to Mommsen came from the Greeks (σκῦτος).

insignia magistratuum ab Tuscis pleraque sumpserunt] Liv. 1. 8. 3 me haud paenitet eorum sententiae esse, quibus et apparitores et hoc genus (lictors) ab Etruscis finitimis, unde sella curulis, unde toga praetexta sumpta est, et...ductum placet.

pleraque] 'in great numbers' not 'most'; as often in Livy and Tacitus: cp. C. 16. 4 plerique Sullani milites with 28. 4 non nullos ex Sullanis coloniis. C. 36. 5 plerosque civium animos is clearly only 'many'. J. 6. 1 pleraque tempora in venando agere: hunting was only one of many other outdoor exercises in which Jugurtha indulged. In S. it is perhaps only when plerique stands in the same case as the subst. that it has this contracted meaning.

39. eodem illo tempore] A somewhat vague reference.

Graeciae morem imitati] Döderlein objected to these words as placed in the MSS 'What is the point of the introductory remarks about the receptivity of the Romans for good institutions of foreign lands, if the lex Porcia is not to be represented as a foreign importation?' But the transposition recommended by him,—to after coepere tum § 40, would give us there an unendurably awkward sentence. Dietsch, who urges this among other objections to the suggested transposition, yet for his part regards the words as a gloss. 'The ancestors' he says 'will then not appear to be so very wise after all'. But if the words are struck out, then the remarks about Roman receptivity will indeed be irrelevant. Clearly the words must be explained as they stand.—Omnia mala exempla ex bonis orta sunt. Capital punishment, for instance, is not a bad institution, if it can be kept from abuse. Our ancestors are to be praised for introducing, and still more for abolishing it, when it was found to be abused. And between the lines no doubt Caesar is attempting to excite prejudice against the punishment of death by describing it as an un-Roman and exotic practice—an argumentum ad Catonem.

Whether the words are left as they are or transposed they will be equally untrue. But it was supposed that the Twelve Tables were drawn up under Greek influence (Liv. 3. 31. 8) and of them likely enough S. was thinking—he was not infallible. Schöll suggests that S. borrowed the idea from Varro. Servius (Verg. A. 7. 176)...ut Varro docet in libris de gente populi Romani in quibus dicit quid a quaque traxerint gente per imitationem. The book was published in B.C. 43, the Cat. in the year after.

40. circumveniri innocentes, alia huiuscemodi fieri coepere] The construction of a passive infinitive with the active of coepi—a construction unknown to Cicero and Caesar, and rare in Livy, though usual in Tacitus—occurs occasionally in S. J. 41. 10 moveri civitas et dissensio civilis quasi permixtio terrae oriri coepit. C. 12. 1 duci coepit. J. 92. 1 haberi coepit. Observe that a genuine passive is in none of these instances used by itself. With regard to another point as to the construction of coepi, it is not used in the Catiline without an infinitive, though often elsewhere (J. 62. 7 cum primum deditio coepit)—a use of the word avoided by Cicero.

aliaeque leges...quibus legibus] A redundancy of expression common in Caesar himself, and introduced by S. perhaps in imitation of his style, though it serves the purpose of limiting the quibus to the aliae leges, excluding the lex Porcia. Cp. B.G.

1. 49. 1 ultra eum locum, quo in loco Germani consederant... castris idoneum locum delegit, acieque instructa ad eum locum venit.

42. ea] Referring to imperium—what is summed up in one notion in imperium is split up into its elements in ea. The construction is repeated below 52. 10.

43. sed ita censeo] Compare the conclusion of Cato's speech (52. 36 quare ego ita censeo e. q. s.) and of that of Philippus (Or. Phil. 21 quare ita censeo e. q. s), and notice that it is the custom in speaking before the senate to end, not with a glowing peroration, but with a concise recital of what the speaker proposes. Beside the phrase censeo, which Sallust employs, mihi placet, decerno, or decernendum censeo are sometimes used. If a speaker does not bring forward any proposal, he concludes by stating his concurrence in that of this or that previous speaker.

publicandas eorum pecunias] i. e. all their property. Cic. in Cat. 4. 5. 10 adiungit (Caesar) etiam publicationem bonorum.

per municipia] S. omits a detail which Cicero gives in Cat. 4. 4. 8 adiungit gravem poenam municipiis si quis eorum vincula ruperit.

Ch. 52, 1. ceteri verbo alius alii varie adsentiebantur] 'expressed their concurrence' (that they would without rising from their seats, saying simply e. g. A. Silano adsentior—cp. Cic. Ep. 5. 2. 9; Liv. 27. 34) in one or other of the sententiae. There were at present only two—those of Silanus and Caesar, unless the proposal of Nero is to be counted in. But before Nero came Cicero: the consul, or indeed any acting magistrate, could speak wherever he chose in the debate. Varie expresses the irregular way in which the voting (?) went, now one after another going the same way, now succeeding senators see-sawing between the two proposals.

M. Porcius Cato] Vell. 2. 35 Hic tribunus plebis designatus, et adhuc admodum adolescens (32)...paene inter ultimos interrogatus sententiam tanta vi animi atque ingenii invectus est in coniurationem ut ardore oris orationem omnium lenitatem suadentium societate consilii suspectam fecerit.

2. Perhaps from Dem. Or. Olynth. 3 ad init. Οὐχὶ ταὐτὰ παρίσταταί μοι γιγνώσκειν, ὦ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, ὅταν τε εἰς τὰ πράγματα ἀποβλέψω καὶ ὅταν πρὸς τοὺς λόγους οὓς ἀκούω κτλ.

4. nam cetera malificia] Wirz quotes Lyk. 1. 126 τῶν μὲν γὰρ ἄλλων ἀδικημάτων ὑστέρας δεῖ τετάχθαι τὰς τιμωρίας, προδοσίας καὶ δήμου καταλύσεως προτέρας κτλ.

6. de vectigalibus] J. 31. 25 non peculatus aerari factus est neque per vim sociis ereptae pecuniae.

7. saepe numero...multa verba in hoc ordine feci] Sallust, who was himself a senator and of course acquainted with the procedure of the senate, represents Cato as having often spoken in the meetings of that body, while he was simply quaestorius. That then is one among many proofs that the theory that the so-called pedarii had not the right of speaking in the senate is wrong (Willems, Le Sénat, 1. 142). There is little room for doubt as to the pedarii, but can Cato, who was only 32 years old, have already taken up the character of mentor so often? Sallust perhaps commits an anachronism in his desire to make Cato's speech thoroughly representative of the man's character, as it showed itself in his career as a whole.

8. animo meo] 'inclination', cp. 58. 6 diutius in his locis esse, si maxume animus ferat,...egestas prohibet. What is animus in Cato, is lubido in others.

fecissem] qui in a causal sense with subj. perhaps only here in S., but utpote qui, in the one place in which it is used (57. 4) is followed by the subj. *utpote qui magno exercitu...*sequeretur. quippe qui as has already been stated always takes the indicative in S.

gratiam fecissem] Fr. faire grâce de.

9. opulentia neglegentiam tolerabat] Is opulentia nom. or abl.? 37. 7 praeterea iuventus, quae in agris manuum mercede inopiam toleraverat; 53. 5 res publica magnitudine sua imperatorum atque magistratuum vitia sustentabat. These passages point to its being the abl., but the nom. is easier.

10. imperium...haec] Cp. 51. 42 imperium...ea.

11. hic mihi quisquam...nominat] 'The thought—under these circumstances nobody should talk of forbearance and pity—is turned into an exclamation of disgust' (Jacobs-Wirz) —hence quisquam. It might be an improvement, though it is not necessary, to put a note of interrogation after nominat: Cato pauses for a reply, but, getting none, continues with increased indignation.

vera vocabula rerum] Cp. 38. 2 ff.

12. furibus aerari] Cp. Cicero's energetic expression ad Att. 1. 16. 11 illa contionalis hirudo aerarii, misera ac ieiuna plebecula.

13. credo] For the parenthetical use of the verb cp. Cic. in Cat. 1. 2. 5 si (te) interfici iussero, credo, erit verendum mihi

e. q. s. Caesar, B. G. 3. 70. 1 Pompeius insidias timens, credo, quod haec praeter spem acciderant, munitionibus appropinquare non audebat.

16. sin] P and V have si. The alteration seems hardly necessary, and Jordan himself is content with si in 58. 9 si vincimus...si metu cesserimus.

18. paululum modo] Some editors prefer the reading of V paulum modo, for the expression is not found elsewhere, but either paululum alone or paulum modo, and S. himself writes J. 93. 4 ilex...paulum modo prona.

20. si ita res esset] 'ita res est' is old-fashioned, says Kvičala, for ita est, Plaut. Most. 4. 4. 40 haec res sic est ut narro tibi. The res is omitted in 51. 11 non ita est. J. 85. 42 (Marius' speech) verum non ita est.

21. quae nobis nulla sunt] J. 86. 3 homini potentiam quaerenti egentissumus quisque opportunissumus, cui neque sua cara, quippe quae nulla sunt, e. q. s. Or. Lep. 9 itaque illa quies et otium cum libertate—nulla sunt. The use belongs to the language of the people.

23. eo fit ut impetus fiat in vacuam rem publicam] Cp. J. 41. 5 ita omnia in duas partis abstracta sunt, res publica, quae media fuerat, dilacerata. Schmalz quotes the legal maxim res nullius cedit occupanti, and Jacobs-Wirz Cornif. ad Her. 4. 29. 40 necesse est, cum constet istum fundum nostrum fuisse, ostendas te aut vacuum possedisse, aut usu tuum fecisse ...: vacuum, cum ego adessem, possidere non potuisti.

24. coniuravere...incendere] The constr. does not occur before S. Cp. Hor. Od. 1. 15. 7 coniurata tuas rumpere nuptias. S. puts the inf. also with hortari dehortari monere postulare.

supra caput est] Cicero uses the expression once ad Q. f. 1. 2. 6 ecce supra caput homo levis et sordidus.

25. quid...deprensis hostibus faciatis] The dative, as perhaps in 46. 2; Jacobs-Wirz takes it to be abl. Cic. Verr. 2. 16. 40 quid hoc homine facias. Cp. C. 55. 2; J. 85. 17 quod si iure me despiciunt, faciant idem maioribus suis.

27. ne ista...convortat] ne=dummodo ne as above § 12; but it is better to stop dimittatis—Ne (nae) 'no doubt—would be turned into', or ne prohibitive 'look to it lest'. convortat is reflexive, J. 85. 9 mihi...bene facere iam ex consuetudine in naturam vortit. "Do you pity them, that's my advice—the poor young men have been led astray by ambition—and dismiss them with arms in their hands too. Well, (all I can tell you is) that clemency and pity of yours when once they have got arms would soon land you in a piteous plight. True it's a bad business in itself, but as for you you do not fear it—is that what you would say? Say rather you are in utter terror (but you can't bestir yourselves)'.

29. prospera omnia cedunt] There is no need with Jacobs-Wirz to read prospere with P^1 because of J. 63. 1 cuncta prospere eventura, and C. 26. 5 neque petitio neque insidiae... prospere cessere, for it goes on quae occulte temptaverat aspera foedaque evenerant. Liv. has both prosperum evenire 42. 28 and prospere evenire 5. 51. 5.

30. A. Manlius Torquatus bello Gallico] The story is alluded to in C. 9. 4. There is a double mistake here, for according to all authorities (Liv. 8. 7; Cic. Gell. Flor.) his name was Titus, and it was not in the Gallic war 393 (361) but in the Latin war 414 (340) that the incident occurred. It was in the Gallic war that he got his name Torquatus. Dietsch reads T for A but does not propose to alter Gallico. It is better to leave both alone.

32. cetera vita eorum huic sceleri obstat] 'makes amends for'. Liv. 1. 26. 5 atrox visum id facinus (Horatii) patribus plebique, sed recens meritum facto obstat.

33. iterum] i.e. si nunc primum ad patriae perniciem coniuravit, neque antea iam pestifera consilia iniit. Kritz.

34. Gabinio Statilio] V reverses the order. The reason is plain: elsewhere Statilius is put before Gabinius 17. 4, 43. 2, 46. 3, 55. 6, clearly because Statilius was (we do not know how) a more important person in himself or in the conspiracy than Gabinius. He is also put before Gabinius in the Sctum (Cic. in Cat. 3. 6. 64). Perhaps the greater importance of Statilius is shown by 44. 1. If as is probable V is wrong here, it yet shows that the compiler of the selection from which the MS is derived was a very diligent reader of Sallust.

35. C. cum exercitu faucibus urget, alii intra moenia atque in sinu urbis sunt hostes] Cp. Cic. in Cat. 1. 2. 5 castra sunt in Italia contra populum Romanum in Etruriae faucibus conlocata...eorum autem castrorum imperatorem ducemque hostium intra moenia atque adeo in senatu videmus, e. q. s. It is not unlikely that this passage was running in Sallust's head, but Linker went too far when he proposed to further assimilate the two passages by reading here 'cum exercitu in faucibus Etruriae agit, alii intra moenia atque in senatu sunt hostes'. The metaphor with faucibus is not unusual (Plaut. Cas. 5. 3. 4 ita manu- festo faucibus urget. Cic. p. Cluent. 31. 84 istam conciliationem gratiae Staienus tum recenti re, cum faucibus premeretur, excogitavit. Val. Max. 5. 3. 2 qui pestifera Ti. Gracchi manu faucibus adprehensam rem publicam strangulari non passus est). Another critic (M. Hertz) proposed to strike out intra moenia atque, supposing that intra moenia was a gloss, suggested by § 25 above, to explain in sinu, and that atque was added to make the gloss at home in the text. With more reason he proposed to strike out urbis, for the MS V omits it. But the compiler of the selection from which this MS was copied undoubtedly took liberties with the text, and Jordan rightly replies to these proposals, that in sinu by itself would be too poetical an expression, and would mean rather 'fondled in our arms' (cp. Cic. in Cat. 2. 10. 22). The urbis is no less necessary than intra moenia to fix the meaning of sinu (the senate). Jordan quotes Aurelius Victor, inter implana urbis atque ipso sinu (sc. urbis) praetoriae manus acie deletae, and Tac. H. 3. 38 in urbe ac sinu cavendum hostem, and Vogel still more aptly from Hegesippus, a great imitator of Sallust,—in medio urbis sinu: in urbis sinum: in medio sinu urbis id est Romano foro.

36. quare ego ita censeo] The transposition ita ego which is found in some MSS is due to the initiative of the compiler of the selection from which V is derived. The earlier position of ego, after the first word in the sentence is very common in Sallust, cp. atque ego haec 51. 35; longe mihi alia 52. 2; sed ego haec omitto 52. 24; sed mihi multa legenti 53. 2; compertum ego habeo 58. 1; etc. Cp. J. 85. 1, where Marius begins his speech, as Cato the Censor often did, with the words Scio ego Quirites. It has been proposed to strike out the ego here. Caesar says (51. 43) sed ita censeo, Philippus (Or. 21) quare ita censeo. But the ego is probably intended to be characteristic of Cato's speaking. Cp. § 5 vos ego appello; § 34 nam quid ego.

Sallust's account of Cato's speech is probably a far less accurate account than his version of Caesar's. It is not only that it is the speech of an older man than Cato then was (see §§ 7, 8) and that the style is completely Sallustian, but that whatever we are told by other authorities that Cato said is absent from Sallust's pages. Plutarch (Cato 23, Caes. 8, Cic. 21) says that he sharply rebuked Silanus for his change of view, that he inveighed at length against Caesar, and Cicero (ad Att. 12. 21. 1) declares that Cato extolled him to the skies, for one thing and another. Of all that we hear nothing from Sallust, except a short insinuation against Caesar. This says Plutarch (Cat. 23) is the only extant speech of Cato's, for Cicero's short-hand writers took it down. Sallust however was it may be supposed anxious to make the speech as far as possible an exposition of Cato's character and political views, to lead up to the contrasted portraitures of two admirable Roman types.

Sallust is so anxious to get on to contrast the characters of the two speakers that he cuts the rest of the sitting short. The consul could apply the clôture when he liked, and it is not likely that the perrogatio was continued further after Cato's speech, a speech which put the senate into a great state of exaltation and a good deal of confusion. Further debate however arises about Cato's proposal, either before the voting or in the subsequent drawing up of the decree. Cato seems to have included in his proposal that the property of the condemned should be confiscated. To that Caesar vigorously objected; it was not fair, he said, that the mild part of his proposal should be rejected and the severe retained. When the senators could not be persuaded, Caesar called upon the tribunes to intervene, but they refused. Cicero however took upon himself to omit the proposed confiscation. As Caesar was leaving the senate-house armed equites draw their swords upon him. But Curio throws his toga over Caesar, and Cicero too gives them a sign to desist. (Suetonius' (Jul. 14) account, that the equites entered the senate-house and forced Caesar with these drawn swords to desist from further opposition, is probably incorrect.)

Ch. 53, 1. sententiam eius laudant] Willems quotes this passage to show that senators of especial authority were allowed to rise again to express in a few words their opinion of a discourse that had just been delivered. But surely all that is meant is that Cato is congratulated by his admirers, and that senators express to one another their admiration of the speech —all in a quite informal and probably noisy way. Liv. 9. 8. 13 cum omnes, laudibus modo prosequentes virum, in sententiam eius pedibus irent e. q. s.

virtutem animi] This pleonastic animi is very common. C. 49. 4 animi mobilitate, 51. 4 lubidinem animi, 58. 2 timor animi, 61. 4 ferociam animi, J. 4. 4 iudicium animi.

2. tanta negotia sustinuisset] J. 85. 3 neque me fallit quantum cum maximo beneficio vostro negoti sustineam, 'to support', 'to render possible'. Cp. Thuc. 1. 141. 4 αἱ δὲ περιουσίαι τοὺς πολέμους μᾶλλον ἢ αἱ βίαιοι ἐσφοραὶ ἀνέχουσι. The connection is:—it was not what are often thought the sources of greatness—not great armies or resources, not the continuous favour of fortune, not eloquence nor military glory —but a constant supply of a few great men in each succeeding generation.

3. legionibus hostium] So J. 79. 4 the legions of Carthage and of Cyrene. J. 49. 2 (Jug.) singulas turmas et manipulos circumiens.

parvis copiis] Not military forces—but resources.

ante Romanos fuisse] a phrase that is not used by Cicero. Cp. Liv. 35. 14 Quidnam tu diceres, si me vicisses? tum me vero, inquit, et ante Alexandrum et ante Pyrrhum et ante omnes alios imperatores esse. Tac. A. 13. 14 nullos mortalium armis aut fide ante Germanos esse.

4. paucorum civium] Perhaps S. got this view from Cato; see Cic. de r. publ. 2. 1 is dicere solebat ob hanc causam praestare nostrae civitatis statum ceteris civitatibus, quod in illis singuli fuissent fere, qui suam quisque rem publicam constituissent legibus atque institutis suis (Minos Lycurgus Solon etc.)... nostra autem res publica non unius esset ingenio, sed multorum, nec una hominis vita, sed aliquot constituta saeculis et aetatibus, e. q. s.

5. sicuti effeta parente] So read two unimportant MSS of the 13th and 15th centuries (acc. to Dietsch). The sense will then be 'as when a mother is past child-bearing'. Jordan thinks this reading sufficiently supported by Plin. Ep. 6. 21 sum ex eis qui mirantur antiquos, non tamen, ut quidam, temporum nostrorum ingenia despicio. Neque enim quasi lassa et effeta natura nihil iam laudabile parit. And Apuleius Apol. 76 ceterum uxor iam propemodum vetula et effeta (v. l. effecta) nunc demum contumeliis abnuit. But the parentum of the mass of MSS points to some word having been left out—virtute Allen (from the line below), aetate Dietsch, but more probably vi (effeta vi parentum) Ritschl—'as if the vigour of their ancestors were exhausted'.

haud sane quisquam Romae virtute magnus fuit] Jacobs-Wirz suggests that this is a hit at Pompeius Magnus, of whom S. says H. 3. 7 Set Pompeius a prima adulescentia sermone fautorum similem fore se credens Alexandro regi facta consultaque eius quidem aemulator erat. He even described him, it seems, as oris probi animo inverecundo. H. inc. rel. 75.

6. obtulerat...fuit] Epistolary tenses.

Ch. 54, 1. genus] The Julian was a very old patrician gens. The plebeian Porcian gens was first ennobled by Cato the Censor.

aetas] Caesar was born in 654 (100), but see 49. 2 (p. 136). Cato in 659 (95).

eloquentia] On Caesar's op. Quint. 10. 1. 114. C. vero Caesar si foro tantum vacasset, non alius ex nostris contra Ciceronem nominaretur. Tanta in eo vis est, id acumen, ea concitatio, ut illum eodem animo dixisse, quo bellavit, appareat; exornat tamen haec omnia mira sermonis, cuius proprie studiosus fuit, elegantia. On Cato Cic. Brut. 31. 118 unum excipio Catonem, in quo perfectissimo Stoico summam elegantiam non desiderem.

alia alii] alii though of two, for alia means 'different', and alia alteri is not admissible. Liv. 1. 21. 6 ita duo deinceps reges, alius alia via, ille bello, hic pace, civitatem auxerunt.

2. mansuetudine et misericordia] Qualities which Cato ridicules. 52. 27.

severitas] Cic. ad Att. 1. 18. 7 unus est, qui curet constantia magis et integritate, quam ut mihi videtur, consilio aut ingenio, Cato; id. 2. 1. 8 nam Catonem nostrum non tu amas plus quam ego; sed tamen ille optimo animo utens et summa fide nocet interdum rei publicae; dicit enim tamquam in Platonis πολιτείᾳ, non tamquam in Romuli faece.

3. ignoscundo] Sallust had himself personal experience of Caesar's forgiveness, if it is of our Sallust that Cicero is speaking in ad Att. 11. 20. 2 etiam Sallustio ignovit (perhaps for his ill-success in restoring order among the mutinous legions in Campania). In the following miseris perfugium it is in Sallust's mind also how he betook himself to Caesar, after his expulsion from the senate.

4. in animum induxerat] 'had from the first made up his mind to'. The expression in animum inducere is used this once in S. It is common in Plaut. and Ter. and after in Livy etc.—an archaism perhaps. Cicero writes animum inducere, with one exception, Cic. p. Sull. 30. 83 (where Reid would strike out the in).

neglegere...denegare] Hist. inf., otherwise, as Schmalz says, what should appear as the natural outcome of his character will be put down to calculation.

bellum novom] Not such wars as those of Sulla Crassus Pompeius for instance, who partly did but reap what predecessors had sown. The wars in Gaul, Germany, Britain were wars on new ground.

6. illum sequebatur] Schmalz compares Cic. T. D. 1. 45. 109 gloria virtutem tanquam umbra sequitur. Seneca Ep. 79. 13 gloria umbra virtutis est: etiam invitam sequitur. Such expressions with sequi are common in S. Cp. 3. 2, Or. Phil. 9 malos praemia secuntur, id. 21 fortuna meliores sequitur. A personal object is always put, so that the illum of the text, and not Dietsch's illa must be right. For the change of subject cp. J. 14. 16 si omnia quae aut amisi aut ex necessariis advorsa facta sunt. 101. 5 cum peditibus, quos Volux ... adduxerat neque in priore pugna itinere morati adfuerant.

Ch. 55, 1. in Catonis sententiam discessit] i. e. voted in favour of Cato's proposal.

ratus] 'thinking'. Ratus, from Sallust onward, served as a substitute for the wanting present participle of reor. Cp. J. 69. 1 Vagenses ubi animum advortere ad se vorsum exercitum pergere, primo, uti erat res, Metellum esse rati, portas clausere, deinde...rursum Iugurtham arbitrati cum magno gaudio obvii procedunt. Many other past participles of deponents are used aoristically, without it being implied that the action they express precedes that of the principal verb. Cp. arbitrati in the above quotation, and veritus in J. 15. 5 veritus...ne polluta licentia invidiam accenderet, animum a consueta lubidine continuit. There is a somewhat similar use of the present participle in J. 113. 1 haec Maurus secum ipse diu volvens tandem promisit, and J. 35. 10 sed postquam Roma egressus est, fertur saepe eo tacitus respiciens postremo dixisse e. q. s.

antecapere] J. 21. 3 maxime festinans tempus legatorum antecapere. Cicero would write antevertere or praevertere for antecapere.

triumviros] The tresviri capitales.

quae [ad] supplicium postulabat] As to ad Dietsch says 'cum defendi posse videatur, nolo suspiciones sequi'. Is it possible that consul can be the subject to postulabat?

2. ceteris] Cp. 52. 25.

3. Tullianum] is described in Burn's Rome and the Campagna (p. 81) and in Mommsen. It was originally a well-house, as the name denotes, and there is still a spring in it (hence Jugurtha's exclamation). "It was roofed by layers of peperino-stone so placed that each overlaps the layers beneath", Burn—(that is described by Sall. camera lapideis fornicibus iuncta). At a later time another vaulted chamber was built over it, and the stone which closed the vaulted roof of the lower chamber removed—hence demissus. Ubi paululum ascenderis ad laevam is far from clear. If Jordan, the leading authority on Roman topography, is undecided between ascenderis and descenderis, who is to decide? Merivale says, "The phrase ubi ascenderis seems to imply some common passenger's route and refers probably to the ascent of the street in which the carcer stood from the forum, which agrees with existing localities". But it surely refers to how you are to find the 'Tullianum' when you have entered the carcer.

5. vindices rerum capitalium] Mommsen (R. S. 1^2. 581. n.) takes the v. r. c. to be the tresviri capitales mentioned above (cp. Cic. de Legg. 3. 3. 6 vincula sontium servanto, capitalia vindicanto), and concludes that these officers strangled Lentulus with their own hands. Is it possible that these dignified chiefs of the police, who had concurrent authority with the aediles (Liv. 25. 1), who had 'viatores' attending them in the streets, should have had to sink to be executioners? Mommsen maintains that they had this disagreeable duty to perform only when the criminals were men of high position or women. The evidence (Val. Max. 5. 4. 7; Tac. A. 5. 9) seems somewhat insufficient. Still, however that may be, the fregere need not any more imply that they did it themselves, than it is meant in 51. 29 that the Thirty Tyrants killed their victims with their own hands.

6. exitium vitae] It is proposed (by F. Vogel) to alter exitium to exitum. For the phrase is not found elsewhere, and indeed vitae is superfluous. And there are the following apparent imitations of S. in Augustine (dignum moribus factisque suis exitum reperiunt), and in Hegesippus — a constant imitator—hic tali dignus exitu fuit; exitum vitae invenire; ita dignum meritis suis vitae exitum tulit. The MS authority however for exitium is too strong, and the explanation of the word probably is that it does not mean 'miserable end', but that exitium=exitum. Exitium antiqui ponebant pro exitum: nunc exitium pessimum exitum dicimus. Festus.

Ch. 56, 1. duas legiones] the ordinary number for a consul, which Catiline claimed to be. The regular number of a legion was 6000. There were 10 cohorts to the legion. His cohorts then were at first only 100 men strong.

2. voluntarius aut ex sociis] The voluntarii are those who were extra coniurationem (39. 5): with sociis supply coniurationis.

3. pars quarta] 'only a quarter'. So alii e. q. s. (below), 'a few had only, etc.'

4. adventabat] 'was on the march'.

ad urbem modo in Galliam vorsus] Vorsus is always accompanied by in or ad in Sallust, with one exception: J. 19. 3 quem locum Aegyptum vorsus finem imperi habuere Carthaginienses, sperabat propediem magnas copias sese habiturum, si Romae socii incepta patravissent] There is a decided gap in the narration here. Lentulus (44. 6) and the other conspirators in the city (48. 4) appear to have expected Catiline to come into the neighbourhood of Rome before they struck out, while Catiline in this passage and below (58. 4) expected that they should not wait for him but strike immediately and send him further supplies.

5. servitia...cuius] A relative or demonstrative pronoun in the plural referring to a singular collective noun is common, but the converse, as we have it here, is hardly to be paralleled. Compare, however, Or. Mac. 15 ne vos ad virilia illa vocem, quo tribunos plebei, modo patricium magistratum,...maiores vostri paravere. Liv. 42. 8 bona*que ut eis, quicquid* eius recuperari possit, reddantur (under the influence of the formula—quod eius facere poteris). Thuc. 1. 80. 3 ἀλλὰ τοῖς χρήμασιν; ἀλλὰ πολλῷ ἔτι πλέον τούτου ἐλλείπομεν. The fact that both servitium and servitia are used in this sense will perhaps explain the slip. Kvíčala, as the only parallels that can be produced are of things and not of persons, makes coniurationis the antecedent, comparing for the order J. 14. 15 fratri, quem minume decuit, propincus per scelus vitam eripuit (where propincus is the antecedent to quem).

alienum suis rationibus e. q. s.] Cp. 44. 6. Catiline's scruples with regard to the slaves are merely as to employing them in his army. He had no hesitation over getting them to cooperate in the general pillage (cp. 24. 4, etc.).

Ch. 57, 1. postquam...pervenit] pervenit is the perfect. When postquam is followed by the historical present in the Catiline, the verb is always video. In the Jugurtha other verbs are so used—intellegit putat volt comperit instruit urgent, etc. Note also that in S. the postquam-clause never follows the principal clause, though that position is not rare in Tacitus.

reliquos] How many of the 12,000 were left after this desertion S. does not say. Appian talks of there having been 20,000 at the battle, though only a quarter of them, he says, were regularly armed. Perhaps Dio (37. 40) is not far wrong when he gives the number as 3000. Metellus had (§ 2) 18,000 men, and Antonius (Dio 37. 39) was stronger than Metellus in numbers.

in agrum Pistoriensem] Pistoria (Pistoja) in N. Etruria, on the southern slopes of the Apennines.

in Galliam transalpinam] Dietsch brackets Transalpinam; and it is certainly curious, for Cisalpine Gaul has first to be traversed and the Alps crossed, before Catiline could get (and that was no doubt his object) to the Allobroges. Perhaps it was this word which led Appian astray, who says (2. 7) Κατιλίναν δὲ ἐς δισμυρίους τε ἀγείραντα, καὶ τούτων τεταρτημόριον ὁπλίσαντα ἤδη, καὶ ἐς Γαλατίαν ἐπὶ ἄλλην παρασκευὴν ἀπίοντα, Ἀντώνιος ὁ ἕτερος ὕπατος ὑπ' Ἀλπείοις καταλαβών, οὐ δυσχερῶς ἐκράτησεν ἀνδρὸς κτλ.

3. igitur ubi iter eius e.q.s.] But how could Metellus have made his way from Picenum to the egress of the pass in no more time than it took Catiline magnis itineribus to get from the neighbourhood of Faesulae to Pistoria—a distance of only about 25 miles? Hagen supposes that the facts which S. has confused are, that Catiline as soon as he was aware of Antonius' approach wished to get over the mountains to Picenum, where the conspirators had been active for some time (27. 1; 42. 1), but that when he found Metellus posted at the foot of the hills he determined to try to escape along the valley of the Arno viâ Pistoria, but that at that place he found Antonius awaiting him. But it is hardly necessary to go so far afield to make Sallust's account probable. As has been already noted on 30. 5, Metellus' command was not confined to Picenum but included also the territory of the Senones Galli, extended, that is, north of Ariminum, and he did not surely wait for deserters' information to block the exit of Pistoria to the north. —Catiline would have the choice of two passes from Pistoria to Gallia Cisalpina, the one by the Reno valley to Bologna—the modern railway route, the other viâ Pievepelago along the Scoltenna valley to Modena—the Via Estense. It was by the former probably that Catiline intended to go. We must suppose that Antonius made arrangements to prevent Catiline escaping down the Arno valley and along the coast to Genoa and over the Bocchetta.

qua illi descensus erat] '=descendendum erat. So in old Latin nunc mihi cautio est=cavendum est: and the verbal substantives in -sus and -tus share all the peculiarities of those in -tio'. Schmalz.

4. utpote qui magno exercitu locis aequioribus expeditus [in fuga] sequeretur] The reading of the MSS expeditos in fuga is nonsense. The error, whatever it is, is of long standing, for Priscian quotes it so (but with fugam). One cannot be sure that the readings of some late MSS expeditus and of one expedito are anything but attempts to mend the passage. And as to Jordan's brackets, it is more likely that something fell out than that in fuga was put in. The reading expeditus in fuga has found very general acceptance. Expeditus of course goes with locis aequioribus. For sequi used absolutely instances are not wanting (J. 55. 8, insequi J. 50. 5). But can in fuga mean as Jacobs-Wirz puts it si fuga hostium facta esset—'if Catiline should take to flight'—the explanation suggested by Kortte and followed by Kritz and others? There is 2. 9 in magna copia rerum, 35. 2 in novo consilio, J. 14. 11 in imperio vostro, 31. 24 in tam divorsis mentibus—but always with an adjective. But were it possible, should we have the right sense? Dietsch (1859) suggested expeditus impeditos in fuga. Ritschl prefers tardatos, thinking the antithesis too forced. (But Sisenna writes inermos armati, impeditos expediti...interficiunt.) The sense then will be—Not only was the way barred in one direction by Metellus, but Antonius too was close upon him in another, and no wonder, for Antonius had an army large enough to allow him to hurry on disregarding stragglers, and could move quickly in pursuit over level ground, while Catiline in his flight was struggling over rough mountain paths.

5. praesidi] The 'reinforcements' which he expected from Rome, cp. 58. 4 dum ex urbe praesidia opperior.

Ch. 58, 1. neque ex ignavo] The first neque not connective, but the clause it introduces gives an explanation without copula. 2. 3, 11. 3.

2. patere] in a different sense below, § 9; here 'to be displayed'.

3. advocavi] not 'I have summoned you'—but hist. perf. quo...ut the same variation in 33. 1.

5. quo loco] Some, but not the best, MSS have quo in loco. This is the only place where locus is used in a figurative sense in S. Caesar and Livy would perhaps put the preposition in this phrase, Cicero not. When loco is accompanied with a relative or demonstrative pronoun, idem, or ullus, S. puts the preposition elsewhere.

iuxta mecum omnes intellegitis] Iuxta mecum is found only in Plautus. Fronto takes the phrase from S. when he writes iuxta mecum scire and iuxta cum eo carere balneo—either an archaic or conversational phrase.

9. si vincimus] Cp. si metu cesserimus below—'if we win, as we mean to'.

commeatus abunde] Commeatus is not the genitive (21. 1 quibus mala abunde omnia erant. J. 63. 2 alia omnia abunde erant), and is singular (J. 43. 3 commeatum affatim, sc. parare), and erit must be supplied, as esse in Or. Mac. 26 abunde libertatem rati quia tergis abstinetur.

11. non eadem nobis et illis necessitudo impendet] Kritz says we have a kind of zeugma, for the sense is quae nobis impendet necessitudo illis nulla est. Is it not rather: they are in arms under the orders of others fighting in a cause which is not their own?

17. audacia pro muro habetur] Cp. 1. 4 virtus clara aeternaque habetur.

20. nam] Supply 'don't be alarmed at their superior numbers for'.

The battle of Pistoria was fought at the beginning of the year 692 (62). Dio 37. 39 ἐν ἀρχῇ εὐθὺς τοῦ ἔτους. According to the rectified calendar that would be probably about the beginning of December. Cic. p. Sest. 5. 12 claims for his client that had it not been for his energy datus illo in bello esset hiemi locus, and cp. Cic. in Cat. 2. 10. 23 num suas secum mulierculas sunt in castra ducturi. quemadmodum autem illis carere poterunt his praesertim iam noctibus (on 9 Nov. by the old calendar the days were then shortening).

Ch. 59, 1. signa canere iubet] Signa is probably here subject to canere as in J. 94. 5: in J. 99. 1 Sall. gives both constructions iubet, ne signa quidem canere and tubicines signa canere iubet.

exaequato periculo] See note on 3. 2 facta dictis exaequanda sunt.

2. nam uti planities erat inter sinistros montes et ab dextera rupe aspera] aspera is acc. plur. neut.=aspera loca (for substantival use of aspera J. 89. 3 maiora et magis aspera aggredi tempus visum est). Ab dextera rupe go together and correspond to sinistros montes. For ab in this sense H. 1. 8 omni Gallia in Rhenum atque inter mare nostrum et Oceanum, nisi qua a paludibus invia fuit, perdomita: and for the whole clause H. 2. 18 inter laeva moenia (so Dietsch for moenium) et dextrum flumen Turiam. 'There was a plain lying between hills on the left and ground rendered rough by rocks on the right'. (Jacobs-Wirz explains 'ab dextera (erant) loca propter rupem aspera'; Herzog makes aspera agree with planities; Merivale reads rupes.)

3. centuriones omnis, lectos et evocatos, praeterea ex gregariis militibus optumum quemque] Are four classes enumerated, as the older commentators supposed? Then how do for instance the lecti differ from optimum quemque? Or are there three classes—centuriones, evocati, gregarii optimi as Kritz and Jacobs explain? Then the evocati who are not centurions are surely gregarii, and would Sall. write 'a, b, praeterea c' and not rather 'a, praeterea b, ad hoc c'? Or finally two only? That seems the most probable. But should the comma come before omnis (as Kvíčala), or after (as Jordan)? Better perhaps after. 'All the centurions—picked men who had served their time'. Evocatos is not to be taken too literally, nor omnis either. Catiline could not stop to call out reservemen regularly, nor were every single one of the centurions put into the first line. (But it is impossible to suppose that evocatos is not used in its technical sense at all, that it means merely as Lallier says 'appelés hors de rangs'.)

Faesulanum quendam] Perhaps P. Furius 50. 4.

curare] of military command does not appear to occur before Sallust, but is common afterwards. In S. it is always accompanied by some words of place, and it is generally used absolutely, though once for variety's sake it has an object. J. 100. 2 Sulla cum equitatu apud dextumos, in sinistra parte A. Manlius cum funditoribus et sagittariis, praeterea cohortis Ligurum curabat. Tacitus often gives the word an object. Cura which Tacitus employs of subordinate military command (Hist. 2. 24 curam peditum Paulinus equitum Celsus sumpsere) is not used by S.

colonibus] P has colonibus, and as mistakes between, e.g. omnibus and omnis, civis civibus, Carthaginiensis and Carthaginiensibus, are not rare, it is not improbable that colonis is the true reading here.

propter] only here in S. in local sense.

aquilam] Cic. in Cat. 1. 9. 24 aquilam illam argenteam... cui domi tuae sacrarium scelerum tuorum constitutum fuit.

4. C. Antonius pedibus aeger] with feigned gout? Dio 37. 39...προσκαταδείσας, μή πως προθύμως σφᾶς ἀγωνιζομένους ἰδὼν ἐξονειδίσῃ τι καὶ προσενέγκῃ οἱ τῶν ἀποῤῥήτων, αὐτὸς μὲν νοσεῖν προεφασίσατο. Mommsen says it was a side-object of S. to whitewash the triumvir's uncle. His remarks on him in 21. 3 are not however very flattering.

5. tumultus causa] Dietsch accepts the tumulti of one MS, not being sure whether the unusual or old-fashioned forms found here and there in a few or a single MS are due to the officiousness of scribes or whether these old forms have been for the most part cleared away by the scribes. But the explanation of the use of senati does not apply here, for tumulti causa cannot surely be a formula.

inermis] S. uses the older form inermus about as often, J. 66. 3, etc.

6. homo militaris] Cp. 45. 2—an experienced soldier.

Ch. 60, 1. iubet] After giving the signal for advance, Petreius adds the command to go slowly—paulatim is emphatic. Kritz and others put a comma after iubet—when P. had the signal sounded and ordered the cohorts to advance slowly, the enemy's army does the same.

2. cum infestis signis] The cum is very unusual, but seems to be employed because of the preceding maxumo clamore.

5. tendere] for contendere; cp. Cic. ad Att. 16. 5. 3 itaque dubito an Venusiam tendam, and the poets.

Ch. 61, 1. confecto proelio tum vero cerneres] Cp. 25. 3 pecuniae an famae minus parceret, haud facile discerneres.

2. vivos] F. Vogel proposes to strike out vivos on these grounds. 1. Florus writes 2. 12. 1, clearly from Sallust, quem quis in pugnando ceperat locum eum amissa anima corpore tegebat: Catilina longe a suis inter hostium cadavera repertus est. 2. A scholiast on Lucan quotes the passage without vivos. 3. The MSS do not agree as to its position. He suggests therefore that it got in here from § 4 below, quam habuerat vivos. In face of this it cannot be denied that the word is suspicious; but the sentence could ill dispense with a contrast to amissa anima.

pugnando] For the use of the gerundive see 7. 7 pugnando.

3. diversius] The alis alibi stantes which appears in Dietsch's text after this word (see critical notes), Jordan rightly takes to be a confusion with 60. 5 alios alibi resistentis.

4. etiam] 'still' as in 14. 5, molles etiam et fluxi (as should there be read) and Verg. A. 6. 485.

7. incruentam] S. seems to be the first writer to use this word. It occurs afterwards in Livy and Tacitus.

strenuissumus quisque] The superlative comes from Cato, who has also arduissumus perpetuissumus. Tacitus is perhaps imitating Sallust in H. 4. 69 strenuissimi cuiusque.

9. laetitia maeror luctus atque gaudia agitabantur] Cp. 48. 1 gaudium atque laetitia, J. 14. 15 cum maerore et luctu. Laetitia is a stronger word than gaudium, maeror than luctus—see the definitions in Cic. T. D. 4. 6. 13 and 4. 8. 18 luctus= aegritudo ex eius qui carus fuerit interitu acerbo, maeror= aegritudo flebilis. Luctus is 'mourning for the dead', maeror 'grief which expresses itself in tears'. Laetitia is defined in Gellius (2. 27. 3) exultatio quaedam animi gaudio efferuentior euentu rerum expetitarum, and J. 60. 2 clamor permixtus hortatione laetitia gemitu is instructive. For gaudia 'outbursts of joy' cp. Plaut. Paenul. 5. 4. 120 cum hac me laetitia tanta et tantis adfecistis gaudiis. Cic. in Cat. 1. 10. 26 hic tu qua laetitia perfruere? quibus gaudiis exultabis? Liv. 22. 7 feminarum praecipue et gaudia insignia erant et luctus, 'So through all the army there was a varied stir of exultation, lamentation, mourning and rejoicing'.—Sallust lavishes his favourite ita, chiasmus, and agitari on the concluding sentence.

INDEXES TO THE INTRODUCTIONS AND NOTES.

I. INDEX TO WORDS AND THINGS.

A (ab) 163
abdicare 133
abesse 77, with ab 126
ablative of manner without attribute 65, abl. absolute 96, 132 absolvere 72
abstract for concrete 99, 134
abunde (esse) 101, 162
actutum xxxiii
adeo 121
adeptus 78
ad id loci 131
adjectives used as substantives 74; for adverbs 108, 153; with passive meaning 123 admonere 75
adsentior 150
adultus 90
ad urbem 112
adverbs for adjectives 101, 128
aequa manu 125
agitare 66
agreement 98, 106, 119, 128
agrestis 76
agriculture 71
alenus 120, 126
alii=ceteri 108, 130; alii—pars etc. 66; alius of two 157
aliter=alioquin 130 alliteration xli, 65, 80, 100 anima animus 68; animi redundant 155; in animum inducere 157 annals xi
ante aliquem esse 156
antecapere 158
antequam 73
apud xxxiii
arbiter 98
arcesso accerso 127
archaisms xxix, xxxiii: bene facere 69, cupido 71, expers with abl. 117, honore honestatus 119, hostem ferire 80, -im, adverbs in 72, in animum inducere 157, ita res est 152, iuxta mecum 162, necessitudo 92, neglegeris 146, que—que 82, senati 112, supplicia 82, tempestas 78, tumulti 164
arduus 69
artes 68
aspera 163

attribute in agreement for verbal noun 92 auctor 69
aut 125
authorities for the history xxv. Criticism of, H. Dübi: de Catilinae Sallustiani fontibus ac fide, Bern 1872. G. Thouret: Leipziger Studien I. 305—24 1878. J. Besser: de coniuratione Catilinaria, Neustadt 1880. C. John: passim; etc.
auxisse xxxvi

Bellum in the title 63
belua 65
bene facere 69, bene factum 81, bene polliceri 128
brevity xxxvi

Canere (signa) 163
carptim 72
caterva 89
censeo 150
ceterum xxxiii, 99
ceterus 94
change of tense between historic present and perfect 98 chiasmus 76, 100
civitatium 126
coepi 149
collective nouns with plural verb 79, collective singular hostis, etc. 82 colloquialisms xxx ff: absum a 126, adverbs for adjectives 101, alii=ceteri 108, belli faciundi 105, conlubet 143, cum=quod 148, cupido 71, dignus pro 142, etiam 89, equidem 145, exaequare 69, facinus facere 80, facundus 74, frustra esse 101, gerund, use of 80, habere 85, honore honestatus 119, hostem ferire 80, iuxta mecum 162, multo maxume 119, negotium=res 146, nullus 152, opitulari 117, patrare 97, perditum ire 120, populares 103, portare 77, potiri with gen. and acc. 133, pronoun pleonastic 87, qui=quis 130, quis=quibus 94, sese student praestare 64.—K. Kraut: über das vulgäre Element in der Sprache des Sallustius, Blaubeuren 1881, see also Schmalz, Wölfflin colos 91
concinnity xl, 73
condicio 102
coniurare with inf. 152
conlubet 143
conscripti (patres) 140
conspicor xxxiii
consternere 87
construere 87
consuescere 103
consultare 77
consulto 66
convortere 78
copia with infinitive 94
credo 151
cultus 88, 134
cum prep. 128, 165; conj. 87, 101, 148; cum animo habere xxxiii, cum praesertim 144 cupido 71
cur 143
cura curare 164, curae habere 103
curia 115

Dative 115, 132
degustare 103
deponent participles used passively 79, 135 descensus 161
dextumus xxxiii
dictitare 103
dies 130, 146
dignus 142
dissimulare 132
distribuere 113

diu xxxiii
divina atque humana 86
divitias vincere 101
docere 106
dolet xxxiii
dolus 107
domi nobiles 94
domum vacuam facere 90
double question 104
dubitare with infinitive 90
ductare 85
dum=dummodo 75
duum xxxiii

E (ex) 134
effetus 156
egeo with ablative 66
ego 148, 154
egredior 136
eisdem isdem 126
-ela xxxvi
ellipse xxxviii
eloquens eloquentia 74
ementior 136
eo with comparatives 88
epistolary tenses 156
equidem 144
-ere -erunt 100
esse omitted after putare etc. xxxviii 67 et with consuls' names 92; et enim 101; explanatory 97, 119 etiam 89, 165
evocati 164
exaequare for aequare 70
exagitare 110
exemplum 147
exercere 84
exitium vitae 159
expers 117
expurgare for purgare 70
ex suo numero 116

F alliterated 65
facere with ablative and dative 152 facinus 72, facinus facere 80
facundus facundia 74
falsus xxxv fatigare 86
faucibus urgere 153
feneratores 117
ferire hostem 80
ferre (animus fert) 102
festinare 128
fide (gen.) xxxiii
fiduciam tribuere 118
figura etymologica 80
filii familiarum 130, 142
'final' genitive with participle in -dus 78
flagitia 89
foedus 91, xlii fortuna 68
forus xxxvi
frequentatives 67, 79
frustra esse 101

Gaudia 166
genitives after adjectives 74, the so-called final 78 gerund modal use 80, dative does not govern an accusative 72, passive sense xxxv gluttony 88
graecisms xxxii n gratiâ 104
gratuito 91
graviter habere 143
Greek writers, Sall.'s obligations to 70.—S. Dolega: de Sallustio imitatore Thucydidis Demosthenis aliorumque scriptorum Graecorum, Breslau 1871. G. L. Mollmann: Quatenus Sallustius se ad exemplum Graecorum conformaverit, Königsberg 1878. J. Robolski: Sallustius in conformanda oratione quo iure Thucydidis exemplum secutus esse existimetur, Halle 1881
gregarii 121

Habere xxxv, 67, 84, 85, 121, 143, 163
hendiadys 67, 78, 141 historical errors 95, 102, 107, 109, 110, 112, 115, 128, 129, 132, 153, 160 (bis), 161 historical infinitive xlii, 92, 103, 107, 108, 157 historical present, interchange with past tenses 98; sequence after 127, 131, 116 Histories, Sallust's xxxii, 72; speeches in viii, xii history before Sallust xi homoeoteleuton 85
homo nobilis 134
honestatus 119
hortari 75
hostem ferire 80
hostis 82

Iam primum 89; iam tum 97
ibi=in eis rebus 73
id adeo 121
idoneus 147
igitur, position of 66
ignarus 147
illim xxxiii
-im adverbs in 72 imitators l, 81, 87, 102, 131, 135, 154, 159: see Tacitus imperare 91
imperator 67
in animum inducere 157 incessere 79
incipere with object 99 inconcinnity 126
incruentus 165
indicative in or. obl. 109, 124; in indirect question xxxv inermis (-us) 165
inesse 91
infestus 90
infinitive as object 90, future indeclinable xxxv in fuga 161
in manu (manibus) 100
innocentia 86
innoxius 123, 127
inquilinus 115
intellegerint 146
intentus with dative and ablative 69 interrogative double 102, 104
invadere 68, 84
ipse 99
ire with supine 120
isdem eisdem 126
ita est 143, ita res est 152
-ium 126
iuventus 73
iuxta 69, 122; iuxta mecum 162

Labos (or) 91
laetari with object 147
laetitia 165
legio 156
lex Cornelia 122
Poetelia et Papiria 117
Porcia 145
Sempronia 145
Valeria 117, 145
libertus libertinus 136
loci (plur.) xxxiii, (gen.) 131 longe with comparatives 119, longius of time 110 luctus 165
luculentus 114
ludificare xxxiv

Machinatus 135
maeror 165
magis omitted 82
magistratus minores 113
malle with accusative 94
malum xxxiv manus 100 maria consternere 87 maria montesque polliceri 104
mentiri with acc. 134
-met 99
metaphor xli
militaris 165
mixture of tense 118
modestiae parcere 89

modo xxxiv montes subvortere 87
mortalis 66
mos est ut 112
movere 102, movere iocum 107
multitudines 137
multo with superlatives 119
multus 89, 99, xxxii

Namque before consonants 120
nationes 83
nave (gnave) xxxiv
ne=nedum 86, =dummodo ne 152
necessitudo=necessitas 92
neglegeris 146
negotium 146, negotiosus 81
neque—neque 67, 85, 90, 162
nequitur xxxiv neuter referring to other genders 65, 75, 83; to res 119
nihil 133, nihil reliqui facere 85 nisi xxxiv nomine 119, 123
novare 124
nullo (dative?) xxxiv nullus 152

Obsequela xxxvi obstare 153
ocissume xxxiv odos 91
omnis 65, 114
'only' 77, 116, 159
opitulari 117
order of words, of adjective for adverb 108; ego 148, 154; igitur 66; ita est 143; in MSS xliv; in V xlix, 148, 154; of patres conscripti 140; of postquam-clause 160; of quam 78; 105
oreretur oriretur 118
oriri 147
ortus ab or ex 114
ostentare xxxiii

Paratus 114
pars—alii etc. 66, with plural verb 79
par similisque 89
participles used as substantives 74, 92, 134; aoristic use of 158; participle and adjective with one subst. 105 partim 136
partio xxxiv patere 83, 162
patrare 97
patres 77; patres conscripti 140
patria potestas 125, 130
patronus 127
paululum modo 152
pavere with accusative 113
pedarii 151
pedibus ire in sententiam 138
penes 109
pensi 75 per 88
percupidus xxxvi
perditum ire 120
perfect of custom 84, for pluperfect 92 pergere xxxiv pergnarus xxx n periculum 67, 100
petitio 95
phrase, a parliamentary 142 plebs plebes 121, with plural verb 79
pleonasm 87, 155
plerusque 94, 104; plerique 148 pluperfect for perfect 97, 105, 120, 138 plural by writer speaking of himself 81
polliceri bene 128
pontifex maxumus 135
popularis 103, xxx populus 83
porro 132
portatio 128

post 74, 123
postquam 77, 83, 160
postremo 148
postridie 134
potiri 133
praecepio? 128
praenomen 73
praeter 119
prepositions coupling nouns 99, with town-names 127 priusquam 73
privatim 85, 136
privus xxxvi prolatare 130
promiscuus 86
pronoun pleonastic 87
pronus 65
prope etc. case after 84
propter 164
prosapia xxxiv proscriptio 102
provenire 81
psallere 106
publice 85, 136
pudicitia 86
pudor 86
pugnare for expugnare 80
putare, esse omitted after 67

Quae...arant etc. 68
quaesit quaesitur xxxvi
quam, position of 78
quamquam xxxiii
quamvis 105
que after monosyllabic prepositions 76, "or" 89, que... et xxxiii, que—que 82 queo 135
qui causal with subjunctive 151; = quis 130; awkward reference 94, 133; servitia cuius 160; quis = quibus 94
quicquam (nihil) pensi habere 75 quippe qui 134
quisquam 113, 151
quisque 121
quo with comparatives 65, 116, 122; quo loco 162; quo minus 148, xxxix quousque tandem, humorous imitation of Cicero 100

Ratus 158
recte atque ordine 141
redundancy 149
reliqui 71, nihil reliqui facere 85
res (ita r. est) 152

Sacerdotia 102
saevus 144
Sallustian peculiarities of language 69, 72, 111, 143 etc.; favourite words agitari 66; artes 68; fuere ea tempestate qui 104; invado 68, 84; per 88; tempestas 78, habere etc. xxxix saltare 106
saturnalia 129
scilicet with accusative and infinitive xxxv se ellipse of xxxix secessio 117
senatus: senati 112; sctum ultimum 111; order of proceedings in 137, 138, 150, 151, 155
senectus (adjective) xxxvi sentina 121
sequi 86, 157, 162
servitia...cuius 160
si—si (sin) 152
sicubi 114
sicuti 91, 114
simple verb for compound 70, 80
simul ac 79 singular and plural mixed 81 sinus urbis 154
solitus adjective 137
soluerat xxxvi

speeches in Cat. and Jug. xii; in the Hist. viii, xlviii n: style in xxx spelling xlvii, li strenuissumus 165
studere 64, 144
subigo 83
subjunctive 136, 151
substantives in -tor as adjectives 74 sum, ellipse of parts of xxxviii supine after hortari 75, after ire 120 supplicia 82
supra quam 74, supra ea 71, supra caput esse 152 sustinere 155
suus not referring to subject 103, objective use 143
synesis 91, 94, 104, 128, 160

Tabulae novae 102
tametsi—tamen 98
temperare 86
tempestas=tempus 78
tendere 165
title of the work 63
tolerare 151
-tor, substantives in, used as adjectives 74
toreumata 101
tractare 124
transire (transigere) vitam 68, li tribunate 122, 123
trinundinum 95
-tudo, for -tas 92
tumulti 112, 164
twelve tables 117, 149

Ubi primum 79
ulcisci xxxiv
urbem (ad) 112
usus 79, 134
ut 'as it were' 120; omitted after permittere persuadere 111, 131 uterque with plural verb 135, utrique referring to two persons or things singular 75 utpote qui 151

Vacuus 89, 152
variety xl, 75, 81, 84, 94, 106, 132 varius 74
vas aut vestimentum 148
vastus 74
venenum 84
verbum xxxv
verum contemptuous 106, verum enimvero 69 verus 81
vescor xxxvi
videri 134, ut videbatur 129, videre present after postquam 160 vigilia 73
vincere (divitias) 101
vindices rerum capitalium 159
vir turpissumus 134
virtus 65
vis=vires xxxvi vorsus 159
vorto 78
vostrum 117

Zeugma xxxix, 163

II. INDEX OF NAMES AND AUTHORITIES.

[Phil. = Philologus ; RM. Rheinisches Museum.]

Aborigines 76
Acro 72 (scholia to Horace under that name, 7th cent.)
Allen H. (Alanus) 54 (ed. 1832, also Curae secundae in S., 1865)
Amiternum vii, 76
Annius, Q. A. Chilo 93
Antonius 103, 164
Appian xxv, 105, 106, 110 (bis), 129, 137, 139, 160, 161 (historian, 2nd cent.)
Apuleius 77, 145, 156, xxx n (of Africa, writer of Metamorphoses—a kind of novel, etc., 2nd cent.)
Arpinum 115
Arretium 119
Arusianus Messus 9, 43 (grammarian, 4th cent.)
Asconius ix n, xxiv n, 95, 97, 102 (commentator on Cicero, 1st cent.; references to ed. of Kiessling and Schöll); Pseudo-Asconius on Verrine Orr. 112
Asellio, S. xi
Ateius Philologus xv n, xxix n, xli
Augustine xliv, li, 76, 159 (A.D. 354—430)
Augustus xxix n, 127 (ap. Suet. Aug. 86)
Aurelius Victor 77, 100, 154 (historian, 4th cent. 'Caesares' and ? 'de viris illustribus')
Autronius 93, 95

Bergk T. 20 (Phil. Bd. 29)
Bestia, L. Calpurnius 129
Bezzenberger 54 (ap. Wölfflin, Phil. 1861)
Binsfeld 11 (RM. 1866)

Caesar, C. Julius when born 136; his eloquence 157; is the work an apology for Caesar? xiii, xx; forgives S.? 157—Language, contrasted with Sall.'s 70, 74, 75, 78, 79, 80, 82, 92, 97, 98, 100, 100, 101, 115, 117, 127, 134, 149 etc.: sequence after historical present 127, saevus 144, equidem 145, leges quibus legibus 149, historical infinitive xlii
Caesar, L. Julius 92
Cassius Dio 97, 103, 105, 110, 125, 160, 163, 164 (historian, 2nd cent.)
Cassius, L. C. Longinus 93
Catilina, spelling of 63, derivation 73, descent 73

Catilinarius 63
Cato (the Censor), on agriculture 71; Sall. imitates his language xiii, xxix, 69, 71, 72, 75, 76, 81 (bis), 94, 100, 115, 144, 148, 154, 156, 165.—Brünnert G.: de Sallustio imitatore Catonis Sisennae aliorumque veterum historicorum Romanorum, Jena 1873. See also Deltour Cato (Uticensis), age 156, his eloquence 157, severitas 157, speaking in senate 151, his speech not genuine 154
Catulus 135
Cethegus 93
Charisius 3, 31, 53, 62 (grammarian, 4th cent.)
Cicero, Memoirs xiii, 75; Sall. borrows from his invectives? xiv, xv n, 90, 100, 153; on historians xi, 64; on decorum 91, 106; on another world 144. Language; criticism of words, -ere 100, isdem 126, prosapia, xxxv, ad imperandum xxxvi: Colloquialisms, agitare 66, portare 77, hostem ferire 80, facinus facere 80, pleonastic pronoun 87, quis 94, patrare 97, tute esse 101, opitulari 117, conlubet 143, cum=quod 148; Language contrasted with Sall.'s 66, 68, 71, 75, 78, 82, 83, 86, 92, 99, 114, 115, 118, 119, 120, 127, 133, 134, 149, 156, 157; use of tametsi–tamen 98, equidem 145
Constans L. 92, 144 (see Preface; school ed. 1881)
Cornelius, C. 110
Cornificius (Auctor ad Herennium) 98, 142, 152
Cornificius, Q. 133
Curtius 97, 134 (Q. C. Rufus, historian of Alexander, 1st cent.)

Damasippus 147
Dares 81 (pretended Latin translation of book on fall of Troy by Dares the Phrygian, 5th cent.)
Deltour F. 101 (de Sallustio Catonis imitatore, Paris 1859)
Dicaearchus 76 (fragment preserved by Porphyry, Müller Frag. Hist. Graec. 2. 230)
Dictys 131, 135 (i.e. Septimius, translator (?) of Trojan war by Dictys of Crete, 4th cent.)
Dietsch R. passim (references mostly to critical edition 1859, sometimes to ed. with Latin explanatory notes 1845; text in Teubner's series, 1872)
Diomedes 10, 94 (grammarian of 4th cent.)
Dionysius Halic. 121 (historian abt. B.C. 20)
Döderlein 149 (Phil. 1854), 77
Donatus 86, 103 (commentator on Terence, 4th cent.)

Eussner A. 123 (RM. 1868); 113, 130 (RM. 1872)

Fabia 118
Fabri W. 85, 119 (ed. with German notes, 2nd ed. 1845)
Faesulanum 129
Figulus 92
Flaccus 131
Flaminius 119
Florus xxv, 63, 77, 103, 115, 165 (historian, 2nd cent.)
Freudenberg 11 (ap. Binsfeld)

Fronto xxix n, 66, 81, 91, 162 (2nd cent. teacher of M. Aurelius)
Fulvia 104
Fulvius 125
Fulvius Nobilior 93
Furius 138, 164

Gabinius 94, 129, 153
Gellius 20, 69, 85, 117 (2nd cent.)
Gerlach F. D. 3 (four edd. between 1823—70)
Gronovius J. F. 18, 26 (A.D. 1611—71)
Grunauer E. 59
Gründel C. F. L. 6, 46, 65, 88, 115 (Quaestiones Sallustianae, 1861)
Gruter J. 27, 33 (ed. 1607)

Hagen E. 110, 161 (Untersuchungen über Römische Geschichte I. Catilina, 1854)
Hartel G. 18 (ap. Scheindler)
Haupt M. 120 (Misc. Opusc. I. 149)
Hegesippus 154, 159 (Latin paraphrase of Josephus, 4th cent.)
Hertz M. 154 (Phil. 1857)
Herzog C. G. 79, 97, 144, 163 (ed. 1828 etc.)
Hoffmann E. 116, 118 (Studien auf dem Gebiete der Lat. Syntax 1884 Die Zeitfolge nach dem Praesens historicum u. s. w.) Horace 68, 87, 88, 94, 112, 143, 152
Hyginus 81 (1st cent.?)

Isocrates 70

Jacobs R. passim (school ed., 8th 1881, Berlin Weidmann, revised by H. Wirz)
Jerome 87 (4th cent.)
John C. see xvi n; xx, 96 (also Sallustius über Catilinas Candidatur im Jahre 688, RM. 1876)
Jordan H. passim (two prefaces to text, also Hermes i 229—50, iii 459, v 396, and Kritische Beiträge zur Geschichte der Lateinischen Sprache 1879)
Jugurtha, the style of the xxxiii, 67, 94

Klimscha P. xxx, 147, see xlviii n; 87 (Zeitschrift f. d. österreich. Gymnasien, 1878)
Köchly A. 12 (ap. Wirz, de fide etc.)
Kortte G. (Cortius) xlv, 27, 71, 81 (ed. 1724)
Krämer C. E. 20 (Emendationes Sallustianae, 1875)
Kritz F. passim (large ed. 1828, small 1856)
Kuhlmann L. 17 (de Sallustii codice Parisino 500, 1881)
Kvičala J. 68, 72, 85, 91, 164 (Z. f. d. ö. G. 14. 579)

Laeca, meeting at house of xv, xxiii, 109
Lallier R. 164 (school ed. 1881)
Lenaeus ix n, xxix n.
Lentulus 92
Licinianus G. xiii n
Linker G. 30, 71, 153 (Emendationen zu Sallust auf Grund seiner Quellen und Nachahmer, 1854)
Livy, on Sall. xxxviii n. Language: agreement 66, 77, 80 (bis), 83, 89, 97, 105, 108, 113, 118, 127, 131, 133, 134, 135, 143, 149, 156, 157, 165; difference 79, 82 (bis), 101, 162

Lucceius accuses Cat. xxii, Cic. writes to him on history 72

Macrobius 22 (writer of Saturnalia 4th cent.)
Madvig 72, 121 (emend. Livianae 1877, p. 277); 89 (Adversaria 2. 291, 1873); 80, 87, 101 (Cic. de Fin.)
Manlius, C. 105
Marcius Rex 112
Massilia 118
Merivale C. 102, 158, 163, (school ed. 1852, 1883)
Metellus Celer 113
Metellus Creticus 112
Meusel H. passim (Jahresbericht in Zeitschrift f. d. Gymnasialwesen, 1880)
Milo viii n
Mommsen H. xiii, xix, 73, 95
Mulvius Pons 131
Murena 128; Cic.'s speech for, xvii, xix

Nauck C. W. 64, 67 (Das Vorwort zur Cat. Verschwörung übersetzt u. erklärt, 1850)
Nero, Ti. Claudius 139
Nipperdey C. 83 (variarum obs. antiquitatis Rom. cap. I, 18) 104, 118, 119, 122 (RM. 1874)
Nonius Marcellus 2, 20, 25, 67 (grammarian, 3rd cent.)

Ovid 77, 106

P, the MS xlvi ff, 63, 95, 139, 164
Palmieri J. (Palmerius) 109 (A.D. 1580)
Piso 102
Pistoria 160, 161, 163
Plato ix, 65
Plautus quoted 78, 87, 101, 119, 152, 153, 166; referred to xxxiii ff, 89 (bis), 109, 112, 117, 145, 157, 162
Plutarch xiv, xxv, 74, 103, 104, 105, 110, 130, 138, 154
Pollio Asinius xxix n, xli, 99
Pompeius ix, 123, 125, 156
Pompeius Rufus 113
Pomptinus 131
Poppo xxxii n
Priscianus 2, 4, 9, 10, 18, 34, 53, 56, 63, 119, 135 (grammarian, 6th cent.)
Probus, M. Valerius 74 (grammarian, 1st cent.: the 'Probus' of p. 13 belongs perhaps to 3rd cent.)
Putsche 12, 41 (ap. Havercamp's variorum ed., 1742)

Quintilian xxix n, xxxvi n, xxxvii, xl, 63, 64, 74, 89, 97, 112, 157

Rauchenstein R. 23, 26 (ap. Wirz)
Rhodes 141
Ritschl F. 104, 124, 156, 162 (RM. 1866)
Roth C. L. xliv (RM. 1854)

Sanga 127
Sauppe H. 86 (ap. Wirz)
Scaliger xxxvi
Scheindler A. 15, 20, 42 (text, 1883)
Schenkl K. 29 (Phil. 1869)
Schmalz J. H. passim (school ed. 1882)
Schmidt 3 (Phil. Bd. 10)
Schöll R. 147, 149 (Hermes, 1876)
Selling C. 20, 53, 83 (Emend. Sall. 1835)
Sempronia 106
Seneca (elder) xxxvi, xxxviii n; (younger) xxxvi, 97
Septimius—see Dictys
Sergius 73, 115

Servius 2, 7, 16 (commentator on Virgil, 4th cent.)
Silanus 137, 138
Simcox G. A. 64, 74 (Hist. of Latin Literature)
Sisenna, L. Cornelius xi, 64, 72, 75, 112, 162
Sittius 102
Spinther 133
Statilius 94, 129, 153
Suetonius xxv, 64, 90, 97, 111, 127, 135, 138, 155
Sulla, P. Cornelius 93, 95, 96
Sullae 93

Tacitus praises Sall. xxxviii n; imitates Sall. xxxii, 74, 86, 94, 106, 130; agreement 66, 71, 81, 82, 83, 149, 165; difference 73, 160
Terence quoted 64, 68, 103, 104, 109, 142, 157; referred to 100, 145
Terracinensis 132
Thucydides borrowed from xii, xiii, xxxii, xxxvii, 70, 77, 79, 82, 123, 124
Torquatus 153, 82
Tullianum 158

Uber F. 20, 57 (Quaestiones aliquot Sallustianae grammaticae et criticae, 1882)
Umbrenus 126

V, the MS xlviii, 91, 119, 153, 154 (bis)
Valerius Maximus 88, 115, 125, 154, 159
Vargunteius 93, 110
Varro 88, 130, 139, 149
Velleius 74, 88, 122 (bis), 150
Vestae sacerdos 90, 118
Vitruvius xxx n, 70, 76 (writer de architectura 1st cent.)
Vogel F. 154, 165 (Ὁμοιότητες Sallustianae, Acta sem. philologici Erlangensis, 1878)
Vopiscus 81 (historian, 4th cent.)

Wagner W. 20, 42, 19 (RM. 1872)
Wecklein N. 143 (RM. 1878)
Weidemann T. 54
Weinhold A. 28 (Phil. 1872)
Wirz H. passim (see Jacobs; and, Catilina's u. Cicero's Bewerbung um das Consulat f. das Jahr 63, 1864; de fide ac auctoritate P[1], 1867; Zeitschrift f. d. Gymnialwesen 1877, review of Jordan's text) Wölfflin E. xxx (Phil. 34, Bemerkungen über das Vulgärlatein); 12 (Jahresbericht ed. Bursian 1873); 63, 73 (Archiv. f. lateinische Lexikographie, see Pref.); on the MSS in Phil. 1861
Wörner E. 49 (Neue Jahrbücher, 1876)

Zumpt A. W. 109 (De imperatoris Augusti die natali etc., 1875)

CAMBRIDGE: PRINTED BY C. J. CLAY, M.A. & SON, AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

MACMILLAN'S CLASSICAL SERIES FOR COLLEGES AND SCHOOLS.

EDITED WITH INTRODUCTORY NOTES. Fcp. 8vo.

Æschines.—In Ctesiphontem. Edited by Rev. T. GWATKIN. [In the Press.

Æschylus.—Persæ. Edited by A. O. PRICKARD, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Catullus.—Select Poems. Edited by F. P. SIMPSON, B.A. 5s.
The Text of this Edition is carefully adapted to School Use.

Cicero.—The Catiline Orations. From the German of KARL HALM. Edited, with Additions, by A. S. WILKINS, M.A., LL.D. 3s. 6d.
Pro Lege Manilia. Edited, after HALM, by Professor A. S. WILKINS, M.A. 3s. 6d.
The Second Philippic Oration. From the German of KARL HALM. Edited, with Corrections and Additions, by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR. 5s.
Pro Roscio Amerino. Edited, after HALM, by E. H. DONKIN, M.A. 4s. 6d.
Pro P. Sestio. Edited by Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D. 5s.

Demosthenes.—De Corona. Edited by B. DRAKE, M.A. 4s. 6d.
Adversus Leptinem. Ed. by Rev. J. R. KING, M.A. 4s. 6d.
The First Philippic. Edited, after C. REHDANTZ, by Rev. T. GWATKIN, M.A. 2s. 6d.

Euripides.—Hippolytus. Edited by J. P. MAHAFFY, M.A., and J. B. BURY. 3s. 6d.
Medea. Edited by A. W. VERRALL, M.A. 3s. 6d.
Iphigenia in Tauris. Edited by E. B. ENGLAND, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Homer.—Iliad. Books I., IX., XI., XVI.—XXIV. The Story of Achilles. Edited by the late J. H. PRATT, M.A.; and WALTER LEAF, M.A. 6s.
Odyssey. Books IX.—XII. The Narrative of Odysseus. Edited by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR. Part I. 3s.
Odyssey. Books XXI.—XXIV. The Triumph of Odysseus. Edited by S. G. HAMILTON, B.A. 3s. 6d.

Horace.—The Odes. Edited by T. E. PAGE, M.A. 6s. (Books I., II., III., and IV., separately, 2s. each.)
The Satires. Edited by Professor ARTHUR PALMER, M.A. 6s.
The Epistles and Ars Poetica. Edited by Professor A. S. WILKINS, M.A., LL.D. [In the Press.

Juvenal.—Thirteen Satires. Edited, for the Use of Schools, by E. G. HARDY, M.A. 5s.
The Text of this Edition is carefully adapted to School Use.
Select Satires. Edited by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR, X. and XI. 3s. 6d. XII.—XVI. 4s. 6d.

Livy.—Books II. and III. Edited by Rev. H. M. STEPHENSON, M.A. 5s.
Books XXI. and XXII. Edited by the Rev. W. W. CAPES, M.A. 5s.

MACMILLAN'S CLASSICAL SERIES.

Lysias.—Select Orations. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A. 6s.

Martial.—Select Epigrams. Edited by Rev. H. M. STEPHENSON, M.A. 6s.

Ovid.—Fasti. Edited by G. H. HALLAM, M.A. 5s.

Heroidum Epistulæ XIII. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Metamorphoses. Books XIII. and XIV. Edited by C. SIMMONS, M.A. [In the Press.

Plautus.—Miles Gloriosus. Edited by R. Y. TYRRELL, M.A. 5s.

Pliny.—Letters. Book III. Edited by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR. With Life of Pliny by G. H. RENDALL, M.A. 5s.

Plutarch.—Life of Themistokles. Edited by Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D. 5s.

Propertius.—Select Poems. Ed. by J. P. POSTGATE, M.A. 6s.

Sallust.—Catilina and Jugurtha. Edited by C. MERIVALE, D.D., Dean of Ely. New Edition, 4s. 6d.; or, separately, 2s. 6d. each.

Bellum Catulinae. Edited by A. M. COOK, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Tacitus.—Agricola and Germania. Edited by A. J. CHURCH, M.A.; and W. J. BRODRIBB, M.A., Translators of Tacitus. New Edition, 3s. 6d.; or, separately, 2s. each.

The Annals. Book VI. By the same Editors. 2s. 6d.

Terence.—Hauton Timorumenos. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A. 3s. With Translation, 4s. 6d.

Phormio. Edited by Rev. JOHN BOND, M.A., and A. S. WALPOLE, B.A. 4s. 6d.

Thucydides. Book IV. Edited by C. E. GRAVES, M.A. 5s.

Books I., II., III. and V. [In preparation.

Books VI. and VII. The Sicilian Expedition. Edited by the Rev. PERCIVAL FROST, M.A. Map. 5s.

Virgil.—Æneid. Books II. and III. The Narrative of Æneas. Edited by E. W. HOWSON, M.A. 3s.

Xenophon.—Hellenica, Books I. and II. Edited by H. HAILSTONE, B.A. With Map. 4s. 6d.

Cyropædia. Books VII. and VIII. Edited by ALFRED GOODWIN, M.A. 5s.

Memorabilia Socratis. Edited by A. R. CLUER, B.A. 6s.

The Anabasis. Books I.—IV. Edited by Professors W. W. GOODWIN and J. W. WHITE. Adapted to Goodwin's Greek Grammar. With a Map. 5s.

Xenophon.—Hiero. Ed. by Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D. 3s. 6d.

Oeconomicus. By the same Editor. [Nearly Ready.

 Other Volumes will follow.

MACMILLAN AND CO., LONDON.

A CATALOGUE

OF

CLASSICAL WORKS

PUBLISHED BY

MACMILLAN AND CO., LONDON,

COMPRISING

1. ELEMENTARY CLASSICS, for Beginners.
2. THE CLASSICAL SERIES, for Schools and Colleges.
3. THE CLASSICAL LIBRARY, for Higher Students
   (a) TEXTS; (b) TRANSLATIONS.
4. WORKS ON GRAMMAR, COMPOSITION, & PHILOLOGY.
5. WORKS ON ANTIQUITIES, ANCIENT HISTORY, & ANCIENT PHILOSOPHY.

CONTENTS.

ELEMENTARY CLASSICS 3
CLASSICAL SERIES 6
CLASSICAL LIBRARY—
(1) Texts; (2) Commentaries and Translations 11
GRAMMAR, COMPOSITION, and PHILOLOGY 15
ANTIQUITIES, ANCIENT HISTORY, and PHILOSOPHY 20
MODERN LANGUAGES—
English 22
French 23
German 23
MACMILLAN'S FOREIGN SCHOOL CLASSICS—
French 24
German 24

29 AND 30, BEDFORD STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C., April, 1884.

ELEMENTARY CLASSICS.

18mo, Eighteenpence each.

THIS SERIES FALLS INTO TWO CLASSES—

(1) First Reading Books for Beginners, provided not only with Introductions and Notes, but with Vocabularies, and in some cases with Exercises based upon the Text.

(2) Stepping-stones to the study of particular authors, intended for more advanced students who are beginning to read such authors as Terence, Plato, the Attic Dramatists, and the harder parts of Cicero, Horace, Virgil, and Thucydides.

These are provided with Introductions and Notes, but no Vocabulary. The Publishers have been led to provide the more strictly Elementary Books with Vocabularies by the representations of many teachers, who hold that beginners do not understand the use of a Dictionary, and of others who, in the case of middle-class schools where the cost of books is a serious consideration, advocate the Vocabulary system on grounds of economy. It is hoped that the two parts of the Series, fitting into one another, may together fulfil all the requirements of Elementary and Preparatory Schools, and the Lower Forms of Public Schools.

The following Elementary Books, with Introductions, Notes, and Vocabularies, and in some cases with Exercises, are either ready or in preparation:—

Cæsar.—THE GALLIC WAR. BOOK I. Edited by A. S. WALPOLE, M.A. [Ready.

THE INVASION OF BRITAIN. Being Selections from Books IV. and V. of the "De Bello Gallico." Adapted for the use of Beginners. With Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by W. WELCH, M.A., and C. G. DUFFIELD, M.A. [In the press.

THE GALLIC WAR. BOOKS II. AND III. Edited by the Rev. W. G. RUTHERFORD, M.A., LL.D., Head-Master of Westminster School. [Ready.

THE GALLIC WAR. SCENES FROM BOOKS V. AND VI. Edited by C. COLBECK, M.A., Assistant-Master at Harrow; formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. [Ready.

Cicero.—DE SENECTUTE. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A., late Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. [In preparation.

DE AMICITIA. By the same Editor. [In preparation.

STORIES FROM ROMAN HISTORY. Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by the Rev. G. E. JEANS, M.A., Fellow of Hertford College, Oxford, and A. V. JONES, M.A., Assistant-Masters at Haileybury College. [In the press.

Eutropius.—Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by WILLIAM WELCH, M.A., and C. G. DUFFIELD, M.A., Assistant-Masters at Surrey County School, Cranleigh. [Ready.

Greek Testament.—SELECTIONS FROM THE GOSPELS. Edited by Rev. A. CALVERT, late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. [In preparation.

Homer.—ILIAD. BOOK I. Edited by Rev. JOHN BOND, M.A., and A. S. WALPOLE, M.A. [Nearly Ready.

ILIAD. BOOK XVIII. THE ARMS OF ACHILLES. Edited by S. R. JAMES, M.A., Assistant-Master at Eton College. [Ready. VOCABULARY in preparation.

ODYSSEY. BOOK I. Edited by Rev. JOHN BOND, M.A., and A. S. WALPOLE, M.A. [Ready.

Horace.—ODES. BOOKS I.—IV. Edited by T. E. PAGE, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge; Assistant-Master at the Charterhouse. Each 1*s.* 6*d.*
[Ready. VOCABULARIES to Books II. and III. in preparation.

Livy.—BOOK I. Edited by H. M. STEPHENSON, M.A., Head Master of St. Peter's School, York. [Ready.
THE HANNIBALIAN WAR. Being part of the XXI. AND XXII. BOOKS OF LIVY, adapted for the use of beginners, by G. C. MACAULAY, M.A., Assistant-Master at Rugby; formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. [Ready.
THE SIEGE OF SYRACUSE. Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by GEORGE RICHARDS, M.A. [In the press.

Ovid.—SELECTIONS. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A., late Fellow and Assistant-Tutor of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. [Ready.

Phædrus.—SELECT FABLES. Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by A. S. WALPOLE, M.A. [Nearly ready.

Thucydides.—THE RISE OF THE ATHENIAN EMPIRE. BOOK I. cc. LXXXIX. — CXVII. AND CXXVIII. — CXXXVIII. Edited with Notes, Vocabulary and Exercises, by F. H. COLSON, M.A., Senior Classical Master at Bradford Grammar School; Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. [Ready.

Virgil.—ÆNEID. BOOK I. Edited by A. S. WALPOLE, M.A. [Ready.
ÆNEID. BOOK V. Edited by Rev. A. CALVERT, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. [Ready.
SELECTIONS. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A. [Ready.

Xenophon.—ANABASIS. BOOK I. Edited by A. S. WALPOLE, M.A. [Ready.

The following more advanced Books, with Introductions and Notes, but no Vocabulary, are either ready, or in preparation:—

Cicero.—SELECT LETTERS. Edited by Rev. G. E. JEANS, M.A., Fellow of Hertford College, Oxford, and Assistant-Master at Haileybury College. [Ready.

Euripides.—HECUBA. Edited by Rev. JOHN BOND, M.A. and A. S. WALPOLE, M.A. [Ready.

Herodotus.—SELECTIONS FROM BOOKS VII. AND VIII. THE EXPEDITION OF XERXES. Edited by A. H. COOKE, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of King's College, Cambridge. [Ready.

Horace. — SELECTIONS FROM THE SATIRES AND EPISTLES. Edited by Rev. W. J. V. BAKER, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge; Assistant-Master at Marlborough. [Ready.

SELECT EPODES AND ARS POETICA. Edited by H. A. DALTON, M.A., late Senior Student of Christchurch; Assistant-Master at Marlborough. [In the press.

Livy.—THE LAST TWO KINGS OF MACEDON. SCENES FROM THE LAST DECADE OF LIVY. Selected and Edited by F. H. RAWLINS, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge; and Assistant-Master at Eton College. [In preparation.

Plato.—EUTHYPHRO AND MENEXENUS. Edited by C. E. GRAVES, M.A., Classical Lecturer and late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. [Ready.

Terence.—SCENES FROM THE ANDRIA. Edited by F. W. CORNISH, M.A., Assistant-Master at Eton College. [Ready.

The Greek Elegiac Poets. — FROM CALLINUS TO CALLIMACHUS. Selected and Edited by Rev. HERBERT KYNASTON, M.A., Principal of Cheltenham College, and formerly Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. [Ready.

Thucydides.—BOOK IV. CHS. I.—XI.I. THE CAPTURE OF SPHACTERIA. Edited by C. E. GRAVES, M.A. [Ready.

Virgil.—GEORGICS. BOOK II. Edited by Rev. J. H. SKRINE, M.A., late Fellow of Merton College, Oxford; Assistant-Master at Uppingham. [Ready.

 Other Volumes to follow.

CLASSICAL SERIES FOR COLLEGES AND SCHOOLS.

Fcap. 8vo.

Being select portions of Greek and Latin authors, edited with Introductions and Notes, for the use of Middle and Upper forms of Schools, or of candidates for Public Examinations at the Universities and elsewhere.

Æschines.— IN CTESIPHONTEM. Edited by Rev. T. GWATKIN, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. [In the press.

Æschylus. — PERSÆ. Edited by A. O. PRICKARD, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of New College, Oxford. With Map. 3s. 6d.

Catullus.—SELECT POEMS. Edited by F. P. SIMPSON, B.A., late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford. New and Revised Edition. 5s. The Text of this Edition is carefully adapted to School use.

Cicero.—THE CATILINE ORATIONS. From the German of KARL HALM. Edited, with Additions, by A. S. WILKINS, M.A., Professor of Latin at the Owens College, Manchester. New Edition. 3s. 6d.

PRO LEGE MANILIA. Edited after HALM by Professor A. S. WILKINS, M.A. 3s. 6d.

THE SECOND PHILIPPIC ORATION. From the German of KARL HALM. Edited, with Corrections and Additions, by JOHN E. B. MAYOR, Professor of Latin in the University of Cambridge, and Fellow of St. John's College. New Edition, revised. 5s.

PRO ROSCIO AMERINO. Edited, after HALM, by E. H. DONKIN, M.A., late Scholar of Lincoln College, Oxford; Assistant-Master at Sherborne School. 4s. 6d.

PRO P. SESTIO. Edited by Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; and late Classical Examiner to the University of London. 5s.

Demosthenes.—DE CORONA. Edited by B. DRAKE, M.A., late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. New and revised Edition. 4s. 6d.

ADVERSUS LEPTINEM. Edited by Rev. J. R. KING, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Oriel College, Oxford. 4s. 6d.

THE FIRST PHILIPPIC. Edited, after C. REHDANTZ, by Rev. T. GWATKIN, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 2s. 6d.

Euripides.—BACCHAE. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A., Assistant-Master at Eton College. [In preparation.

HIPPOLYTUS. Edited by J. P. MAHAFFY, M.A., Fellow and Professor of Ancient History in Trinity College, Dublin, and J. B. BURY, Scholar of Trinity College, Dublin. 3s. 6d.

Euripides.—MEDEA. Edited by A. W. VERRALL, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, Cambridge. 3*s.* 6*d.*

IPHIGENIA IN TAURIS. Edited by E. B. ENGLAND, M.A., Lecturer at the Owens College, Manchester. 4*s.* 6*d.*

Herodotus.—BOOKS V. AND VI. Edited by Rev. A. H. COOKE, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge.
[In preparation.

BOOKS VII. AND VIII. THE INVASION OF GREECE BY XERXES. Edited by THOMAS CASE, M.A., formerly Fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford. [In preparation.

Homer.—ILIAD. BOOKS I., IX., XI., XVI.—XXIV. THE STORY OF ACHILLES. Edited by the late J. H. PRATT, M.A., and WALTER LEAF, M.A., Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. 6*s.*

ODYSSEY. BOOKS IX.—XII. THE NARRATIVE OF ODYSSEUS. Edited by Prof. JOHN E. B. MAYOR. Part I. 3*s.*

ODYSSEY. BOOKS XXI.—XXIV. THE TRIUMPH OF ODYSSEUS. Edited by S. G. HAMILTON, B.A., Fellow of Hertford College, Oxford. 3*s.* 6*d.*

Horace.—THE ODES. Edited by T. E. PAGE, M.A., formerly Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge; Assistant-Master at Charterhouse. 6*s.* (BOOKS I., II., III., and IV. separately, 2*s.* each.)

THE SATIRES. Edited by ARTHUR PALMER, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin; Professor of Latin in the University of Dublin. 6*s.*

THE EPISTLES AND ARS POETICA. Edited by Professor A. S. WILKINS, M.A. [In the press.

Juvenal. THIRTEEN SATIRES. Edited, for the Use of Schools, by E. G. HARDY, M.A., Head-Master of Grantham Grammar School; late Fellow of Jesus College, Oxford. 5*s.*
The Text of this Edition is carefully adapted to School use.

SELECT SATIRES. Edited by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR. X. AND XI. 3*s.* 6*d.* XII.—XVI. 4*s.* 6*d.*

Livy.—BOOKS II. AND III. Edited by Rev. H. M. STEPHENSON, M.A., Head-Master of St. Peter's School, York. 5*s.*

BOOKS XXI. AND XXII. Edited by the Rev. W. W. CAPES, M.A., Reader in Ancient History at Oxford. With Maps. 5*s.*

BOOKS XXIII AND XXIV. Edited by G. C. MACAULAY, M.A., Assistant-Master at Rugby. [In preparation.

Lucretius. BOOKS I.—III. Edited by J. H. WARBURTON LEE, M.A., late Scholar of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and Assistant-Master at Rossall. [In preparation.

Lysias.—SELECT ORATIONS. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A., Assistant-Master at Eton College. 6*s.*

Martial. — SELECT EPIGRAMS. Edited by Rev. H. M. STEPHENSON, M.A. 6*s.*

Ovid.—FASTI. Edited by G. H. HALLAM, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, and Assistant-Master at Harrow. With Maps. 5*s.*

HEROIDUM EPISTULÆ XIII. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A. 4*s.* 6*d.*

METAMORPHOSES. BOOKS XIII. AND XIV. Edited by C. SIMMONS, M.A. [In the press.

Plato.—MENO. Edited by E. S. THOMPSON, M.A., Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge. [In preparation.

APOLOGY AND CRITO. Edited by F. J. H. JENKINSON, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. [In preparation.

THE REPUBLIC. BOOKS I.—V. Edited by T. H. WARREN, M.A., Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford. [In preparation.

Plautus.—MILES GLORIOSUS. Edited by R. Y. TYRRELL, M.A., Fellow and Professor of Greek in Trinity College, Dublin. 5*s.*

Pliny.—LETTERS. BOOK III. Edited by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR. With Life of Pliny by G. H. RENDALL, M.A. 5*s.*

Plutarch.—LIFE OF THEMISTOKLES. Edited by Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D. 5*s.*

Propertius.—SELECT POEMS. Edited by Professor J. P. POSTGATE, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 6*s.*

Sallust.—CATILINA AND JUGURTHA. Edited by C. MERIVALE, D.D., Dean of Ely. New Edition, carefully revised and enlarged, 4*s.* 6*d.* Or separately, 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

CATILINA. Edited by A. M. COOK, M.A., Assistant-Master at St. Paul's School. [In the press.

Sophocles.—ANTIGONE. Edited by Rev. JOHN BOND, M.A., and A. S. WALPOLE, M.A. [In preparation.

Tacitus.—AGRICOLA AND GERMANIA. Edited by A. J. CHURCH, M.A., and W. J. BRODRIBB, M.A., Translators of Tacitus. New Edition, 3*s.* 6*d.* Or separately, 2*s.* each.

THE ANNALS. BOOK VI. By the same Editors. 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE HISTORY. BOOKS I. AND II. Edited by A. D. GODLEY, M.A. [In preparation.

THE ANNALS. BOOKS I. AND II. Edited by J. S. REID, M.A. [In preparation.

Terence.—HAUTON TIMORUMENOS. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A. 3*s.* With Translation, 4*s.* 6*d.*

PHORMIO. Edited by Rev. JOHN BOND, M.A., and A. S. WALPOLE, B.A. 4*s.* 6*d.*

Thucydides. BOOK IV. Edited by C. E. GRAVES, M.A., Classical Lecturer, and late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 5*s.*

BOOKS I. II. III. AND V. By the same Editor. To be published separately. [In preparation.

BOOKS VI. AND VII. THE SICILIAN EXPEDITION. Edited by the Rev. PERCIVAL FROST, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. New Edition, revised and enlarged, with Map. 5*s.*

Virgil.—ÆNEID. BOOKS II. AND III. THE NARRATIVE OF ÆNEAS. Edited by E. W. HOWSON, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and Assistant-Master at Harrow. 3*s.*

Xenophon.—HELLENICA, BOOKS I. AND II. Edited by H. HAILSTONE, B.A., late Scholar of Peterhouse, Cambridge. With Map. 4*s.* 6*d.*

CYROPÆDIA. BOOKS VII. AND VIII. Edited by ALFRED GOODWIN, M.A., Professor of Greek in University College, London. 5*s.*

MEMORABILIA SOCRATIS. Edited by A. R. CLUER, B.A. Balliol College, Oxford. 6*s.*

THE ANABASIS. BOOKS I.—IV. Edited by Professors W. W. GOODWIN and J. W. WHITE. Adapted to Goodwin's Greek Grammar. With a Map. 5*s.*

Xenophon.—HIERO. Edited by Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D. 3*s.* 6*d.*

OECONOMICUS. By the same Editor. [Nearly ready.

 Other Volumes will follow.

CLASSICAL LIBRARY.

(1) Texts, Edited with Introductions and Notes, for the use of Advanced Students. (2) Commentaries and Translations.

Æschylus.—THE EUMENIDES. The Greek Text, with Introduction, English Notes, and Verse Translation. By BERNARD DRAKE, M.A., late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. 8vo. 5*s.*

AGAMEMNON, CHOEPHORŒ, AND EUMENIDES. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by A. O. PRICKARD, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of New College, Oxford. 8vo. [In preparation.

AGAMEMNO. Emendavit DAVID S. MARGOLIOUTH, Coll. Nov. Oxon. Soc. Demy 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Antoninus, Marcus Aurelius.—BOOK IV. OF THE MEDITATIONS. The Text Revised, with Translation and Notes, by HASTINGS CROSSLEY, M.A., Professor of Greek in Queen's College, Belfast. 8vo. 6*s.*

Aristotle.—THE METAPHYSICS. BOOK I. Translated by a Cambridge Graduate. 8vo. 5*s.* [Book II. in preparation.

THE POLITICS. Edited, after SUSEMIHL, by R. D. HICKS, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. [In the press.

THE POLITICS. Translated by Rev. J. E C. WELLDON, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and Master of Dulwich College. Crown 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

THE RHETORIC. By the same Translator. [In preparation.

AN INTRODUCTION TO ARISTOTLE'S RHETORIC. With Analysis, Notes, and Appendices. By E. M. COPE, Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. 14*s.*

THE SOPHISTICI ELENCHI. With Translation and Notes by E. POSTE, M.A., Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.*

Aristophanes.—THE BIRDS. Translated into English Verse, with Introduction, Notes, and Appendices, by B. H. KENNEDY, D.D., Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6*s*. Help Notes to the same, for the use of Students, 1*s*. 6*d*.

Attic Orators.—FROM ANTIPHON TO ISAEOS. By R. C. JEBB, M.A., LL.D., Professor of Greek in the University of Glasgow. 2 vols. 8vo. 25*s*.

SELECTIONS FROM ANTIPHON, ANDOKIDES, LYSIAS, ISOKRATES, AND ISÆOS. Edited, with Notes, by Professor JEBB. Being a companion volume to the preceding work. 8vo. 12*s*. 6*d*.

Babrius. Edited, with Introductory Dissertations, Critical Notes, Commentary and Lexicon. By Rev. W. GUNION RUTHERFORD, M.A., LL.D., Head-Master of Westminster School. 8vo. 12*s*. 6*d*.

Cicero.—THE ACADEMICA. The Text revised and explained by J. S. REID, M.L., Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge. New Edition. With Translation. 8vo. [In the press.

THE ACADEMICS. Translated by J. S. REID, M.L. 8vo. 5*s*. 6*d*.

SELECT LETTERS. After the Edition of ALBERT WATSON, M.A. Translated by G. E. JEANS, M.A., Fellow of Hertford College, Oxford, and Assistant-Master at Haileybury. 8vo. 10*s*. 6*d*.

(See also Classical Series.)

Euripides.—MEDEA. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by A. W. VERRALL, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. 7*s*. 6*d*.

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF EURIPIDES. By Professor J. P. MAHAFFY. Fcap. 8vo. 4*s*. 6*d*. (Classical Writers Series.)

(See also Classical Series.)

Herodotus.—BOOKS I.—III. THE ANCIENT EMPIRES OF THE EAST. Edited, with Notes, Introductions, and Appendices, by A. H. SAYCE, Deputy-Professor of Comparative Philology, Oxford; Honorary LL.D., Dublin. Demy 8vo. 16*s*.

BOOKS IV.—IX. Edited by REGINALD W. MACAN, M.A., Lecturer in Ancient History at Brasenose College, Oxford. 8vo. [In preparation.

Homer.—THE ILIAD. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by WALTER LEAF, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and the late J. H. PRATT, M.A. 8vo. [In preparation.

THE ILIAD. Translated into English Prose. By ANDREW LANG, M.A., WALTER LEAF, M.A., and ERNEST MYERS, M.A. Crown 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

THE ODYSSEY. Done into English by S. H. BUTCHER, M A., Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh, and ANDREW LANG, M.A., late Fellow of Merton College, Oxford. Fourth Edition, revised and corrected. Crown 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF HOMER. By the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P. 18mo. 1*s.* (Literature Primers.)

HOMERIC DICTIONARY. For Use in Schools and Colleges. Translated from the German of Dr. G. AUTENRIETH, with Additions and Corrections, by R. P. KEEP, Ph.D. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

(See also Classical Series.)

Horace.—THE WORKS OF HORACE RENDERED INTO ENGLISH PROSE. With Introductions, Running Analysis, Notes, &c. By J. LONSDALE, M.A., and S. LEE, M.A. (Globe Edition.) 3*s.* 6*d.*

(See also Classical Series.)

Juvenal.—THIRTEEN SATIRES OF JUVENAL. With a Commentary. By JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Professor of Latin in the University of Cambridge. Second Edition, enlarged. Crown 8vo. Vol. I. 7*s.* 6*d.* Vol. II. 10*s.* 6*d.*

THIRTEEN SATIRES. Translated into English after the Text of J. E. B. MAYOR by HERBERT STRONG, M.A., Professor of Latin, and ALEXANDER LEEPER, M.A., Warden of Trinity College, in the University of Melbourne. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

(See also Classical Series.)

Livy. BOOKS XXI.—XXV. Translated by ALFRED JOHN CHURCH, M.A., of Lincoln College, Oxford, Professor of Latin, University College, London, and WILLIAM JACKSON BRODRIBB, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF LIVY. By Rev. W. W. CAPES, Reader in Ancient History at Oxford. Fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.* (Classical Writers Series.)

(See also Classical Series.)

Martial.—BOOKS I. AND II. OF THE EPIGRAMS. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Professor J. E. B. MAYOR, M.A. 8vo. [In the press.

(See also Classical Series.)

Phrynichus.—THE NEW PHRYNICHUS; being a Revised Text of the Ecloga of the Grammarian Phrynichus. With Introduction and Commentary by Rev. W. GUNION RUTHERFORD, M.A., LL.D., Head Master of Westminster School. 8vo. 18*s.*

Pindar.—THE EXTANT ODES OF PINDAR. Translated into English, with an Introduction and short Notes, by ERNEST MYERS, M.A., late Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 5*s.*

Plato.—PHÆDO. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Appendices, by R. D. ARCHER-HIND, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.*

PHILEBUS. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by HENRY JACKSON, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. [In preparation.

THE REPUBLIC OF PLATO. Translated into English, with an Analysis and Notes, by J. LL. DAVIES, M.A., and D. J. VAUGHAN, M.A. 18mo. 4*s.* 6*d.*

EUTHYPHRO, APOLOGY, CRITO, AND PHÆDO. Translated by F. J. CHURCH. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.*

(See also Classical Series.)

Plautus.—THE MOSTELLARIA OF PLAUTUS. With Notes, Prolegomena, and Excursus. By WILLIAM RAMSAY, M.A., formerly Professor of Humanity in the University of Glasgow. Edited by Professor GEORGE G. RAMSAY, M.A., of the University of Glasgow. 8vo. 14*s.*

(See also Classical Series.)

Sallust.—CATILINE AND JUGURTHA. Translated, with Introductory Essays, by A. W. POLLARD, B.A. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

(See also Classical Series.)

Studia Scenica.—Part I., Section I. Introductory Study on the Text of the Greek Dramas. The Text of SOPHOCLES' TRACHINIAE, 1–300. By DAVID S. MARGOLIOUTH, Fellow of New College, Oxford. Demy 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Tacitus.—THE ANNALS. Edited, with Introductions and Notes, by G. O. HOLBROOKE, M.A., Professor of Latin in Trinity College, Hartford, U.S.A. With Maps. 8vo. 16*s.*

Tacitus (continued)—

THE ANNALS. Translated by A. J. CHURCH, M.A., Professor of Latin in the University of London, and W. J. BRODRIBB, M.A. With Notes and Maps. New Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE HISTORY. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Rev. WALTER SHORT, M.A., and Rev. W. A. SPOONER, M.A. Fellows of New College, Oxford. 8vo. [In preparation.

THE HISTORY. Translated by A. J. CHURCH, M.A., Professor of Latin in the University of London, and W. J. BRODRIBB, M.A. With Notes and a Map. New Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE AGRICOLA AND GERMANY, WITH THE DIALOGUE ON ORATORY. Translated by A. J. CHURCH, M.A., and W. J. BRODRIBB, M.A. With Notes and Maps. New and Revised Edition. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF TACITUS. By A. J. CHURCH, M.A. and W. J. BRODRIBB, M.A. Fcap. 8vo. 18mo. 1s. 6d. (Classical Writers Series.)

Theocritus, Bion, and Moschus. Rendered into English Prose with Introductory Essay by ANDREW LANG, M.A. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Virgil.—THE WORKS OF VIRGIL RENDERED INTO ENGLISH PROSE, with Notes, Introductions, Running Analysis, and an Index, by JAMES LONSDALE, M.A., and SAMUEL LEE, M.A. New Edition. Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE ÆNEID. Translated by J. W. MACKAIL, M.A., Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. [In the press.

GRAMMAR, COMPOSITION, & PHILOLOGY.

Belcher.—SHORT EXERCISES IN LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION AND EXAMINATION PAPERS IN LATIN GRAMMAR, to which is prefixed a Chapter on Analysis of Sentences. By the Rev. H. BELCHER, M.A., Assistant-Master in King's College School, London. New Edition. 18mo. 1s. 6d.

KEY TO THE ABOVE (for Teachers only). 2s. 6d.

SHORT EXERCISES IN LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION Part II., On the Syntax of Sentences, with an Appendix, including EXERCISES IN LATIN IDIOMS, &c. 18mo. 2s.

KEY TO THE ABOVE (for Teachers only). 3s.

Blackie.—GREEK AND ENGLISH DIALOGUES FOR USE IN SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES. By JOHN STUART BLACKIE, Emeritus Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh. New Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

Bryans.—EXERCISES IN LATIN PROSE FOUNDED UPON CÆSAR. By C. W. BRYANS, M.A., Assistant-Master in Dulwich College. Globe 8vo. [In preparation.

Eicke.—FIRST LESSONS IN LATIN. By K. M. EICKE, B.A., Assistant-Master in the Grammar School, Oundle. Globe 8vo. [In the press.

Ellis.—PRACTICAL HINTS ON THE QUANTITATIVE PRONUNCIATION OF LATIN, for the use of Classical Teachers and Linguists. By A. J. ELLIS, B.A., F.R.S. Extra fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

England.—EXERCISES ON LATIN SYNTAX AND IDIOM, ARRANGED WITH REFERENCE TO ROBY'S SCHOOL LATIN GRAMMAR. By E. B. ENGLAND, M.A., Assistant Lecturer at the Owens College, Manchester. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. Key for Teachers only, 2s. 6d.

Goodwin.—Works by W. W. GOODWIN, LL.D., Professor of Greek in Harvard University, U.S.A.

SYNTAX OF THE MOODS AND TENSES OF THE GREEK VERB. New Edition, revised. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

A GREEK GRAMMAR. New Edition, revised. Crown 8vo. 6s. "It is the best Greek Grammar of its size in the English language."—ATHENÆUM.

A GREEK GRAMMAR FOR SCHOOLS. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Greenwood.—THE ELEMENTS OF GREEK GRAMMAR, including Accidence, Irregular Verbs, and Principles of Derivation and Composition; adapted to the System of Crude Forms. By J. G. GREENWOOD, Principal of Owens College, Manchester. New Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s. 6d.

Hodgson.—MYTHOLOGY FOR LATIN VERSIFICATION. A brief Sketch of the Fables of the Ancients, prepared to be rendered into Latin Verse for Schools. By F. HODGSON, B.D., late Provost of Eton. New Edition, revised by F. C. HODGSON, M.A. 18mo. 3s.

Jackson.—FIRST STEPS TO GREEK PROSE COMPOSITION. By BLOMFIELD JACKSON, M.A., Assistant-Master in King's College School, London. New Edition, revised and enlarged. 18mo. 1s. 6d.

KEY TO FIRST STEPS (for Teachers only). 18mo. 3s. 6d.

Jackson (continued)—

SECOND STEPS TO GREEK PROSE COMPOSITION, with Miscellaneous Idioms, Aids to Accentuation, and Examination Papers in Greek Scholarship. 18mo. 2s. 6d.

KEY TO SECOND STEPS (for Teachers only). 18mo. 3s. 6d.

Kynaston.—EXERCISES IN THE COMPOSITION OF GREEK IAMBIC VERSE by Translations from English Dramatists. By Rev. H. KYNASTON, M.A., Principal of Cheltenham College. With Introduction, Vocabulary, &c. Extra fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

KEY TO THE SAME (for Teachers only). Extra fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Macmillan.—FIRST LATIN GRAMMAR. By M. C. MACMILLAN, M.A., late Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge; sometime Assistant-Master in St. Paul's School. New Edition, enlarged. 18mo. 1s. 6d. A SHORT SYNTAX is in preparation to follow the ACCIDENCE.

Macmillan's Progressive Latin Course. By A. M. COOK, M.A., Assistant Master at St. Paul's School. [In the press.

Marshall.—A TABLE OF IRREGULAR GREEK VERBS, classified according to the arrangement of Curtius's Greek Grammar. By J. M. MARSHALL, M.A., one of the Masters in Clifton College. 8vo, cloth. New Edition. 1s.

Mayor (John E. B.)—FIRST GREEK READER. Edited after KARL HALM, with Corrections and large Additions by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. New Edition, revised. Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Mayor (Joseph B.)—GREEK FOR BEGINNERS. By the Rev. J. B. MAYOR, M.A., Professor of Classical Literature in King's College, London. Part I., with Vocabulary, 1s. 6d. Parts II. and III., with Vocabulary and Index, 3s. 6d. Complete in one Vol. fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Nixon.—PARALLEL EXTRACTS arranged for translation into English and Latin, with Notes on Idioms. By J. E. NIXON, M.A., Fellow and Classical Lecturer, King's College, Cambridge. Part I.—Historical and Epistolary. New edition, revised and enlarged. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Peile.—A PRIMER OF PHILOLOGY. By J. PEILE, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Christ's College, Cambridge. 18mo. 1s.

Postgate and Vince.—A DICTIONARY OF LATIN ETYMOLOGY. By J. P. POSTGATE, M.A., and C. A. VINCE, M.A. [In preparation.

Potts (A. W.)—Works by ALEXANDER W. POTTS, M.A., LL.D., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge; Head-Master of the Fettes College, Edinburgh.

HINTS TOWARDS LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION. New Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 3*s.*

PASSAGES FOR TRANSLATION INTO LATIN PROSE. Edited with Notes and References to the above. New Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

LATIN VERSIONS OF PASSAGES FOR TRANSLATION INTO LATIN PROSE (for Teachers only). 2*s.* 6*d.*

Reid.—A GRAMMAR OF TACITUS. By J. S. REID, M.A., Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge. [In preparation.

A GRAMMAR OF VERGIL. By the same Author. [In preparation.

* * Similar Grammars to other Classical Authors will probably follow.

Roby.—A GRAMMAR OF THE LATIN LANGUAGE, from Plautus to Suetonius. By H. J. ROBY, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. In Two Parts. Third Edition. Part I. containing:—Book I. Sounds. Book II. Inflexions. Book III. Word-formation. Appendices. Crown 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.* Part II. Syntax, Prepositions, &c. Crown 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

"Marked by the clear and practised insight of a master in his art. A book that would do honour to any country."—ATHENÆUM.

SCHOOL LATIN GRAMMAR. By the same Author. Crown 8vo. 5*s.*

Rush.—SYNTHETIC LATIN DELECTUS. A First Latin Construing Book arranged on the Principles of Grammatical Analysis. With Notes and Vocabulary. By E. RUSH, B.A. With Preface by the Rev. W. F. MOULTON, M.A., D.D. New and Enlarged Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Rust.—FIRST STEPS TO LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION. By the Rev. G. RUST, M.A., of Pembroke College, Oxford, Master of the Lower School, King's College, London. New Edition. 18mo. 1*s.* 6*d.*

Rutherford.—Works by the Rev. W. GUNION RUTHERFORD, M.A., LL.D., Head-Master of Westminster School.

A FIRST GREEK GRAMMAR. New Edition, enlarged. Extra fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.*

THE NEW PHRYNICHUS; being a Revised Text of the Ecloga of the Grammarian Phrynichus. With Introduction and Commentary. 8vo. 18*s.*

Simpson.—LATIN PROSE AFTER THE BEST AUTHORS. By F. P. SIMPSON, B.A., late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford.

I. CÆSAR. Extra fcap. 8vo. [In the press.

Thring.—Works by the Rev. E. THRING, M.A., Head-Master of Uppingham School.

A LATIN GRADUAL. A First Latin Construing Book for Beginners. New Edition, enlarged, with Coloured Sentence Maps. Fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

A MANUAL OF MOOD CONSTRUCTIONS. Fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.*

White.—FIRST LESSONS IN GREEK. Adapted to GOODWIN'S GREEK GRAMMAR, and designed as an introduction to the ANABASIS OF XENOPHON. By JOHN WILLIAMS WHITE, Ph.D., Assistant-Professor of Greek in Harvard University. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.*

Wright.—Works by J. WRIGHT, M.A., late Head Master of Sutton Coldfield School.

A HELP TO LATIN GRAMMAR; or, The Form and Use of Words in Latin, with Progressive Exercises. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.*

THE SEVEN KINGS OF ROME. An Easy Narrative, abridged from the First Book of Livy by the omission of Difficult Passages; being a First Latin Reading Book, with Grammatical Notes and Vocabulary. New and revised Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

FIRST LATIN STEPS; OR, AN INTRODUCTION BY A SERIES OF EXAMPLES TO THE STUDY OF THE LATIN LANGUAGE. Crown 8vo. 3*s.*

ATTIC PRIMER. Arranged for the Use of Beginners. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

A COMPLETE LATIN COURSE, comprising Rules with Examples, Exercises, both Latin and English, on each Rule and Vocabularies. Crown 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Wright (H. C.)—EXERCISES ON THE LATIN SYNTAX. By H. C. WRIGHT, B.A., Assistant-Master at Haileybury College. 18mo. [In preparation.

ANTIQUITIES, ANCIENT HISTORY, AND PHILOSOPHY.

Arnold.—Works by W. T. ARNOLD, B.A.

A HANDBOOK OF LATIN EPIGRAPHY. [In preparation.

THE ROMAN SYSTEM OF PROVINCIAL ADMINISTRATION TO THE ACCESSION OF CONSTANTINE THE GREAT. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

Beesly.—STORIES FROM THE HISTORY OF ROME. By Mrs. BEESLEY. Fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Bryce.—THE HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE. By JAMES BRYCE, D.C.L., Fellow of Oriel College, and Regius Professor of Civil Law in the University of Oxford. Seventh Edition. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

Classical Writers.—Edited by JOHN RICHARD GREEN, M.A. LL.D. Fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.* each.

EURIPIDES. By Professor MAHAFFY.
MILTON. By the Rev. STOPFORD A. BROOKE, M.A.
LIVY. By the Rev. W. W. CAPES, M.A.
VIRGIL. By Professor NETTLESHIP, M.A.
SOPHOCLES. By Professor L. CAMPBELL, M.A.
DEMOSTHENES. By Professor S. H. BUTCHER, M.A.
TACITUS. By Professor A. J. CHURCH, M.A., and W. J. BRODRIBB, M.A.

Freeman.—HISTORY OF ROME. By EDWARD A. FREEMAN, D.C.L., LL.D., Hon. Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford. (Historical Course for Schools.) 18mo. [In preparation.

Fyffe.—A SCHOOL HISTORY OF GREECE. By C. A. FYFFE, M.A., late Fellow of University College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. [In preparation.

Geddes.—THE PROBLEM OF THE HOMERIC POEMS. By W. D. GEDDES, Professor of Greek in the University of Aberdeen. 8vo. 14*s.*

Gladstone.—Works by the Rt. Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P.

THE TIME AND PLACE OF HOMER. Crown 8vo. 6*s.* 6*d.*
A PRIMER OF HOMER. 18mo. 1*s.*

Goodwin.—A TEXT-BOOK OF GREEK PHILOSOPHY, based on RITTER and PRELLER'S "Historia Philosophiae Graecae et Romanae." By ALFRED GOODWIN, M.A., Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford, and Professor of Greek in University College, London. 8vo. [In preparation.

Jackson.—A MANUAL OF GREEK PHILOSOPHY. By HENRY JACKSON, M.A., Fellow and Prælector in Ancient Philosophy, Trinity College, Cambridge. [In preparation.

Jebb.—Works by R. C. JEBB, M.A., Professor of Greek in the University of Glasgow.

THE ATTIC ORATORS FROM ANTIPHON TO ISAEOS. 2 vols. 8vo. 25*s.*

SELECTIONS FROM THE ATTIC ORATORS, ANTIPHON, ANDOKIDES, LYSIAS, ISOKRATES, AND ISÆOS. Edited, with Notes. Being a companion volume to the preceding work. 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

A PRIMER OF GREEK LITERATURE. 18mo. 1*s.*

Kiepert.—MANUAL OF ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY, Translated from the German of Dr. HEINRICH KIEPERT. Crown 8vo. 5*s.*

Mahaffy.—Works by J. P. MAHAFFY, M.A., Professor of Ancient History in Trinity College, Dublin, and Hon. Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford.

SOCIAL LIFE IN GREECE; from Homer to Menander. Fourth Edition, revised and enlarged. Crown 8vo. 9*s.*

RAMBLES AND STUDIES IN GREECE. With Illustrations. Second Edition. With Map. Crown 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

A PRIMER OF GREEK ANTIQUITIES. With Illustrations. 18mo. 1*s.*

EURIPIDES. 18mo. 1*s.* 6*d.* (Classical Writers Series.)

Mayor (J. E. B.)—BIBLIOGRAPHICAL CLUE TO LATIN LITERATURE. Edited after HÜBNER, with large Additions by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR. Crown 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

Ramsay.—A SCHOOL HISTORY OF ROME. By G. G. RAMSAY, M.A., Professor of Humanity in the University of Glasgow. With Maps. Crown 8vo. [In preparation.

Wilkins.—A PRIMER OF ROMAN ANTIQUITIES. By Professor WILKINS. Illustrated. 18mo. 1*s.*

MODERN LANGUAGES.

ENGLISH.

Abbott.—A SHAKESPEARIAN GRAMMAR. An attempt to illustrate some of the Differences between Elizabethan and Modern English. By the Rev. E. A. ABBOTT, D.D., Head Master of the City of London School. New Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 6*s.*

Brooke.—PRIMER OF ENGLISH LITERATURE. By the Rev. STOPFORD A. BROOKE, M.A. 18mo. 1*s.*

Morris.—Works by the Rev. R. MORRIS, LL.D.

HISTORICAL OUTLINES OF ENGLISH ACCIDENCE, comprising Chapters on the History and Development of the Language, and on Word-formation. Extra fcap. 8vo. 6*s.*

ELEMENTARY LESSONS IN HISTORICAL ENGLISH GRAMMAR, containing Accidence and Word-formation. New Edition. 18mo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

PRIMER OF ENGLISH GRAMMAR. 18mo. 1*s.* (See also Literature Primers.)

Oliphant.—THE OLD AND MIDDLE ENGLISH. A New Edition of "THE SOURCES OF STANDARD ENGLISH," revised and greatly enlarged. By T. L. KINGTON OLIPHANT. Extra fcap. 8vo. 9*s.*

Taylor.—WORDS AND PLACES; or, Etymological Illustrations of History, Ethnology, and Geography. By the Rev. ISAAC TAYLOR, M.A. Third and Cheaper Edition, revised and compressed. With Maps. Globe 8vo. 6*s.*

Trench (Archbishop).—Works by R. C. TRENCH, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin.

HOUSEHOLD BOOK OF ENGLISH POETRY, Selected and Arranged, with Notes. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 5*s.* 6*d.*

ON THE STUDY OF WORDS. Seventeenth Edition, revised. Fcap. 8vo. 5*s.*

ENGLISH, PAST AND PRESENT. Eleventh Edition, revised and improved. Fcap. 8vo. 5*s.*

A SELECT GLOSSARY OF ENGLISH WORDS, used formerly in Senses Different from their Present. Fifth Edition, revised and enlarged. Fcap. 8vo. 5*s.*

FRENCH.

Bowen.—FIRST LESSONS IN FRENCH. By H. COURTHOPE BOWEN, M.A., Principal of the Finsbury Training College for Higher and Middle Schools. Extra fcap. 8vo. 1*s.*

Fasnacht.—A SYNTHETIC FRENCH GRAMMAR FOR SCHOOLS. By G. E. FASNACHT. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

Macmillan's Progressive French Course.—By G. EUGÈNE FASNACHT, Assistant-Master in Westminster School.

I.—FIRST YEAR. Extra fcap. 8vo. 1*s.*

II.—SECOND YEAR. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2*s.*

III.—THIRD YEAR. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE TEACHER'S COMPANION TO MACMILLAN'S PROGRESSIVE FRENCH COURSE. Third Year. With Copious Notes, Hints for Different Renderings, Synonyms, Philological Remarks, &c. By G. E. FASNACHT. Globe 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.*

Macmillan's Progressive French Readers.—By G. EUGÈNE FASNACHT, Assistant-Master in Westminster School.

I.—FIRST YEAR. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

II.—SECOND YEAR. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Masson (Gustave).—A COMPENDIOUS DICTIONARY OF THE FRENCH LANGUAGE (French-English and English-French). Adapted from the Dictionaries of Professor ALFRED ELWALL. Followed by a List of the Principal Diverging Derivations, and preceded by Chronological and Historical Tables. By GUSTAVE MASSON, Assistant-Master and Librarian, Harrow School. New Edition. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

GERMAN.

Macmillan's Progressive German Course.—By G. EUGÈNE FASNACHT, Assistant-Master in Westminster School.

Part I.—FIRST YEAR. Extra fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.*

Part II.—SECOND YEAR. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2*s.*

 Keys to the French and German Courses are in preparation.

Macmillan's Progressive German Readers.—By G. EUGÈNE FASNACHT. [In preparation.

Whitney.—Works by W. D. WHITNEY, Professor of Sanskrit and Instructor in Modern Languages in Yale College.

A COMPENDIOUS GERMAN GRAMMAR. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.*

A GERMAN READER IN PROSE AND VERSE. With Notes and Vocabulary. Crown 8vo. 5*s.*

Whitney and Edgren.—A COMPENDIOUS GERMAN AND ENGLISH DICTIONARY, with Notation of Correspondences and Brief Etymologies. By Professor W. D. WHITNEY, assisted by A. H. EDGREN. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

THE GERMAN-ENGLISH PART, separately, 5*s.*

Macmillan's Foreign School Classics.—Edited by G. EUGÈNE FASNACHT, Assistant-Master in Westminster School. 18mo.

FRENCH.

Corneille.—LE CID. Edited by C. E. FASNACHT. 1*s.*

Dumas.—LES DEMOISELLES DE ST. CYR. Edited by VICTOR OGER, Lecturer in Univ. Coll., Liverpool. [In preparation.

Molière.—LES FEMMES SAVANTES. By G. E. FASNACHT. 1*s.*

Molière.—LE MISANTHROPE. By the same Editor. 1*s.*

Molière.—LE MÉDECIN MALGRÉ LUI. By the same. 1*s.*

Molière.—L'AVARE. Edited by L. M. MORIARTY, B.A. 1*s.*

Molière.—LE BOURGEOIS GENTILHOMME. By the same Editor. [Immediately.

Racine.—BRITTANICUS. Edited by EUGÈNE PELLISSIER. [In preparation.

Scenes in Roman History. SELECTED FROM FRENCH HISTORIANS. Edited by C COLBECK, M.A. [In preparation.

Sand, George.—LA MARE AU DIABLE. Edited by W. E. RUSSELL, M.A., Assistant-Master in Haileybury College. 1*s.*

Sandeau, Jules.—MADEMOISELLE DE LA SEIGLIÈRE. Edited by H. C. STEEL. [In the press.

Voltaire.—CHARLES XII. Edited by G. E. FASNACHT. [In the press.

 Other volumes to follow.

GERMAN.

Goethe.—GÖTZ VON BERLICHINGEN. Edited by H. A. BULL, M.A., Assistant-Master at Wellington College. 2*s.*

Goethe.—FAUST. PART I. Edited by JANE LEE, Lecturer in Modern Languages at Newnham College, Cambridge. [In prep.

Heine.—SELECTIONS FROM THE REISEBILDER AND OTHER PROSE WORKS. Edited by C. COLBECK, M.A. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Schiller.—DIE JUNGFRAU VON ORLEANS. Edited by JOSEPH GOSTWICK. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Schiller.—MARIA STUART. Edited by C. SHELDON, M.A. D.Lit., Senior Modern Language Master in Clifton College. 2*s.* 6.

Schiller.—WILHELM TELL. Edited by G. E. FASNACHT. [In preparation.

Uhland.—SELECT BALLADS. Adapted as a First Easy Reading Book for Beginners. Edited by G. E. FASNACHT. 1*s.*

 Other Volumes to follow.

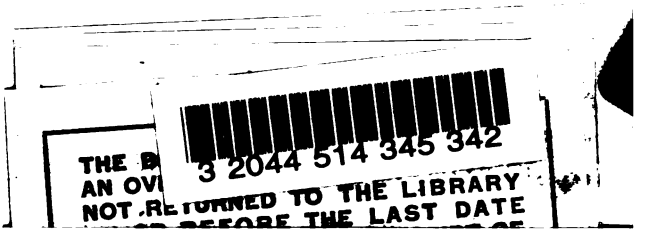
MACMILLAN AND CO., LONDON.

LONDON: R. CLAY, SONS, AND TAYLOR, PRINTERS.



The borrower must return this item on or before the last date stamped below. If another user places a recall for this item, the borrower will be notified of the need for an earlier return.

Non-receipt of overdue notices does not exempt the borrower from overdue fines.

Harvard College Widener Library
Cambridge, MA 02138 617-495-2413

WIDENER
WIDENER
NOV 14 2000
NOV 21 2000
BOOKLINE
CANCELLED

Thar e. lib eserve
ard.